Kodály, Zoltán (b Kecskemét, 1882; d Budapest, 1967). Hung. composer and teacher. He was born and had his early education in Galánta. His father, a state railways employee, played the vn., his mother the pf., and he grew up in a mus. atmosphere. He attended the Nagyszombat Gymnasium 1892--1900, during which period his first orch. work was played by the school orch. In 1900 he entered Budapest Univ. and the Franz Liszt Acad. of Mus., where his teacher was János Koessler, who also taught Bartók and Doh- nányi. He met Bartók after his graduation, in 1905, and embarked on his first foray as a folk-song collector in Galánta. In 1906 his symphonic poem, Summer Evening, had its f.p. Kodály continued his folk-song collecting between 1907 and 1914. Although he was insistent on folk mus. as a basis of nat.culture, he had a wider view of the mus. scene and travelled to Bayreuth, Salzburg, Berlin, and Paris. He taught theory at the Liszt Acad. in 1907, and took over the comp. classes from Koessler in 1908 (prof. from 1911). From that time, too, he was closely involved with the mus. curriculum in Hung. schs., and with Bartók he formed an organization for the perf. of contemporary mus. Alongside these activities he produced a steady flow of comps. In 1923, for the 50th anniversary of the unification of Buda and Pest as the capital, he comp. Psalmus Hungaricus, which was soon perf. throughout Europe and America under leading cond.s. such as Toscanini, Mengelberg, and Furtwängler. In 1926 he completed his opera Háry János, firmly rooted in folklore. Another opera, The Spinning Room, followed in 1932, and the orch. Dances of Galánta in 1933. In the same year Kodály and Bartók were requested by the Hung. Acad. of Sciences to prepare for publication all available folk mus. material. After Bartók went to the USA, Kodály took over sole editorial control. The first vol. appeared in 1951. Two important commissions were for the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orch.'s 50th anniv., 1939 (Variations on a Hungarian Folk Song, The Peacock) and the 50th anniv. of the Chicago S.O., 1941 (Concerto for Orchestra). These were in contrast to the dozens of works for children's vv. which occupied him for the last 30 years of his life. He retired from the Liszt Acad. in 1942. After World War II he travelled to Fr., Eng., the USA, and USSR to cond. his own works. A 3rd opera, Czinka Panna, was prod. in 1948. His sym., in memory of Toscanini, was prod. at Lucerne in 1961. He visited the USA again in 1965 and 1966. Kodály's mus. is not as advanced in its harmonic idiom as Bartók's and is less cosmopolitan. But it has the merits of complete conviction, finished craftsmanship, and melodic inspiration. Prin. works are:

orch: Summer Evening (1906, rev. 1929--30); Suite, Háry János (1927); Dances of Marosszék (1930, arr. of work for pf. 1927); Dances of Galánta (1933); Variations on a Hungarian Folk Song, The Peacock (1938--9); Concerto for Orchestra (1939--40); Sym. (1930s--61).

His chamber mus., neo-classical in style, was played at Donaueschingen and Nuremberg, and his scenic cantata Zwingburg, to a text by Franz Werfel, was prod. in Berlin, 1924, under Kleiber. In 1925--7 he was ass. to Paul Bekker as gen. man. of opera at Kassel and Wiesbaden. In 1926 he completed his opera Jonny spielt auf (Johnny strikes up), using jazz idiom. After rejection by several Ger. opera houses, it was staged in Leipzig in 1927 and was a sensational success, being perf. in over 100 cities and trans. into 20 languages. It made Křenek's name and fortune. He returned to Vienna in 1928 and made extensive study of 12-note technique, later writing for Frankfurter Zeitung 1930--3. During this time he wrote an elaborate opera, Karl V, using the 12-note method. In some later works he employed a free atonal technique and also applied a 'principle of rotation', in which serial variants are formed through the systematic exchange of the pitches of a given series with their adjacent pitches. He also used elec. procedures and later returned to a more lyrical style. He emigrated to USA in 1938, becoming prof. of mus. at Vassar Coll. 1939--42 and at Hamline Univ., St Paul, 1942--7. In 1948 he settled near Los Angeles, devoting his time to comp., lecture-tours, etc. After 1945 he preferred his name to bespelt simply as Krenek. Prin. works:

Leise (Ger.). Soft, gentle, as in Leise, leise, Agathe's aria in Act 2 of Weber's Der Freischütz. Leiser, softer.

Leitmotiv (Leading motive). A term (often misspelt leitmotif) invented (1871) by F. W. Jähns, the expert on Weber, to describe a short constantly recurring mus. phrase or theme used to denote a person, thing, or abstract idea. 'Representative theme' is a good Eng. alternative. Composers throughout history have used the device in one form or another, e.g. Gluck and Mozart, Weber in Der Freischütz, Mendelssohn, Berlioz (the idée fixe in the Symphonie Fantastique), but it was raised to its highest and most complex form by Wagner, especially in Der Ring des Nibelungen, where the subtle combinations of leitmotiv create symphonic textures. Wagner used the term Hauptmotiv in 1867, but leitmotiv has become generally accepted. R. Strauss also developed a leitmotiv system in his operas.

Liebestod (Ger.). Love-death. Title generally applied to Isolde's final aria at end of Act III of Wagner's Tristan und Isolde (or to orch. arr. of it, often played as concert-piece with the Prelude to Act 1). Wagner applied the term to the love duet in Act II.

Liebesträume (Love-dreams). 3 nocturnes for pf. (c.1850) by Liszt, the 3rd in Ab being the best-known. They are transcrs. of his songs Hohe Liebe (c.1849), Gestorben war ich (c.1849), and O Liebe, so lang du lieben kannst. (c.1845).

Liebesverbot, Das (The Ban on Love). Opera in 2 acts by Wagner to his own lib. based on Shakespeare's Measure for Measure (1604--5). Comp. 1835--6. Prod. Magdeburg 1836, London 1965.

Lieblich Gedackt (from Ger. Lieblich, 'lovely'). Org. stop, same as Gedackt.

Lied, Lieder (Ger.). Song, songs. Lieder have existed since before 1400, but they are principally associated in the public mind with a distinctive type of Ger. solo vocal comp. that came into being as an outcome of the Romantic movement of the late 18th and early 19th cents. In this type the quality of the verse selected is very important. The treatment of the poem may be either 'verse-repeating' (strophic) or 'through-composed' (durchkomponiert) (i.e. either the same for every stanza or different for each), according to the lyrical or dramatic demands of the poem. The pf. part (simple or highly elaborate) is more than a mere acc. and, as much as the vocal part, demands artistic interpretation. Some great names in the history of the Lied are Schubert, J. Loewe, Schumann, Franz, Brahms, Wolf, Mahler, and Strauss. Certain poets occur frequently in these composers' Lieder, e.g. Goethe, Dehmel, Eichendorff, Heine, Hesse, Liliencron, Mayrhofer, Mörike, Rilke, Rückert, Schack, Schiller, Trakl, Tieck. A Lieder recital should correctly contain only Ger. songs. A succinct appreciation of singing Lieder has been made by Peter Stadlen: 'The elusive art of suggesting the dramatic content of a text by other than operatic means.' Liederzyklus (Ger.). Song-cycle.

Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen (Songs of a wayfaring man). Song-cycle of 4 songs by Mahler to his own poems (based on, or imitative of, Des Knaben Wunderhorn) for bar. or mez. and pf. or orch. The movements are: 1. Wenn mein Schatz Hochzeit macht (When my sweetheart has her wedding); 2. Ging heut' Morgen übers Feld (I walked this morning through the fields); 3. Ich hab' ein glühend Messer (I have a gleaming knife); 4. Die zwei blauen Augen (Her two blue eyes). Comp. 1884, later rev. F.p. Berlin 1896. Thematically linked to 1st Sym.

Liederkranz (Ger.). Song-wreath, i.e. Song-cycle.

Liederkreis (Ger.). General term for song-cycle; used specifically by Schumann for 2 sets of songs, his 9 Heine settings, Op 24, and his 12 Eichendorff settings, Op. 39, both 1840. Term first used by Beethoven to describe An die ferne Geliebte.

Liedertafel (plural Liedertafeln) (Ger.). Song table. Name given to Ger. male-v. singing socs. which flourished in the nationalistic climate of the early 19th cent. Originally convivial occasions at which the members sat round a table with refreshments, but the aims later became more artistic. Particularly assoc. with expatriates.

Lied ohne Worte (Ger.; Fr. Chanson sans paroles). Song without words. Term introduced by Mendelssohn to describe pf. solo in which song-like melody progresses against acc. Pubd. in 8 books each containing 6 pieces: Book 1, Op. 19, 1829--30; Book 2, Op. 30, 1835; Book 3, Op. 38, 1837; Book 4, Op. 53, 1841; Book 5, Op. 62, Book 6, Op. 67, 1843--5; Book 7, Op. 85, 1842; Book 8, Op. 102, 1842--5. Most of the titles given to these pieces were not Mendelssohn's, but the 3 Venetian Gondola Songs were. He also wrote a Lied ohne Worte for vc. and pf., Op. 109.

Lied von der Erde, Das (The Song of the Earth). Sym. for cont. (or bar.), ten., and orch. by Mahler, being settings of 6 Ger. versions by Hans Bethge (with additions by Mahler) of 8th-cent. Chinese poems. The movements are: 1. Das Trinklied vom Jammer der Erde (Drinking-Song of Earth's Sorrow); 2. Der Einsame im Herbst (The Lonely One in Autumn); 3. Von der Jugend (Of Youth); 4. Von der Schönheit (Of Beauty); 5. Der Trunkene im Frühling (The Drunkard in Spring); 6. Der Abschied (The Farewell). Comp. 1907--09. F.p. Munich 1911, London 1914, Philadelphia 1916.

Lieutenant Kijé. 5-movement symphonic suite for orch., Op. 60, by Prokofiev, derived frommuss. he wrote for film of same name. Comp. 1934; suite f.p. Paris 1937.

Life for the Tsar, A. Opera in 4 acts and epilogue by Glinka to lib. by Baron Georgy Rosen on subjectsuggested by poet Zhukovsky. Prod. St Petersburg 1836, London 1887. Prague prod. of 1866 was first perf. of Russ. opera abroad. Orig. title was Ivan Susanin, the peasant who, by misleading Polish troops in 1613, saved life of Tsar Mikhail, founder of Romanov dynasty, at sacrifice of his own. During rehearsals Tsar Nicholas I visited Bolshoy Th., with result that the opera was ded. to him and its title changed. After 1917 revolution, subject was embarrassing to régime and various attempts to adapt mus.to new subjects were made. In 1939 S. M. Gorodetsky re-wrote Rosen's lib., re-focusing interest on leaders of uprising against Poles and restoring orig. title.

Life's Dance. Tone-poem for orch. by Delius, after Hilge Rode's play Dansen Gaar. 1st version 1899 as La Ronde se déroule (The Dance goes on), rev. 1901 as Life's Dance, final rev. for publication 1912. F.p. of orig., London 1899; 1st rev. Düsseldorf 1904 cond. Buths, final version Berlin 1912 cond. Fried.

Ligature. (1) The sign which in early notation (13th--16th cent.) combines several notes into one symbol: [ol39] [xn^(2)] Theslur which in modern notation of vocal mus. shows that the 2 or more notes it affects are to be fitted to the same syllable, or, in instr. mus., that the notes are to be phrased together. (3) The tie or bind (see Tie)---a use of the word better avoided as unnecessary and confusing. (4) The adjustable metal band which in instr. of the cl. family secures the reed to the mouthpiece. Some clarinettists use string ligature. See Curved Line, Various uses of.

Ligendza, Caterina (b Stockholm, 1937). Swed. sop. Studied Vienna, Stuttgart, and Berlin (with Greindl). Opera début Linz 1963 (Countess in Figaro). Brunswick Opera 1964--5. Ligeti, György (b Dicsöszentmáron, 1923). Hung. composer. Studied Kolozsvár Cons., 1941--3, with Farkas and after the war at Budapest Acad. with Farkas and Veress, teaching there from 1950. Left Hungary 1956, going to work first at Cologne elec. studio, then settling in Austria. Though elec. stimulated his urge to compose, since 1958 he has written only for 'live' performers. His orch. writing uses precisely calculated textures and dense (but not thick) scoring, deriving ultimately from Webern (Ligeti's term is 'micropolyphony'). Prin. works:

small orch: Fragment for 11 instr. (1961); Adventures for 3 singers and 7 instr. (1962); Nouvelles Aventures, 3 singers, 7 instr. (1962--5); Ramifications, for str., or 12 solo str. (1968--9); Chamber Conc., for 13 instr. (1969--70).

chamber music: 10 Pieces for wind quintet (1968); Str. Qt. No. 1 (Metamorphoses nocturnes) (1953--4), No. 2 (1968); 6 Miniatures for 10 wind instr. (1953, scored 1975 by F. Wanek); hn. trio (Hommage à Brahms) (1983).

miscellaneous: Artikulation, for tape (1958); Poème symphonique for 100 metronomes (1962); Continuum for hpd. (1968); Horizont, for recorder (1971).

Light. Adjective applied somewhat patronizingly and vaguely to mus. which is supposed to need less concentration than 'serious music' (another objectionable term). Thus there are also 'light' orchs. and 'light' opera. 'Light' mus. can refer to Elgar's shorter pieces or to works by composers such as Ronald Binge. 'Light opera' probably means Merrie England rather than The Merry Widow, but such classification is imprecise and unhelpful.

Light Cavalry (Leichte Cavallerie). Operetta by Suppé, in 2 acts, lib. by C. Costa; prod. Vienna 1866. Ov. exceedingly popular.

Lighthouse, The. Chamber-opera in 1 act by Maxwell Davies to his own lib. Comp. 1979. Based on actual event in 1900 when the 3 keepers of the Flannan lighthouse in the Outer Hebrides unaccountably disappeared. F.p. Edinburgh 1980. London 1981, Boston 1983.

Light of Life, The (Lux Christi). Oratorio, Op. 29, for SATB soloists, ch., and orch. by Elgar to text by E. Capel-Cure. F.p. Worcester 1896.

Lights Out. (1) Song-cycle of 6 songs, settings of poems by Edward Thomas (1878--1917) by Ivor Gurney, comp. 1918--25, for v. and pf. (2) 4 poems of Edward Thomas for bar. and pf. by R. Holloway, Op. 24, 1974.

Lilac Time (Berté). See Blossom Time.

Lilburn, Douglas (Gordon) (b Wanganui, N.Z., 1915). N.Z. composer. Studied RCM with Vaughan Williams (Cobbett Prize 1939). Prof. of mus., Victoria Univ. Coll., Wellington, N.Z. and dir. of its elec. mus studio. Comps. incl. 3 syms. and other orch. works, str. qts., vn. sonatas, str. trio, pf. sonata, cl. sonata, song-cycles, film mus.

Lilliburlero. Tune of unknown origin, first appeared in print in 1686 in a book of 'lessons' for the recorder or fl., where it is styled 'Quickstep'. In the following year it achieved popularity set to satirical verses (with the mock Irish word 'Lilliburlero' as a refrain) referring to the appointment to the Lord-Lieutenancy of Ireland of General Talbot, newly-created Earl of Tyrconnel, whose name is mentioned several times. It has remained a song of the Orange party to the present day, set to different words as 'Protestant Boys'. In Purcell's Musick's Handmaid, it appears under the title 'A New Irish Tune' as a hpd. piece: Purcell also used it as a ground bass in mus. for the play The Gordian Knot unty'd (1691).

Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. Arts centre in NY with following constituents: Metropolitan Opera House, Philharmonic Hall, Juilliard Sch., State Th. (headquarters of NY City Opera and City Ballet), Repertory Th., Film Soc., and Chamber Mus. Soc. First building to open was Philharmonic Hall, home of NY P.O. in place of Carnegie Hall, 1962. State Th. opened 1964, new Met. 1966, and Juilliard Sch. 1969.

Lincoln Portrait, A. Work for speaker and orch. by Copland, comp. 1942. Spoken words are taken from the speeches of Abraham Lincoln.

Lincoln, the Great Commoner. Song by Ives to words by Edwin Markham, for ch. and orch. 1912, for v. and pf. 1914.

Lindholm, Berit (b Stockholm, 1934). Swedish soprano. At Stockholm Opera Sch. 1961--3. Début Stockholm 1963 as Countess in Figaro. CG début 1966 as Chrysothemis in Strauss's Elektra. Sang Brünnhilde at Bayreuth, CG, and with Scottish Opera (1971).

Lind, Jenny (Johanna) (b Stockholm, 1820; d Malvern Wells, Worcs., 1887). Swed. sop. Studied Stockholm. Début Stockholm Opera 1838 as Agathe in Der Freischütz. Dissatisfied with her v., went to Paris 1841 to study with M. P. R. García. Meyerbeer commended her to Berlin, where she sang Norma, 1844, and created leading role in Meyerbeer's Feldlager in Schlesien (later rev. as L'Étoile du Nord). After singing in Hamburg, Stockholm, Frankfurt, Vienna (1846), and elsewhere, causing a sensation wherever she appeared, she made her London début at Her Majesty's, 1847, in Robert le Diable. In same year created role of Amelia in Verdi's I Masnadieri. Excelled in brilliant coloratura roles (Sonnambula, etc.). Retired from opera 1849, thereafter singing only in oratorio and concerts. Visited US 1850--2 under auspices of Barnum and acc. by Julius Benedict, the conductor, and Giovanni Belletti, the baritone who had advised her to consult García 1841. In Boston, Mass., married the cond. Otto Goldschmidt, returning with him to Dresden 1852--5 and then to London, where she helped him to found the Bach Choir. Retired 1870. Prof. of singing RCM 1883. Worked for charitable causes. Her voice was remarkable for its purity and agility in cadenzas and ornamentation. Known as 'The Swedish Nightingale'.

Linda di Chamounix. Opera in 3 acts by Donizetti to lib. by Rossi based on vaudeville La Grace de Dieu. Prod. Vienna 1842, London 1843, NY 1847, Wexford 1983.

Lindley, Robert (b Rotherham, 1776; d London, 1855). Eng. cellist, pupil of Cervetto. Prin. cellist of opera orch. in London 1794--1851. Recital partner with Dragonetti. First prof. of vc. RAM 1822. Comp. vc. pieces.

Linear counterpoint. Term used specifically to describe type of 20th-cent. counterpoint with emphasis on the individual strands of the fabric rather than on their harmonic implications---but all counterpoint is by nature linear.

Lira (It.). (1) The lyre. (2) One of names indiscriminately applied in medieval times to various bowed str. instrs., e.g. rebec and vielle. (3) Part of compound name of such old instr. as lira da braccio, offshoot of the fiddle which evolved in 2nd half of 15th cent. and in size approximated to modern va. It had 7 str., incl. 2 drones, and was used by recitalists who improvised polyphonic accs. It was played against the shoulder, like avn. Leonardo da Vinci played it. From it developed the lirone or lira da gamba, a combination of bass viol and lira da braccio, held between knees like a vc. It had drone str., and from 9 to 14 stopped str., tuned in 4ths, 5ths, and octaves. Used in court entertainments c.1550--1650, and in intermedii.

Lira organizzata (It.). Organ lyre. Obsolete str. instr. like hurdy-gurdy, in which wooden wheel replaced bow and small org. attachment was built into body to enrich tone-colour effects. Haydn wrote 6 concs. (of which 5 survive) c.1786 and 9 Notturnos (of which 8 survive) for 2 lire organizzate in 1788--90 for King Ferdinand IV of Naples who enjoyed playing duets with his teacher. The 2nd and 4th movements of his Sym. No 89 in F are revs. of material used in the 5th of these concs., and the 2nd movt. of his Sym. No. 100 ('Military') originated in 3rd conc.

Lisle. See Rouget de Lisle, Claude Joseph.

Lisley, John (fl. 17th cent.). Eng. composer. Madrigal Fair Cytherea incl. in The Triumphs of Oriana.

L'Istesso (It.). See Istesso.

Liszt, Ferencz (Franz) (baptized as Franciscus) (b Raiding, Hung., 1811; d Bayreuth, 1886). Hung. composer and pianist. A child prodigy, he gave his first pf. recital at age 9. Went to Vienna in 1821, having lessons from Salieri and Czerny. Played in Paris 1823 and London 1824 (where he was received by George IV). Returned to Eng. in 1825 and 1826; operetta Don Sanche was prod. in Paris, 1825, where he lived 1823--35, becoming friend of Berlioz and Chopin and of leading literary figures and painters. His fame as a virtuoso pianist, flamboyant in style and taste, was at its height. From 1833 he lived with Countess Marie d'Agoult; of their 3 children, Cosima (b 1837) became the wife of Bülow and then of Wagner. He returned to Vienna in 1838 and to London in 1840 and 1841. Until 1847 he toured widely, incl. Russia, his mistress by now being Princess Carolyn Sayn-Wittgenstein. In 1848 he became Kapellmeister at the Weimarcourt, staying until 1859. In this decade he made Weimar a pre-eminent mus. centre, conducting a vast number of works, notably by Berlioz and by his friend Wagner whom he had met in 1842. In 1850 he conducted the f.p. of Lohengrin. These were also rich years for Liszt's own work; he wrote his Faust and Dante syms., 12 symphonic poems, and much else. From 1860 Liszt lived in Rome in the Villa d'Este, and in 1865 took minor orders, becoming the Abbé Liszt. He comp. much religious mus. at this period, incl. The Legend of St. Elizabeth and Christus. From 1869 he divided his time between Rome, Weimar, and Budapest, and his amorous adventures were still the talk of Europe. In the last 5 years of his life he concentrated on teaching, his pupils incl. Ziloty, Lamond, Rosenthal, and Weingartner, and entered a new and important compositional phase in which his harmonic innovations, always a significant feature, anticipated the 'impressionism' of Debussy, e.g. in Nuages gris and the Csárdás macabre. In 1886 he made a 'jubilee tour' to mark his 75th birthday, revisiting Paris and London. As a pianist, Liszt was, from all reliable accounts, among the greatest, if not the greatest, there has ever been. His comps. have taken longer to win a rightful place, but they are now recognized as occupying a high place for their own virtues as well as for their undoubtedly influence on Wagner, R. Strauss, and subsequent composers. The pf. works are in a category of their own, the symphonic poems developed a new art-form, the syms. are compelling and imaginative, the religious works are moving and visionary, and the songs hold their own in high company. He remains a romantic enigma of mus., a genius with a touch of the charlatan, a virtuoso with the flair of an actor-manager, a man generous to colleagues and to the young. His championship of Wagner in the Weimar years, with its subsequent effect on Brahms and Schumann, thereby causing the great schism in 19th-cent. mus., had incalculable results on the art. Prin. works:

symphonic-poems: Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne ('Bergsymphonie') (What one hears on the mountain) (1848--9, orch. Raff, rev. 1850, 1854); Tasso: lamento e trionfo (1849, orch.

London. Eng. city, capital of Great Britain. One of main musical centres of the world, with rich and varied activities in all branches of the art. From 18th cent. has enjoyed visits from leading performers and composers. Among the latter, Handel, J. C. Bach, Mozart, Haydn, Chopin, Weber, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Berlioz, Wagner, Bruckner, Mahler, Strauss, Hindemith, Ligeti, Berio, and Stockhausen are outstanding. This summary of London music will be divided into sections, for ease of reference. Opera. The first real operatic perf. in London was at Rutland House, 1656, when Davenant's The Siege of Rhodes (mus. by 5 composers) was given. Purcell's Dido and Aeneas was perf. at a Chelsea school in 1689. Drury Lane Th. was used for opera in the 1690s. Handel's first operatic perfs. in London after 1711 were mainly at the King's Th., Haymarket. Rival perfs. were given at Lincoln's Inn Fields and Covent Garden. From the 1830s the Lyceum and Drury Lane staged important opera seasons. The King's (re-named Her Majesty's in 1837) was the home of It. opera, but the first London Ring cycle was given there in 1882. After being rebuilt smaller in 1897, Her Majesty's was used less frequently for opera, although Beecham cond. Strauss's Feuersnot there in 1910 and the first version of Ariadne auf Naxos in 1913. The BNOC gave seasons there after 1924. From 1931 London's second opera house was Sadler's Wells in Rosebery Avenue which housed the Vic-Wells Opera (SW Opera from 1934) until 1939 and from 1945 to 1968 (it reopened on 7 June 1945 with f.p. of Britten's Peter Grimes.) The company moved to the Coliseum in 1968 and changed its name in 1974 to English National Opera. Smaller companies, e.g. Handel Opera and New Opera Co., and visiting companies continue to use Sadler's Wells. The forerunner of Sadler's Wells was the Old Vic where Lilian Baylis had first staged opera in 1900. Until 1935 Vic-Wells Opera and Vic-Wells Ballet used both the Old Vic and Sadler's Wells. Orchestras. Public concerts in London date from 1672. Thomas Britton's weekly gathering at Clerkenwell lasted from 1678 to 1714. Subscription concerts were held at Hickford's Rooms, James Street, from 1729 to c.1752. Geminiani ran rival concerts from 1731 to 1738. The J. C. Bach-C. F. Abel concerts began in 1765 at Carlisle House, Soho Square, and moved to Hanover Square Rooms in 1775. They ceased in 1782. Concerts organized by Cramer, Clementi, and Salomon ran from 1783 to 1793, but Salomon left to launch his own series in 1783 (it was to this series that Haydn came). In the 19th cent. concerts were given first in the Argyll Rooms, at the corner of Oxford and Argyll Streets, and it was there that the Philharmonic Society gave its first concert on 8 March 1813. The building was demolished in 1818 and the New Argyll Rooms opened in 1820 (they burned down in 1830). The Philharmonic moved to the King's Th. in 1830, to Hanover Square Rooms 1833--68, St James's Hall 1869--93, Queen's Hall 1894--1941, Royal Albert Hall 1941--51, Festival Hall from 1951. Important orch. concerts were given at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, cond. by August Manns 1855--1901 where the members of the orch. played continually together and were London's first permanent orch. The opening of the Royal Albert Hall in 1871 added a hall with a capacity of 6,500 to London's musical life. It was used mainly for large-scale events until 1941 when the destruction of Queen's Hall meant that nearly all symphony concerts were given there. It has remained the home since 1941 of the Promenade Concerts, founded in 1895 by Robert Newman and Henry J. Wood. The Queen's Hall, Langham Place, had opened in 1893 and was renowned for its acoustics. It replaced the St James's Hall, Piccadilly, built in 1858. The Richter concerts were given there from 1877 and, even though the Queen's Hall by then existed, Elgar's Enigma Variations had their f.p. at a Richter concert in St James's Hall in 1899. It was demolished in 1905. London's principal concert hall since 1951 has been the Royal Festival Hall on the South Bank, with the Queen Elizabeth Hall and Purcell Room as smaller adjuncts since 1967 but not entirely replacing for recitals the usefulness since 1901 of the Wigmore Hall (Bechstein Hall until 1917) in Wigmore Street. The latest addition is the Barbican Concert Hall. No other city in the world supports as many orchestras as London. The BBC S.O. (founded 1930) and the orchestras of the Royal Opera House and ENO are independent bodies and do not, as they once would have done, share players with others. The four principal symphony orchs. are London Symphony (founded 1904), London Philharmonic (founded 1932), Philharmonia (founded 1945), and Royal Philharmonic (founded 1946). In addition there are the English Chamber Orchestra (founded 1948), renamed 1960), Academy of St Martin-in-the-Fields (founded 1958), London Sinfonietta (founded 1968), and Orchestra of St John's, Smith Square (founded 1973). Among the choirs are the Bach Choir (founded 1876), Royal Choral Society (founded 1871), John Alldis Choir (founded 1962), London Choral Society (founded 1903), Monteverdi Choir (founded 1964), London Philharmonic Choir (founded 1947), London Symphony Chorus (founded 1966), and Philharmonia Chorus (founded 1957). Colleges. The Royal Academy of Music was founded in 1822, the Royal College of Music in 1882, Trinity College of Music in 1872, the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in 1880, and the London College of Music in 1887. In addition the Univ. of London has a thriving musical wing.

Miscellaneous. In festivals, libraries, publishing firms, and not least the churches, from Westminster Abbey, Westminster Cathedral, St Paul's Cathedral, the Temple Church, and much besides, London's music is blessed by abundance. The capital is fortunate in having and holding so much; the only cavil is that some Londoners sometimes assume that nowhere else (in Britain) has anything.

London College of Music. Mus. sch. founded (privately) 1887. Incorporated 1939. Recognized as examining body.

Prime mover in Munich premières of Tristan und Isolde (1865), Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (1868), Das Rheingold (1869), and Die Walküre (1870). Because of scandal of Wagner's affair with Cosima von Bülow, Wagner had to leave Munich, but despite breach in their friendship Ludwig continued to provide support, and helped Wagner financially in building of Bayreuth Festspielhaus and Villa Wahnfried. A fascinating historical figure, his alleged 'madness' is at the least questionable.

Lully, Jean-Baptiste (orig. Lulli, Giovanni Battista) (b Florence, 1632; d Paris, 1687). It.-born composer (Fr. nationality from 1661). Taught himself vn. At 14 went to Fr. and worked as scullion in noble house, until prowess as dancer and mime was noted. Entered service of Louis XIV 1653, composing instr. mus. for the court ballets. Some time before 1656 he created and became leader of 'les petits violons du Roi', a band of 21 players (an offshoot of the '24 violons du roi'). 'Instrumental composer to the King' 1653--61, 'Superintendent of Mus. and chamber mus. composer' 1661--2; 'music master to Royal Family' from 1662. From 1664 collab. with Molière in series of comedy-ballets which were forerunners of Fr. opera, the last and most famous being Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, in which Lully danced role of the Mufti. Having assimilated both It. and Fr. styles and tastes, from 1673 he turned to opera comp. and obtained from the King exclusive rights to arrange operatic perfs. in Paris. For the next 14 years, working with the poet Quinault, he not only wrote about 20 operas and ballets, but prod. and cond. them and trained the singers with firm discipline. He developed the formal 'French Ov.' and replaced It. recitativo secco with acc. recit., placing special emphasis on a style of declamation suited to Fr. language. He introduced professional female dancers into the ballet. A supreme courtier and intriguer, he nevertheless made Fr. opera a popular art. His death was caused by a gangrenous abscess which formed in his foot after he struck it with the long staff he used for beating time on the floor while conducting a Te Deum to celebrate Louis XIV's recovery from illness. Prin. works:

operas: Cadmus et Hermione (1673), Alceste (1674), Thésée (1675), Atys (1676), Isis (1677), Psyché (1678), Bellérophon (1679), Proserpine (1680), Persée (1682), Phaéton (1683), Amadis de Gaule (1684), Roland (1685), Armide et Rénaud (1686), Acis et Galathée (1686), Achille et Polixène (with Colasse, 1687, prod. posthumously).

Lute. Fretted str. instr. of great antiquity played by plucking with the fingers (occasionally with a plectrum in earlier types). The 'long lute', with neck longer than the body, dates back at least to 2000 bc. The short lute, with neck slightly shorter than the body, dates from c. 800 bc. It was transformed into the European lute, with distinct neck and central soundhole, probably in Spain in 14th cent. Has a round body, like halved pear, flat neck with 7 or more frets, and separate pegbox usually bent back from neck at angle. In 16th cent. had 11 str. in 6 courses, tuned to convenient pitch. Up to 6 bass courses were added in 17th cent., unalterable in pitch. In mid-17th cent., new system of tuning (called nouveau ton) was introduced by Denis Gaultier. Lutes were much used for solos, acc., and in ens. Their mus. was played not from notation but from tablature which in the 16th and 17th cents. took the form of a staff with a space for each str. and small letters placed within the space to indicate the fret to be used. Small marks above the staff gave the duration of the sounds. Many varieties of lute were used in the 16th and 17th cents., when it was the chief domestic inst. They incl. mandola, mandolin, angelica, and larger, deeper lutes called archlutes, of which the 'long' was the chittarone and the 'short' the theorbo. All have the characteristic round back, differentiating them from the flat-back guitar family. In the 17th cent., lute music was chiefly cultivated in Fr., Ger., and Eng. (Dowland was probably the greatest lute composer) while Sp. and It. turned to the guitar. The literature of lute mus. stretches from 1507 to c.1770, among the latest composers to compose for it being Handel, J. S. Bach, Reusner, and Weiss. It came to be used in orch. mus., and there is a part for lute in Bach's St John Passion (1723). With the 20th-cent. revival of interest in early mus. the lute has regained considerable popularity, especially through the agency of virtuosi such as Julian Bream. The term is also used generically for a large group of str. instr., e.g. fiddles, viols, vielle, etc.

Lute Harpsichord (Ger. Lautenclavicymbel). Hpd. with gut instead of metal strns., so-called because of lute-like sound. In 1740 J. S. Bach had one made for his use.

Lutenist (lutanist). Player of the lute.

Luth (Fr.). The Lute. Luther, Martin (b Eisleben, 1483; d Eisleben, 1546). Ger. Protestant church reformer. Player of lute and fl. Est. congregational singing. Wrote treatise on mus. (1538) and words of many hymns and chorales (possibly the mus., too), best-known being Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott (A safe stronghold our God is still).

Luthier (Fr., from luth, lute; Ger. Lautenmacher). A maker of str. instr., nowadays usually those of the vn.family.

Lutosławski, Witold (b Warsaw, 1913). Polish composer, pianist, and cond. Studied Warsaw Univ. 1932--6 and State Cons., later in Hamburg. Worked as pianist in Warsaw cafés 1939--45. His earlier works were comp. under the restraints imposed by official insistence on a style based on folk-song, but the Concerto for Orchestra (1950--4) is a successful example from this period. After 1956 a freer approach was allowed and the influence of Webern became apparent in his work. He began to use the 12-note system in 1958 but did not find it fruitful. In Gry weneckie (Venetian Games) of 1960--1, he employed aleatory procedures within strictly defined limits. His later works, notably the 2nd Sym., combine this technique with more traditional forms such as ostinato and harmonic patterns. The mus. texture is all-important. Prin. works:

orch: Symphonic Variations (1938); Syms: No. 1 (1941--7), No. 2 (1965--7), No. 3 (1972--83); Overture for str. (1949); Little Suite for chamber orch. (1950, rev. 1951 for full orch.); 5 Folk-Songs for str. (1952, from Folk Melodies for pf.); Concerto for Orchestra (1950--4); Muzyka agzalobna (Funeral Music) for str. (1958); 3 Postludes (1958--63); Gry weneckie (Venetian Games) (1960--1); Livre pour orchestre (1968); Cello Concerto (1969--70); Preludes and Fugue for 13 solo strings (1972); Mi Parti (1976); Variations on a Theme of Paganini, version for pf. and orch. (1978, see 2 pianos); Novelette (1978--9); Conc. for ob., hp., and chamber orch. (1979--80); Chain I (1983).

LyraViol. Small bass viol.

Lyre. Ancient Gr. instr., like small harp, in which strings were fixed to a cross-bar between 2 arms and plucked by fingers or plectrum.

Lyre-Bird Press. See L'Oiseau-Lyre.

Lyric. (1) Strictly, vocal perf. with lyre; hence lyric drama = opera of all kinds (Fr. drame lyrique), lyric stage = operatic stage. (2) Short poem, not epic or narrative; composers such as Grieg adapted this meaning to mus., e.g. Lyric Piece, Lyric Suite. (3) Vocal description, e.g. lyric tenor, lyric soprano, somewhere between 'light' and 'heavy' vocal weight. (4) The words of a song in a 'musical' or of a popular 20th-cent. song.

Lyric Suite. (1) Orch. by Grieg (1904) of 4 of his 6 Lyric Pieces (Book 5), Op. 54 (1891) (Shepherd's Boy, Norwegian March, Nocturne, and March of the Dwarfs). (2) Work for str. qt. in 6 movements by Berg, comp. 1925--6, f.p. Vienna 1927. 2nd, 3rd and 4th movements arr. for str. orch. 1928, f.p. Berlin 1929. Research has lately disclosed that the Lyric Suite was a manifestation of Berg's love for Hanna Fuchs, wife of a Cz. industrialist, whom he met 1925. In addition to quotations from Wagner's Tristan, Zemlinsky's Lyric Symphony, and his own Wozzeck, Berg used the notes representing Hanna's and his initials (H(B nat.), F, A, and B) in the note-row which is the basis of the work. The 6th movement, Largo desolato, exists also in version with mez. voice as setting of S. George's trans. of Baudelaire's 'De profundis clamavi'. F. Eng. p. of suite with vocal finale, BBC broadcast 1979.

Lyrische Symphonie (Lyric Symphony). Zemlinsky's Op. 18, being seven songs after poems by Rabindranath Tagore (b Calcutta, 1861; d Calcutta, 1941) in Ger. trans. by the composer, for sop., bar., and orch. Comp. 1922--3. 7 poems are: 1. Ich bin friedlos (I am restless), 2. Mutter, der junge Prinz muss an unsere Türe vorbeikommen (Mother, the young Prince is to pass our door), 3. Du bist die Abendwolke (You are the evening cloud), 4. Sprich zu mir Geliebter! (Speak to me, my love), 5. Befrei mich von den Banden deiner süsse Lieb! (Free me from the bonds of your sweetness, my love!), 6. Vollende denn das letzte Lied und lassuns auseinandergehn (Then finish the last song and let us leave), 7. Friede, mein Herz (Peace, my heart). In the Lyric Suite, which is dedicated to Zemlinsky, Berg in the 4th movt. quotes the principal theme from No. 3 of the Lyrische Symphonie, which occurs at the words 'Du bist mein Eigen' ('You are my own'). F.p. Prague 1924, cond. Zemlinsky; f. Eng. p. 1977, BBC broadcast, cond. Süßkind.

Madrigal (It. madrigale; orig. matricale--pastoral in the mother-tongue). Vocal comp., of It. origin, for several vv., usually unacc. but sometimes with instr. acc. Texts usually secular (amorous, satirical, or allegorical), but there are madrigali spirituali. Madrigals were first sung in It. towards the end of the 13th cent. and early examples survive by Giovanni da Cascia and Jacopo da Bologna. The form was revived in a different style in the 16th cent. by It. composers and by the Flemish Arcadelt, Verdelot, and Willaert. It became more complex and experimental in the hands of Lassus, Palestrina, and A. Gabrieli and achieved its finest flowering in the works of Donati, Marenzio, Gesualdo, and, especially, Monteverdi. In the 17th cent. it was superseded by the cantata. The singing of It. madrigals was imported to Eng. by It. composers such as Ferrabosco the elder who worked at Elizabeth I's court. Nicholas Yonge, of St Paul's Cath., formed a madrigal choir and in 1588 pubd. Musica Transalpina, a coll. of It. madrigals to Eng. words. Eng. composers such as Byrd, Morley, and later Weelkes and Wilbye, wrote superb madrigals, though they did not always call them by that name. In the 19th cent., mock-madrigals were composed by Sullivan and German. See also Fellowes, E. H.

Madrigal Comedy. Short drama set to mus. as series of secular vocal pieces (madrigals or some other vocal form). First known example was Vecchi's L'Amfiparnaso (1594), followed by Banchieri's La pazzia senile (1598).

Madrigale. See Madrigal.

Madrigali guerrieri e amorosi (Madrigals of love and war). Monteverdi's 8th book of madrigals, 1638, which contains 58 items, some purely instr., some for 8 vv. with 2 vn. and basso continuo. Contains whole of Il ballo delle ingrate, also separate extracts from it, and whole of Il combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda, with separate extracts from it.

Maelzel (Mälzel), Johann Nepomuk (b Ratisbon, 1772; d at sea, 1838). Ger. inventor of mechanical mus. devices. Settled in Vienna 1792. Constructed Panharmonicon, a mechanical orch. for which his friend Beethoven wrote his Battle Symphony (1813). Made mus. chronometer based on Stöckel's invention and, in 1814, a metronome, based on Winkel. The second movement of Beethoven's 8th sym. begins with a theme said to derive from a canon extemporized by Beethoven at a supper in honour of Maelzel, the tickings of the chronometer being represented by staccato 16th-notes, i.e. 'Ta-ta-ta-ta .|. lieber Maelzel'.

Maestoso (It.). Majestic, dignified, hence allegro maestoso.

Maestro (It.). Master. Title given in Italy to celebrated composers, condns., and teachers, e.g. Maestro Verdi, Maestro Toscanini, Maestro Martini. The tendency has grown in USA (and has spread) to use it as a synonym only for condns., e.g. 'the maestro'. Maestro di cappella was the mus. dir. of a chapel or of an aristocratic mus. est.; maestro al cembalo was the musician who, in 17th and 18th cents., directed perfs. from the hpd. or other continuo instr.

Maestro di Cappella, Il (The Chorus Master). Intermezzo by Cimarosa, comp. c.1786--93, for bar. and orch. Ov. is that of Cimarosa's opera L'Impresario in angustie, prod. 1786.

Maestro di Musica, Il (The Music Master). Comic opera in 1 act, being altered version of Orazio, opera by P. Auletta to lib. by A. Palombo. Prod. Naples c.1737. Often wrongly attrib. Pergolesi.

Magaloff, Nikita (b St Petersburg, 1912). Russ. pianist (later Swiss citizen). Studied Paris Cons., pf. with Philipp and comp. with Prokofiev. Began career in duo with Szigeti (vn.), then soloist with orchs. and recitalist in Europe and USA. Prof. of pf. Geneva Cons. 1949--59.

Magelone, Die schöne (The fair Magelone). 15 songs or romances for solo v. and pf. by Brahms, Op. 33, settings of extracts from the novel Die schöne Magelone by Ludwig Tieck (1773--1853). Comp. 1861--8.

Maggini, Giovanni (Paolo) (b Botticino-Marino, 1580; d Brescia, c.1630). It. maker of vns., vas., vcs., and dbs. valued nearly as instrs. by Stradivari and Guarneri. Introduced many improvements, particularly in way the wood was cut.

Maggiolata (It.). May Song, or Spring Song---either traditional or comp.

Maggiore (It.). Major.

Magic Flute, The (Mozart). See Zauberflöte, Die.

Magic Fountain, The ('Watawa'). Opera in 3 acts by Delius to lib. by comp. and Jutta Bell (?1857--1934). Comp. 1894--5. F. (concert) p. BBC broadcast recorded in London, July 1977 and relayed on 20 Nov. 1977. Recording of broadcast issued 1980.

Magnard, Albéric (b Paris, 1865; d Baron, 1914). Fr. composer. Studied Paris Cons. 1886--8 under Massenet, then became pupil of d'Indy. Comps. are of strong structure, somewhat austere in effect. Wrote 3 operas (Yolande 1891, Guercoeur 1903, Bérénice 1909), 4 syms., Chant funèbre, for orch., str. qt., songs, pf. pieces. Died when his house was set on fire when he refused to surrender after shooting dead 2 German soldiers who had entered his property. Almost all his MSS. were burned with him.

Magne, Michel (b Lisieux, 1930). Fr. composer of avant-garde proclivities. His Symphonie humaine (1955) for 150 perfs. calls for inaudible 'infrasounds' to produce psychological reaction through powerful low frequencies. Wrote mus. for ballet Le Rendezvous manqué (1957).

Magnificat (Lat.). Canticle of the Virgin Mary ('My soul doth magnify the Lord') as it appears in St Luke's Gospel. The Lat. name is first word of Vulgate trans. (Magnificat anima mea Dominum). Part of R.C. Vespers and of Anglican Evensong (where mus. setting is followed by Nunc Dimittis). Sung to plainchant in R.C. service and to Anglican chant in latter, but there are many comp. settings for church and concert perf., e.g. by Dunstable, Dufay, Lassus, Palestrina, Monteverdi, Bach, Schütz, and Vaughan Williams.

Mahler, Fritz (b Vienna, 1901; d Winston-Salem, N. Carolina, 1973). Austrian-born cond. and composer (Amer. citizen 1939). Nephew of Gustav Mahler. Studied with Berg, Schoenberg, and Adler at Vienna Univ. Settled in USA 1936. Taught cond. Juilliard Sch. 1938--53. Cond. Erie (Penn.) S.O. 1947--53, Hartford S.O. 1953--64. Wrote symphonic poem, chamber mus., and songs.

Mahler, Gustav (b Kalis<sup>t</sup>; Bohemia, 1860; d Vienna, 1911). Austrian composer, cond., and pianist. Began to learn pf. at age 6, giving public recital in 1870. Entered Vienna Cons. 1875, studying pf. under J. Epstein, harmony under R. Fuchs, and comp. with Franz Krenn. Became friendly disciple, but not pupil, of Bruckner, helping to make pf. duet arr. of 3rd Sym. (1878). While at Cons. comp. and played in perfs. of his own pf. quintet and vn. sonata. On leaving Cons. in 1878 comp. cantata Das klagende Lied, entering it in 1881 for Beethoven Prize but it was rejected. Began career as cond. 1880 at Hall, Upper Austria, followed by posts at Laibach (Ljubljana), Olmütz (1883), and Kassel 1883--5. While in the Kassel post he had an unhappy love-affair recorded in his song-cycle Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen. Moved to Prague, 1885, and the next year to Leipzig as 2nd cond. to Nikisch. While there he was invited by Weber's descendants to construct an opera from the fragments of Die drei Pintos. This, when prod. in 1888, was very successful. That year he went to Budapest Opera as chief cond. There his genius as cond. and administrator had full rein for the first time. In 1889 he conducted the f.p. of his first Sym., then simply described as 'symphonic poem'. In 1891 Mahler became chief cond. of Hamburg Opera, where he built up a co. of remarkable singers (whom he coached also to be singer-actors), and introduced many new works. He took the co. to London in 1892, his only visit, for perfs. of Wagner's Ring and Tristan, and Beethoven's Fidelio. His 2nd Sym. (Resurrection) was completed 1894 and perf. in Berlin 1895. For the rest of his life Mahler divided his time between comp. in the summer and cond. in the winter. His mus. met at first with hostility, but its quality was recognized by his contemporary Richard Strauss. In 1897, having converted from Judaism to Roman Catholicism, he became dir. of the Vienna Court Opera, inaugurating a glorious decade during which he set standards still scarcely surpassed and revolutionized the production and lighting of operas in collaboration with gifted colleagues. In 1902 he married Alma Schindler, also a musician, by whom he had 2 daughters (the elder died in 1907, aged 4). Between 1896 and 1907, when he resigned his post after controversy, he comp. his Syms. 3 to 8, the song-cycle Kindertotenlieder, and other songs with orch. Each of the syms. was on a huge scale, but perf. were becoming more frequent throughout Europe, especially through the championship of Mengelberg. Mahler made his Amer. début on 1 Jan. 1908 conducting Tristan at the NY Met. In 1909 he was appointed cond. of the reorganized NY P.O. In 1910 in Munich he cond. the first 2 perf. of his 8th Sym. (Symphony of a Thousand), returning to NY 2 months later. From 1907 he lived under the shadow of death from a heart ailment. This led in 1911 to a severe blood infection which caused his premature death on 18 May. He left 3 large posthumous works, the song-sym. Das Lied von der Erde and Syms. 9 and 10. Das Lied and the 9th were f.p. in 1911 and 1912 respectively cond. by Bruno Walter in Munich and Vienna. The 10th was long thought to be unfinished and only 2 movements were pubd. and played until the Eng. scholar Deryck Cooke discovered in 1960 that the work was complete in short score and made a performing version. Mahler's greatness as a cond. was never contested. But his comps. for many years were regarded with fanatical admiration by a handful of disciples and admirers and equally fanatical scorn by a larger section of musicians. However the championship of certain cond. and critics led gradually in the late 1950s to a fervent revival of interest. His works were frequently recorded and entered the repertoires of the world's leading orchs. to public acclaim. His mus. appealed both to those elements who cherished its romantic eloquence and to the avant-garde who recognized that it bridged the divide between the old and the new. Deeply personal in expression, the extreme chromaticism of works such as the 9th Sym. anticipates the innovations of Schoenberg. The unconventional form of the syms., their juxtaposition of popular elements with mystic passages, the concertante use of solo instrs., the complex and subtle instr. polyphony, the contrasts of irony, pathos, childlike simplicity, and psychological insight, all appealed to later 20th-cent. composers; and audiences found in his mus. a cogent and comprehensive expression of the anxieties and complexities of modern life. He championed the younger generation in his own lifetime and became their idol after his death. Prin. works:

Malinconia, malinconico (It.). Melancholy. So malinconoso, malinconioso, malinconicamente, in melancholy fashion. Walton marked the slow movement of his First Sym. 'con malincolia' (sic). Malipiero, Gian Francesco (b Venice, 1882; d Treviso, 1973). It. composer. Studied Vienna Cons. 1898--9, then in Venice and Bologna under Bossi. Settled in Venice 1904--15, but spent some months in Berlin in 1908--10 attending lectures by Bruch. In this period, in the Marciana Library, Venice, he discovered and transcr. the almost forgotten works of Monteverdi, Galuppi, Tartini, Stradella, etc. This determined him to rebel against the 'operatic tyranny' of It. mus. life. In 1913 he met Casella, who became his colleague in the struggle. Became prof. of comp., Parma, 1921--3. Then settled at Asolo. Taught comp. at Liceo B. Marcello, Venice, from 1932, becoming dir. 1939--52. Pubd. complete edn. of Monteverdi 1926--42 which stimulated present revival of interest. Also ed. many vols. of Vivaldi's complete works. Author of books on Vivaldi, Monteverdi, and Stravinsky. He destroyed most of his mus. written before 1914, but thereafter he was a prolific composer and wrote many operas. His mus., naturally influenced by the early It. composers, also shows traces of Debussy's impressionism and, in the 1920s, the angularity of a Janáček. The later works border on atonality, but he rejected serialism. Prin. works:

Masque (or Mask or Maske). An aristocratic ceremonial entertainment in the 17th cent., consisting of a combination of poetry, vocal and instr. mus., dancing, acting, costume, pageantry, and scenic decoration, applied to the representation of allegorical and mythological subjects. It was much cultivated in It., from which country Eng. seemsto have learnt it, then carrying it to a very high pitch of artistic elaboration. It developed from the intermedii and from mystery plays. In Elizabethan times, among the authors employed was Ben Jonson, a supreme master of the Eng. masque; he sometimes enjoyed the collab. of Inigo Jones as designerof the decorations and machinery. Among composers of masque mus. were Campion, Coprario, Lanier, and the younger Ferrabosco. From a literary point of view the most famous masque is Milton's Comus (1634); for this the mus. was supplied by Henry Lawes, but the finest masques ofthis period had music by his brother William. Masques continued under the Puritan régime of the Commonwealth and Protectorate, some being arr., by authority, for entertainment of distinguished foreign visitors. After the Restoration, masque episodes were popular in plays, and music for them was composed by John Blow, Pelham Humfrey, Louis Grabu, and Henry Purcell. A late example is Arne's Alfred (1740), written for perf. in the Prince of Wales's garden: from it comes the song Rule, Britannia! In the 20th cent. Vaughan Williams described his ballet Job as a 'masque for dancing', to indicate that 19th-cent. type of choreog. would not be appropriate. Lambert's Summer's Last Will and Testament is described as a masque.

Masques et Bergamasques (Masks and Bergomasks). Divertissement by Fauré to scenario by R. Fauchois, comp. 1919, prod. Monte Carlo 1919. Suite for orch., Op. 112, 4 movements, f.p. Paris 1919, London 1920.

Mass. Owing to the importance the R.C. Mass holds in the minds of worshippers and the opportunities it offers for mus. participation it has exercised a large influence upon the development of mus. High Mass is sung, Low Mass is spoken. The Proper of the Mass (i.e. the parts which vary from season to season and day to day) has naturally usually been left to its traditional plainsong treatment. The 5 passages that are frequently set for ch., or for ch. and soloists, are: (a) Kyrie (Lord have mercy), (b) Gloria in excelsis Deo (Glory be to God on high), (c) Credo (I believe), (d) Sanctus, with Benedictus properly a part of it, but in practice often separated (Holy, Holy .|. Blessed .|.), (e) Agnus Dei (O Lamb of God). These are, properly, the congregational element in the Ordinary, or Common of the Mass, i.e. the invariable part. Innumerable mus. settings have been provided by hundreds of composers of all European nations. The earliest polyphonic setting was probably that by Machaut in 14th cent. In the 15th cent. Dufay and others introduced secular tunes as a cantus firmus, e.g. the folk song L'Homme armé. A high point was reached at the end of the 16th cent., when the unacc. choral contrapuntal style of comp. reached its apogee (Palestrina in It., Byrd in Eng., Victoria in Sp., etc.). In the 17th and 18th cents. the development of solo singing and increased understanding of the principles of effective orch. acc. led to great changes in the style of mus. treatment of the Mass, and the settings of the late 18th-cent. and early 19th-cent. composers (Haydn, Mozart, Weber, Schubert, etc.), however musically effective, have not the devotional quality of the settings of the late 16th and early 17th cents. The practice had grown up of treating the 5 passages above mentioned as the opportunity of providing an extended work in oratorio style, two outstanding examples of this being the Mass in B minor of J. S. Bach (1724--49) and the Mass in D of Beethoven (1819--22). Many impressive settings have been comp. since Beethoven, e.g. by Bruckner, and in the 20th cent. by Stravinsky, Vaughan Williams, Rubbra, and many others. In large-scale settings the above-mentioned 5 passages tended to become subdivided. The great setting by Bach is as follows: (a) Kyrie eleison (Lord, have mercy), Christe eleison (Christ, have mercy), Kyrie eleison (Lord, have mercy); (b) Gloria in excelsis Deo (Glory be to God on high), Laudamus te (We praise Thee), Gratias agimus tibi (We give Thee thanks), Domine Deus (Lord God), Qui tollis peccata mundi (Who takes away the sins of the world), Qui sedes ad dexteram Patris (Who sittest at the right hand of the Father), Quoniam tu solus sanctus (For Thou only art holy), Cum Sancto Spiritu (With the Holy Spirit); (c) Credo in unum Deum (I believe in one God), Patrem omnipotentem (Father almighty), Et in unum Dominum (And in one Lord), Et incarnatus est (And was incarnate), Crucifixus (Crucified), Et resurrexit (And rose again), Et in Spiritum Sanctum (And I believe in the Holy Spirit), Confiteor unum baptisma (I confess one baptism); (d) Sanctus (Holy), Hosanna in excelsis (Hosanna in the highest), Benedictus qui venit (Blessed is he that cometh); (e) Agnus Dei (O Lamb of God), Dona nobis pacem (Give us peace). See also Missa and Requiem. Massart, Joseph (Lambert) (b Liège, 1811; d Paris, 1892). Belg. violinist. Pupil of Kreutzer in Paris. Prof. of vn. Paris Cons. 1843--90. Pupils incl. Massenet, Jules (Émile Frédéric) (b Montaud, St Étienne, 1842; d Paris, 1912). Fr. composer. Entered Paris Cons. at 11, becoming pupil of A. Thomas. Won Grand Prix de Rome. Spent 3 years in Rome; returned to Paris 1866, his first (1-act) opera being prod. at Opéra-Comique 1867. His oratorios est. his name until the opera Hérodiade (a version of the Salome story) in 1881, but his greatest success came in 1884 with Manon. He was prof. of advanced comp. at Paris Cons. 1878--96. Among his later successes was Don Quichotte, prod. Monte Carlo 1910, with Chaliapin in the title-role. Massenet used Wagner's leitmotiv device, but translated it into his melodious and agreeable style, a style considered by some to be saccharine but which has won admiration in the later 20th cent. for its stylishness, craftsmanship, sense of th., and understanding of the human v. Studied Princeton Univ. 1962--4, with Sessions. Resident composer Adelaide Univ. 1966. In 1967 was co-dir. of chamber ens., Pierrot Players, formed to perf. contemporary works; this was reorganized 1970 as The Fires of London, for which many of Maxwell Davies's works have been written. Since 1970 he has lived intermittently in Orkney, where the landscape and solitude have had an undoubted effect on his music, notably in the chamber opera The Martyrdom of St Magnus and the large-scale sym. Mus. dir., Dartington Hall summersch. 1979--84.

C.B.E. 1981. Maxwell Davies soon became one of the most important of the Eng. so-called avant-garde. Like Britten, he has enjoyed writing for specific performers and his wide-ranging imagination has devised striking sounds, freakish perhaps but always springing from a genuine mus. impulse. Rhythms are sometimes complex, vocal lines angular. He developed music theatre, staged pieces for a single performer, as in the remarkable Eight Songs for a Mad King. His music is marked also by a strong dramatic impulse which found a full outlet in the opera Taverner. He has been inspired by the ability to combine and contrast

operas: Taverner (1962--70); The Martyrdom of St Magnus (1976--7); The Two Fiddlers (children's opera) (1978); The Lighthouse (1979).

Mazurka. A traditional Polish country dance (orig. sung as well as danced). Originated in Mazovia, near Warsaw, inhabitants being Mazurs. It spread in the early 18th cent. to Ger. and then to Paris, and early in the 19th to Brit. and the USA. It is in triple time with a certain accentuation of the 2nd beat of each measure and an ending of the phrases on that beat; dotted notes are a feature. It is not a fast dance, and a certain aristocratic pride of bearing, sometimes combined with a touch of abandon, helps to differentiate it from the waltz. Its place in concert mus. was est. by Chopin, who wrote c.60 for pf. These are in a greatly refined style and the tempo and rhythm are sometimes changed from those that are traditional. The Polka-Mazurka differs from the Polka in being in triple time and from the Mazurka in having an accent on the 3rd beat of the measure.

Meistersinger (Mastersingers). Middle-class Ger. literary and mus. movement of 15th and 16th cents. cultivated by craftsmen's guilds and representing continuation of aristocratic Minnesinger of preceding 2 centuries. Movement declined in 17th cent., the Ulm school being disbanded in 1839 and its last survivor dying in 1876. The conduct of a mastersingers' guild was very much as depicted by Wagner in his opera Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg. Rigid and pedantic rules governed the weekly meetings (after church on Sunday); competitions were held and prizes awarded; members were promoted into various classes: Schüler (apprentice), Schulfreund (friend), Sänger (singer), Dichter (poet), Meister (master). Title Dichter was awarded for new poem (Lied, Gesang), Meister for new melody (Ton, Weise). Several of the characters in Wagner's opera were historical personages, e.g. Konrad Nachtigall and especially Hans Sachs (1494--1576). Some attractive songs by Sachs survive, but generally Meistersinger melodies are dull and suffer from a surfeit of coloratura.

Meistersinger von Nürnberg, Die (The Mastersingers of Nuremberg). Opera in 3 acts by Wagner to his own lib. based on Wagenseil and other sources. Gives accurate and heartwarming picture of medieval guild of Meistersinger, several of whom, notably Hans Sachs, actually lived. Comp. 1862--7. Prod. Munich 1868, London 1882, NY Met. 1886.

Melartin, Erkki Gustav (b Käkisalmi, 1875; d Pukinmäki, 1937). Finn. composer and pianist. Studied Helsinki Cons., Vienna, and elsewhere. Prof. at Helsinki Cons., of which he was dir. 1911--36. Wrote opera Aino, 8 syms., symphonic poems, ballet, vn. conc., 4 str. qts., 400 pf. pieces, over 300 songs.

Melba, (Dame) Nellie (Mrs Helen Porter Armstrong (née Mitchell)) (b Richmond, nr. Melbourne, 1861; d Sydney, N.S.W., 1931). Australian sop. As child, studied pf., organ, and theory, but sang in churches and at local concerts. Studied Paris with M. Marchesi. Début in opera in Brussels 1887 as Gilda in Rigoletto, CG 1888 as Lucia, Paris 1889 as Ophélie. Her London triumphs date from her Juliette (Gounod) in 1889 and she appeared regularly at CG until 1914 (except 1909) and then in 1919, 1922--4 (BNOC), and 1926. Début Scala, Milan, 1893 (Lucia), and NY Met. same year. Her Met. appearances were 1893--7, 1898--9, 1900--1, 1904--5, 1910. In 1897--8 toured USA with own co. and was member of Manhattan Opera Co. for several seasons from 1907. Also sang with Chicago Opera. Final operatic appearance CG 1926 as Mimi (recording exists). V. notable for purity, freshness, and brilliance of ornamentation in coloratura roles. Finest parts were Gilda, Mimi, Violetta, Desdemona, Nedda, and Marguerite. In 1896 in NY inadvisedly sang the Siegfried Brünnhilde. At CG her supremacy enabled her to dictate casting of operas in which she sang. Her stage name was adopted in tribute to Melbourne. The ice-cream sweet pêche Melba and Melba toast are named after her. D.B.E. 1918, G.B.E. 1929.

Melchior, Lauritz (b Copenhagen, 1890; d Santa Monica, Calif., 1973). Danish-born ten. (Amer. citizen 1947). Studied Copenhagen, making début there as bar. in Pagliacci, 1913. Début as ten. (Tannhäuser) 1918, at suggestion of Mme. Charles Cahier. Studied 1921--3 with Biegel in London, Grenzebach in Berlin, Anna Mildenburg in Munich, and Karl Kittel in Bayreuth. Début London CG as Siegmund in Die Walküre opposite F. Leider, then 1926--9. Studied Wagner roles at Bayreuth, singing there 1924--31. Amer. début NY Met. 1926, continuing there until 1950. One of most famous Wagnerian Heldentenors, singing Tristan over 200 times and appearing often as Siegfried, Lohengrin, Siegmund, and Parsifal.

Melisma (Gr. 'song'; plural melismata). A group of notes sung to a single syllable, as opposed to coloratura. Used in plainsong and in other song. Melismata is title of vocal pieces (madrigals, etc.) pubd. 1611 by Thomas Ravenscroft.

Melkus, Eduard (b Baden, Austria, 1928). Austrian violinist. Studied Vienna Univ. and Acad. of Mus. Début Vienna 1944. Teaches vn. and va., Vienna Hochschule für Musik. Founder, Vienna Capella Academica, specializing in 18th-cent. works on authentic instr.

Lecturer at Cambridge 1945--8, Birmingham Univ. 1948--60, Pittsburgh Univ. 1960--3. Prof. of mus., York Univ., 1964--81. Interested in bridging gap between symphonic mus., jazz, pop, and folk mus. Has written books on Couperin and Amer. mus. Works incl. cantatas, song-cycles, chamber mus., and songs. O.B.E. 1982.

Mellophone. Brass instr. of semi-conical bore, coiled in circular shape and played with a cup mouthpiece. Has 3 piston valves. Sometimes used as substitute for French hn., being easier to play but not so rich in tone.

Melodia. Org. stop of Hohlflöte type popular in USA, of 8' length and pitch.

Melodic Minor Scale. See Scale.

Mélodie (melody). Term applied to Fr. solo song with acc., counterpart of the Ger. Lied.

Melodien (Melodies). Work for orch. by Ligeti, comp. 1971, f.p. Nuremberg 1971.

Melodrama. Dramatic comp., or part of play or opera, in which words are recited to a mus. commentary. Popularized late in 18th cent. Where one or two actors are involved, 'monodrama' or 'duodrama' is term used. J. A. Benda's Ariadne auf Naxos (1774) and Medea (1775) are early examples. Mozart used melodramatic monologues in Zaide (1780). Fibich wrote a trilogy Hippodamia (1888--91). Famous operatic examples occur in the dungeon scene of Beethoven's Fidelio, the Wolf's Glen in Weber's Der Freischütz, Gertrude's aria in Marschner's Hans Heiling, and the Prologue to Strauss's Ariadne auf Naxos. Other examples are R. Strauss's Enoch Arden (1898), Honegger's Jeanne d'Arc au bûcher (1935), Bliss's Morning Heroes (1930), and Vaughan Williams's An Oxford Elegy (1949). The word has also come to mean an over-dramatic play, hence the adjective 'melodramatic', but in amusical connotation the orig. meaning is conveyed.

Melodramma (It.). 17th-cent. term for opera. Nothing to do with melodrama.

Melody (from Gr. 'Melos'). A succession of notes, varying in pitch, which have an organized and recognizable shape. Melody is 'horizontal', i.e. the notes are heard consecutively, whereas in harmony notes are sounded simultaneously ('vertical'). The mus. of many primitive races still remains purely melodic, as does European folk-song and also plainsong. Many apparently simple folk melodies will be found, on examination, however, to be highly organized, e.g. as regards the use at different pitch levels of some simple, brief motif, the adroit use of a high note as a point of climax, etc.; many such melodies will be found to be cast in some definite form, such as Simple Ternary form. Rhythm is an important element in melody, whether it be the prose rhythm of primitive mus., plainsong, and the comps. of some modern composers, or the metrical rhythm of most other mus. Indeed this element is so much a governing factor in the effect of a melody that if, while the notes of a popular melody are left intact, the rhythm is drastically altered, it becomes difficult to recognize the melody. The rhythm of many melodies is extraordinarily subtle and repays close study. Once harmony had become an element in mus. it began to influence melody in this way---that melodic passages are often found to be based on the notes of a chord (with or without added decorative or intermediate notes). It is difficult to define 'originality' in melody. Apparently it lies mainly in mere detail, since, on critical examination, what we accept as an orig. melody is often found closely to resemble some previous and quite well-known melody. It is often difficult to see what has led to the popularity of a particular melody, or what it is that gives some melodies durability while others prove to be merely ephemeral; however, it will generally be found that the long-lived melodies possess the valuable quality of logical organization. Racial and nat. feeling expresses itself strongly in melody, particular scales, intervals, and rhythms being typical of the mus. of particular races or nations. The word is also sometimes used as the title for a small, simple piece, e.g. Rubinstein's Melody in F.

Melophone. Wind instr. with free-beating reeds, air being supplied by bellows operated by right hand and concealed in body of guitar or vc. Invented 1837 by Leclerc of Paris.

Melos Ensemble. Eng. instr. ensemble formed 1950 by Cecil Aronowitz (va.), Gervase de Peyer (cl.), Richard Adeney (fl.), and Terence Weil (vc.) as a group of up to 12 players (str. quintet, wind quintet, harp, and pf.). Took part in f.p. of Britten's War Requiem (1962). Amer. début 1966.

Melos Quartet of Stuttgart. Ger. string qt. founded in 1965. Won Geneva int. comp. 1966. Recorded all Beethoven qts. 1968--70. Personnel unchanged in first 20 years of existence.

Melusina, The Fair (Märchen von die schönen Melusine). Ov. in C major by Mendelssohn, Op. 32, comp. 1833 and prompted by Conradin Kreutzer's opera Melusine.

Membranophone. Term for mus. instr. which produce sound from tightly stretched membranes, either struck (as in drums) or 'singing' (as the kazoo). One of four classifications of instr. devised by C. Sachs and E. M. von Hornbostel and pubd. in Zeitschrift für Ethnologie, 1914. Other categories are aerophones, chordophones, and idiophones, to which electrophones have been recently added.

Memento Vitae (Memory of Life). Conc. for orch. in homage to Beethoven by Musgrave, comp. 1969--70, f.p. Glasgow 1970, cond. Loughran.

Mendelssohn (Mendelssohn-Bartholdy), Fanny Cäcilie (b Hamburg, 1805; d Berlin, 1847). Ger. amateur pianist and composer, sister of Felix Mendelssohn. Published 6 of her songs with her brother's, and (in her own name) 2 books of Lieder ohne Worte for pf., also oratorio, songs, and part- songs. Married painter Wilhelm Hensel in 1829.

Mendelssohn (Mendelssohn-Bartholdy), (Jakob Ludwig) Felix (*b*Hamburg, 1809; d Leipzig, 1847). Ger. composer, pianist,organist, and cond. Grandson of Moses Mendelssohn, philosopher, and son of banker Abraham who added Bartholdy to his surname when he became Protestant Christian. Felix was 2nd of 4 children, eldest being Fanny Mendelssohn, almost as good a pianist as her brother. His first pf. lessons were from his mother and in Berlin he was taught harmony by Karl Zelter. Boy prodigy as pianist, making public début at 9. In 1819 his setting of Ps. 19 was sung by Berlin Singakademie. In 1821 Zelter took him to Weimar to visit Goethe, a warm friendship developing between the 72-year-old poet and the boy of 12, who was already a prolific composer. His comic opera, Die Hochzeit des Camacho was completed 1825 and produced 1827. In 1826, at age 17, he comp. the ov. to A Midsummer Night's Dream, adding the remainderof the incidental mus. 16 years later. Attended Berlin Univ. 1826--9, and finally determined upon mus. as a profession. In Mar. 1829, he cond. Bach's St Matthew Passion at the Singakademie (its first perf. since Bach's death in 1750), one of his many services to the Bach revival. Visited Eng. 1829, giving one of first perfs. there of Beethoven's 'Emperor' conc. From the outset he received adulation from Eng. public. Before leaving, toured Scotland and was inspired by scenery to write Hebrides ov. Toured Ger., Austria, and It. in next 2 years, composing 2 syms. and publishing 1st book of Lieder ohne Worte. Further visits to London 1832 and 1833 (when he cond. f.p. of his Italian Sym.). Appointed cond., Lower Rhine Mus. Fest., Düsseldorf 1833--6 and cond. of Leipzig Gewandhaus Orch. 1835--46. Married 1837 and in next few years wrote several ofhis finest works, incl. Lobgesang, the Variations Sérieuses, and vn. conc. Organized new cons. of mus. at Leipzig, becoming dir. when it opened in 1843 as well as teaching pf. and comp., with Schumann as associate. Made 8th visit to Britain 1844, and returned in 1846 to cond. f.p. of oratorio Elijah at Birmingham Fest. Last (10th) visit was in 1847, when he conducted Elijah in London, Manchester, and Birmingham, and played for Queen Victoria and Prince Albert. Severe overwork, combined with the shock of his sister Fanny's sudden death in May 1847, led to his own death in Nov. of that year. Mendelssohn's gifts were phenomenal. He was a good painter, had wide literaryknowledge, and wrote brilliantly. He was a superb pianist, a good violist, anexceptional organist, and an inspiring cond. He had an amazing mus. memory. Hewas generous to other musicians, and keen to raise standards of popular taste. His genius as a composer led Bülow to describe him as the most complete master of form after Mozart. In him, a classical upbringing was combined with romantic inclination, imparting to his work a poetic elegance which has caused it to be regarded as superficial because of its lack of impassioned features. The popularity of his work in the 19th cent. was followed by a severe reaction, partly caused by a feeling that his life had been too comfortably easy, but the pendulum has swung again and the best qualities of his music, its craftsmanship, restraint, poetry, inventive orchestration, and melodic freshness are now highly valued. Prin. works:

Ménestrel (Fr.). Minstrel. Type of Fr. public mus. entertainer in 14th cent., orig. called ménestrier, the profession being known as ménéstrandie. Spreading over the channel to Eng., the term became `minstrel'. The minstrels (in effect professional musicians) formed a guild c.1350. See also Jongleurs, Meistersinger, and Minnesinger.

Mengelberg, (Josef) Willem (b Utrecht, 1871; d Zuort, Switz., 1951). Dutch cond. Studied Cologne Cons. (cond. under F. Wüllner). Mus. dir., Lucerne 1891. Appointed permanent cond. of Concertgebouw Orch. of Amsterdam 1895, remaining until 1945 and making it one of the great orchs. of the world. He particularly championed works of Mahler and Strauss in early years of 20th cent., winning friendship and admiration of both composers, who went to Amsterdam to conduct the orch. in their own works. Strauss ded. Ein Heldenleben to Mengelberg and the orch. In 1920 Mengelberg held a fest. in Amsterdam at which all Mahler's syms. and other major works were perf., the first such proclamation of faith in the composer. Cond. NY P.O., 1921--9. Prof. of mus., Utrecht Univ. from 1933. Frequent guest cond. of Eng. orchs. In 1945, because of alleged collaboration with the Nazi conquerors of Holland, was forbidden by Dutch govt. to `exercise his profession in public in any matter whatever for a period of 6 years 1945--51'. He died in exile in the 6th year of this `sentence', the justice of which is now questioned.

Menotti, Gian Carlo (b Cadegliano, It., 1911). It.-born composer, librettist, and cond., mainly resident in USA and Scotland. Taught as child by mother and wrote 2 operas before he was 15. Studied Milan Cons. 1924--7, then, on Toscanini's advice, at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, under Rosario Scalero, 1928--34 (taught there 1948--55). His tendency as composer was always towards opera and his first adult essay, Amelia Goes to the Ball, was cond. by Reiner in 1937 and later at NY Met. As with all his operas, he wrote his own lib. First outstanding success was in 1946 with The Medium, but this was eclipsed in 1950 by The Consul, dealing with the plight of refugees at the mercy of heartless bureaucracy. Amahl and the Night Visitors was the first opera to be written for TV in America. His works have achieved considerable popularity and his intention to bring opera nearer to the Broadway theatregoer has been achieved if at some cost in originality of expression. But of his dramatic effectiveness and melodic gift there can be no doubt. Founded Fest. of Two Worlds at Spoleto, It., 1958. Wrote lib. for Barber's opera Vanessa (1957). Works incl.:

operas: Amelia Goes to the Ball (Amelia al Ballo) (1934--7); The Old Maid and the Thief (1939); The Island God (1942, withdrawn); The Medium (1945); The Telephone (1946); The

ballets: Sebastian (1944); Errand into the Maze (1947); The Unicorn, the Gorgon, and the Manticore (1956).

cantatas: The Death of the Bishop of Brindisi (1963); Landscares and Remembrances (1976).

instrumental: Pf. Conc. in F (1945); Apocalypse for orch. (1951); Vn. Conc. in A minor (1952); Triple Conc. a Tre, for 9 soloists (1970); Sym. The Halcyon (1976).

Mensural Music. In the 13th to 16th cents. the contrast to musica plana (plainsong). It is polyphonic mus. in which every note has a strictly determined value, distinct from the free rhythm of Gregorian chant.

Mensural Notation. System of mus. notation est. c.1250 by Franco of Cologne and used until 1600. All shapes of notes and pauses had definite time values, in contrast with system of preceding epoch (modal notation) in which pattern of series of ligatures was key to required values. Basis of modern system.

Menuet (Fr.), Menuett (Ger.). See Minuet. The spelling Menuetto, used by Beethoven, is incorrect.

Menuhin, Hephzibah (b San Francisco, 1920; d London, 1981). Amer. pianist, sister of Yehudi Menuhin. Début, San Francisco 1928. Soloist in concs. and frequent recitalist with her brother. Settled in Australia 1938, but continued to tour.

Menuhin, Yehudi (b NY, 1916). Amer. violinist and cond. Child prodigy. First public recital San Francisco 1924. Studied with A. Busch and G. Enescu. Début with orch. San Francisco 1926, NY 1927. In 1929 played concs. by Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms in one programme with Berlin P.O. cond. Walter, in Berlin, Dresden, and Paris. London début 1929, LSO cond. F. Busch. In 1932 recorded Elgar's conc., cond. by composer, and played work under his baton in Paris 1933. First recitals with sister Hephzibah in NY, London, and Paris 1934, followed by world tour of 73 cities. His career and talent continued beyond the 'prodigy' years. Bartók wrote the solo vn. sonata for him (1944). Gave many concerts for troops during World War II. After war continued his career as most famous of modern vn. virtuosi, but settled in Eng. and also began to conduct in 1957 (fest. at Gstaad). Art. dir. Bath Fest. 1959-69, conducting many concerts with own chamber orch. US début as cond. 1966. Founded Menuhin Sch. of Mus., now at Stoke d'Abernon, Surrey, 1963. Did much to encourage Western interest in Indian mus. Hon. K.B.E. 1965.

Mephisto Waltzes (Mephistowalzer). Mephisto is abbreviation for Mephistopheles. 4 works by Liszt. No. 1, orig. for orch. as No. 2 (Der Tanz in der Dorfschenke) of 2 Episodes from Lenau's Faust (before 1861), was transcr. for pf. solo and pf. duet (1881); No. 2, orig. for orch., transcr. pf. solo and duet (1881); No. 3 for pf. (1883) orch. Riesenauer; No. 4 for pf. (1885, pubd. 1952).

Mer, La (The Sea). 3 symphonic sketches for orch. by Debussy comp. 1903-5, f.p. Paris 1905; London 1908 (cond. Debussy). Movements are named De l'Aube à midi sur la mer (From dawn to noon on the sea), Jeux de vagues (Play of the waves), and Dialogue du vent et de la mer (Dialogue of the wind and the sea).

Merbecke (Merbeck, Marbeck, Marbecke), John (b Windsor, c.1510; d Windsor, c.1585). Eng. composer and organist. Chorister, St George's Chapel, Windsor, 1531, organist 1541. Condemned to death as heretic 1543, but pardoned. In 1550 wrote first setting of prayer-book liturgy as authorized by 1549 Act of Uniformity. Compiled first biblical concordance in Eng. and wrote theological pamphlets. Also comp. mass and motets.

Mercadante, (Giuseppe) Saverio (Raffaele) (b Altamura, 1795; d Naples, 1870). It. composer. Pupil of Zingarelli, Naples 1816--20. Early works were instr. and choral, but turned to opera in 1819 and wrote nearly 60 up to 1856. With Il giuramento (1837), he threw off the Rossinian idiom of his earlier works and developed greater dramatic power in the orch. in the style of Meyerbeer, but his works have failed to hold the stage except for occasional perfs. in Italy and in concert versions in Vienna. Maestro di cappella Novara Cath., 1833. Dir., Naples Cons., 1840--70. Wrote 17 masses, orch. fantasies, songs, etc. Operas incl. Maria Stuarda, Elisa e Claudio (1821); Amleto (1822); Don Chisciotte (1829); Francesca da Rimini (1830--1); I briganti (1836); Il bravo (1839); La Vestale (1840); and Violetta (1853). Blind from 1862.

Mercure, Pierre (b Montreal, 1927; d Avallon, 1966). Canadian composer. Studied Quebec, later in Paris with Boulanger and Tanglewood with Dallapiccola. Bassoonist, Montreal S.O. 1947--52. Worked as producer of TV programmes for CBC Fr. network 1952--66. Worked with musique concrète and elec. methods.

Meriläinen, Usko (b Tampere, Finland, 1930). Finn. composer. Studied Sibelius Acad., Helsinki, and with Vogel in Switz. Chorusmaster at Finnish Opera. Works incl. 4 syms., 2 pf. concs., Concerto for Orchestra, str. qt., etc.

Merkel, Gustav (b Oberoderwitz, 1827; d Dresden, 1885). Ger. composer and organist. Court organist, Dresden, from 1864 and prof., Dresden Cons. from 1861. Wrote 9 org. sonatas, many choral preludes, and other works.

Merrick, Frank (b Clifton, Glos., 1886; d London, 1981). Eng. pianist and composer. Studied with Leschetizky in Vienna 1898--1901 and 1905. First public appearance, Clifton 1895; London début 1903. Diploma of Honour, Rubinstein Competition, St Petersburg, 1910. Prof. of pf., RCM 1911--29. On staff RCM 1929--56, TCL 1956--75. Comps. incl. 2 pf. concs. and 'completion' of Schubert's 'Unfinished' Sym., also settings of Esperanto poems. Espoused cause of many unfashionable composers and of Brit. composers, e.g. Ireland, Bax, Rawsthorne, etc. C.B.E. 1978.

Merrie England. Light opera in 2 acts by German to lib. by Basil Hood, introducing Queen Elizabeth I, Raleigh, and other Elizabethan characters. Prod. London 1902.

Merrill (orig. Miller), Robert (b Brooklyn, NY, 1917). Amer. bar. Studied with his mother, Lillian Miller, and later with Margolis in NY. Début Trenton 1944. Won Met. Auditions of Air, 1945, making début there in Dec. 1945 as Germont père in La traviata. Sang in Toscanini opera recordings. Long career at Met. in roles such as Figaro, Rigoletto, Iago, and Scarpia. CG début 1967 (Germont père).

Merry Widow, The (Die lustige Witwe). Operetta in 3 acts by Lehár to lib. by V. Léon and L. Stein after Meilhac's comedy L'Attaché. Prod. Vienna 1905 (first Widow was Mizzi Günther), London (Lily Elsie) and NY 1907. Merry Widow's name is Hanna Glawari.

Merry Wives of Windsor, The (Nicolai). See Lustigen Weiber von Windsor, Die.

Mersenne (Mersennus), Marin (b La Soultière, Maine, France, 1588; d Paris, 1648). Fr. theologian, mathematician, and mus. theorist. Wrote Harmonie universelle (2 vols. 1636--7). Valuable source of information on contemporary instr.

Merulo (orig. Merlotti), Claudio (b Correggio, 1533; d Parma, 1604). It. organist, publisher, and composer. Organist, Brescia 1556, St Mark's Venice, 1557--84. Wrote motets, madrigals, and sacred songs, also opera in madrigal-style La tragedia (Venice 1574). Org., ducal chapel, Parma, from 1584.

Messa di Voce (It.). Placing of the voice. Practice in bel canto of singing a crescendo then a diminuendo on a held note. Not to be confused with mezza voce.

Messager, André (Charles Prosper) (b Montluçon, 1853; d Paris, 1929). Fr. composer, organist, and cond. Studied Paris, teachers incl. Saint-Saëns. Organist, St Sulpice, 1874. Cond., Paris Opéra-Comique 1898--1903, 1919--20. Cond. f.p. of Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande (1902), which is ded. to him. Art. dir. CG 1901--6, dir. and chief cond. Paris Opéra 1907--15. Cond. Société des Concerts du Cons., 1908--19 (touring Argentina 1916, USA 1918). Wrote several successful light operas. Works incl.:

ballets: Les deux pigeons (1886), Le Chevalier aux fleurs (1897). Also wrote sym. and pf. pieces.

Messa per i defunti (Mass for the Dead). See Requiem.

Messchaert, Johannes (b Holland, 1857; d Zürich, 1922). Dutch bar. Studied under Wüllner and Stockhausen and became outstanding interpreter of Christus in Bach's St Matthew Passion. Sang bass part in Elgar's Dream of Gerontius, Düsseldorf 1902. Taught in Berlin from 1911 and in Zürich from 1920.

Messe des Morts (Mass of the Dead). See Requiem. For that by Berlioz, see Grand' Messe des Morts.

Messiaen, Olivier (Eugène Prosper Charles) (b Avignon, 1908). Fr. composer, organist, and teacher. Studied Paris Cons. 1919--30, studying comp. with (among others) Caussade, Dupré, and Dukas. In his youth he studied Indian and Greek mus. rhythms, plainchant, and folk mus. He also notated the songs of all French birds, classifying them by region. Several of his works quote and make great use of birdsong. In 1931 he became organist of L'Église de la Trinité, Paris, holding the post ever since. In 1936 he became a teacher at the École Normale de Musique and Schola Cantorum, and founded Jeune France, a group of young musicians, with Jolivet, Daniel Lesur, and Baudrier. He was imprisoned by the Germans for 2 years during the war, but on release, 1942, he was appointed a teacher at Paris Cons. (harmony, then analysis from 1947 and comp. from 1966). His pupils have incl. Boulez, Stockhausen, Barraqué, Xenakis, Amy, Sherlaw Johnson, and Goehr. His 2nd wife, the pianist Yvonne Loriod, has exercised great influence on his work. Messiaen's mus., which is among the most influential and idiosyncratic of the century, is compounded from his deep Catholic faith, his celebration of human love, and his love of nature. He gave a new dimension of colour and intensity to org. mus., making special use of acoustic reverberations and contrasts of timbres. His harmony, rich and chromatic, derives from Debussy's use of 7ths and 9ths and modal progressions of chords. In his orch. works he makes use of the ondes Martenot in the vast Turangalîla-symphonie and of exotic perc.instrs., giving an oriental effect. Birdsong is also a major feature. His treatment of rhythm is novel, involving irregular metres, some of them originating in ancient Gr. procedures. Messiaen also acknowledges the supremacy of melody. Prin. works:

orch: Le Banquet eucharistique (1928); Les Offrandes oubliées (1930); Hymne au Saint Sacrement (1932); L'Ascension (1933); Turangalîla-symphonie (1946--8); Réveil des oiseaux (1953); Oiseaux exotiques (1955--6); Chronochromie (1960); 7 Hai-Kai (1962); Couleurs de la cité céleste (1963); Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum (1964); Des canyons aux étoiles (1970--4).

vocal and choral: 2 Ballades de Villon, v. and pf. (1921); 3 Mélodies, sop. and pf. (1930); Mass, 8 sop. and 4 vn. (1933); Vocalise, sop. and pf. (1935); Poèmes pour Mi, sop. and pf. (1936) with orch. (1937); O sacrum convivium (1937); Chants de terre et de ciel (1938); 3 Petites Liturgies de la présence divine, women's ch., pf., ondes Martenot, and orch. (1944); Harawi, chant d'amour et de mort, sop. and pf. (1945); 5 Rechants, 12 unacc. vv. (1949); La Transfiguration de Notre Seigneur Jésus-Christ, ten., bar., ch., and orch. (1965--9).

(1943); Rondeau (1943); 20 Regards sur l'Enfant Jésus (1944); Cantéyodjayâ (1948); 4 Études de rythme (1949--50); Catalogue d'oiseaux (1956--8); La Fauvette des jardins (1972).

organ: Variations écossaises (1928); Le Banquet céleste (1928); Diptyque (1930); Apparition de l'Église éternelle (1932); L'Ascension (1934); La Nativité du Seigneur (1935); Les Corps glorieux (1939); Messe de la Pentecôte (1950); Livre d'orgue (1951); Verset pour la fête de la dédicace (1960); Méditations sur le mystère de la Sainte Trinité (1969).

misc. instr: Thème et Variations, vn. and pf. (1932); Fêtes des belles eaux, 6 ondes Martenot (1937); 2 Monodies en quart de ton, ondes Martenot (1938); Quatuor pour la fin du temps, vn., cl., vc., pf. (1940); Le Merle noir, fl. and pf. (1951); Timbres-durées, musique concrète (1952); Le Tombeau de Jean-Pierre Guézec, hn. (1971).

Messiah. Oratorio by Handel to lib. selected from scriptures by Charles Jennens. Comp. between 22 Aug. and 14 Sept. 1741, though parts are adaptations from otherworks by Handel. F.p. Dublin, 13 April 1742; London, 23 March 1743; Boston, Mass., 25 Dec. 1818 (extractsin NY 1770). There is no single definitive version, Handel having altered, rewritten, and added numbers for various perfs. It became the custom in the19th cent. to perf. Messiah with grossly inflated forces, butin the mid-20th cent. various performing edns. restored the work nearer to its original proportions and reverted to the correct tempo and rhythm for many nos. Mozart composed additional accs. for Messiah for an occasionwhen no org. was available to provide the figured bass, and these are still frequently used.

Messing (Ger.). Brass. So Messinginstrumente, brass instr.

Mesto (It.). Mourful, sad. So Mestizia, sadness.

Mesure (Fr.). (1) Measure, bar. (2) Time; e.g. à la mesure = /a tempo.

Metallophone. Percussion instr. comprising series of tuned metal bars arr. in a single or double row. Orff scored for it in some of his comps. Far Eastern versions influenced development of glockenspiel and vibraphone.

Metamorphosen. Study in C minor for 23 solo str. by R. Strauss, comp. 1945 as a lament for the destruction of the Ger. cultural world in which he had lived. Quotes from funeral march of Beethoven's Eroica Sym. F.p. Zürich 1946 cond. Paul Sacher; f. Eng. p. London, Dec. 1946 (Boyd Neel Orch.).

Metamorphoses after Ovid, Six. Work for solo ob., Op. 49, by Britten, comp. 1951. Movements are entitled Pan, Phaeton, Niobe, Bacchus, Narcissus, and Arethusa.

Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber, Symphonic (Hindemith). See Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber.

Metamorphosis. Term used to describe manner in which composer may change tempo, rhythm, and notes of a theme yet preserve its essential and recognizable characteristics. Employed by Liszt in his symphonic poems and by Elgar and Franck in syms. Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Weber and Britten's 6 Metamorphoses after Ovid are modern examples of the device. Strauss's use of the term in his Metamorphosen refers to Goethe, not to mus. form.

Metastasio (orig. Trapassi), Pietro Antonio Domenico Bonaventura (b Rome, 1698; d Vienna, 1782). It. poet and librettist. Pubd. first work at 14 and later enjoyed protection of the singer Marianna Benti-Bulgarelli. Lived in Vienna as court poet from 1730 and devoted himself to providing composers with opera libs., mainly on classical subjects. They were set over 800 times by different composers. Some texts from his vast output were used up to 70 times. Artaserse was set by 40 composers. Among those who set his libs. were Galuppi, Gluck, Handel, Hasse (who set nearly all), Jommelli, Ko;akzeluh, Mercadante, Meyerbeer, Mozart, Paisiello, Piccinni, Spontini, etc. Gluck's opera reforms were directed against the highly formal, artificial, and conventional nature of Metastasio's works, with the development of the plot being halted continually for displays of vocal agility. Among Metastasio's libs. were Didone abbandonata, La Clemenza di Tito, and Il Rè Pastore.

Metre. Term used of regular succession of rhythmical impulses, or beats, in poetry and mus., e.g. 3 :4 and 6 :8 being described as different kinds of metres. Rhythm is no longer accepted as a sufficiently precise definition, metre being considered as the basic pulse and rhythm as the actual time-patterns of the notes within a measure. E.g., in 3 :4 the 3 beats---strong, weak, weak---are metrical, while the time-values of the notes actually heard are the rhythm.

Metrical Psalm. A psalm versified in a regular syllabic metre which thus can be sung to a hymn-tune. Brought to Britain by Calvinists fleeing to Eng. and Scotland from Geneva. Famous treasury of Eng. sacred tunes is Sternhold and Hopkins's metrical psalter (London 1562). It was followed by other such psalters (Este's 1592, Ravenscroft's 1621, Playford's 1677, Tate and Brady's 1696).

Metric Modulation. Term and technique introduced by Amer. composer Elliott Carter for changing the rhythm (not necessarily the metre) from one section to another.

Metronome. Apparatus for sounding an adjustable number of beats per minute and therefore for fixing the tempo of a comp. An early form, called chronomètre, was available at end of 17th cent. and further experiments followed. That most commonly used is a clockwork model patented by Maelzel, who appropriated the idea from the Dutch inventor D. N. Winkel and est. a metronome factory in Paris, 1816. Consists of steel rod, about 7;FD" long by ;D1;E8" wide, pierced near top through which comes the pivot on which the rod oscillates. This rod, governed by a double pendulum, is suspended by a pivot in front of a wooden case and held perpendicular. By means of a weight, the pendulum may be made to oscillate between 40 and 208 times in a minute. Maelzel's graduated scale, fixed to the case, gives speed of oscillation. A spiral spring keeps the instrument beating for a considerable period. A composer who wants 78 quarter-note (crotchet) beats in 1 minute will write 'M.M. (Maelzel metronome) ;Ya = 78'. It should be mentioned that some composers' metronome markings are suspect. Eds. of early works have in many cases added metronome marks which they think are feasible. Elec. metronomes have been marketed by several firms, and there is a pocket-metronome, about the size of a watch, consisting merely of an adjustable pendulum. The ticking of Maelzel's metronome is supposed to have inspired the theme of the 2nd movement of Beethoven's 8th sym. Several 20th-cent. composers have incorporated the ticking of actual metronomes into their scores, e.g. Ligeti's symphonic poem for 100 metronomes and Gordon Crosse's Play Ground.

Metropolitan Opera House. Chief Amer. opera house, now a constituent of NY's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. Opened Sept., 1966, with Barber's Antony and Cleopatra.

Seating capacity 3,800. Orig. 'Met.' opened 1883, with Gounod's Faust. After first season, Leopold Damrosch was appointed art. dir., but died before his first season was over and was succeeded by Anton Seidl and by Walter Damrosch, son of Leopold, who remained until 1890--1, giving aloperas in Ger. Singers at the Met. in the period up to 1903 incl. Nilsson, Materna, Sembrich, Nordica, Eames, the de Reszkes, Calvé, Melba, Plan;alcon, Maurel, and Scotti. In 1903 Heinrich Conried became manager, engaging Caruso, Fremstad, Farrar, and Chaliapin. In 1907 he brought Mahler as cond., but resigned in 1908 and was followed by the joint direction of Andreas Dippel and Giulio Gatti-Casazza who engaged Toscanini as cond. Dippel resigned in 1910 and Gatti-Casazza remained until 1935. An outstanding occasion was the f.p. in 1910 of Puccini's La Fanciulla del West, with Caruso, Destinn, and Toscanini. Toscanini resigned in 1914--15 and was followed by a group of conductors among whom Bodanzky, Serafin, and Wolff were outstanding. During Gatti-Casazza's régime operas by Strauss, Janáček, Respighi, and others had their first Amer. performances. Gigli, Ponselle, Pinza, Flagstad, Leider, Melchior, Muzio, Jeritza, and Tibbett were among the principal singers. Gatti-Casazza's successor was Herbert Witherspoon, who died almost immediately and the management passed to Edward Johnson, a member of the company since 1922. In his 15 years he encouraged Amer. singers, e.g. Warren, Peerce, Tucker, Traubel, Thebom, and strengthened the conducting by engaging Stiedry, Walter, Busch, Szell, Reiner, and others. From 1950 to 1972, Rudolf Bing was manager. In his régime stage techniques were modernized and theatrical producers engaged. He extended the season from 30 to 45 weeks. Great singers in his era incl. Callas, Tebaldi, Price, Merrill, de los Angeles, Bergonzi, and Siepi. Bing was succeeded by Gooran Gentele, who was killed before taking office, though not before he had appointed the Met.'s first mus. dir. Rafael Kubelik. The manager from 1973 was Schuyler Chapin. He appointed James Levine mus. dir. in 1975. Broadcasting from the Met. began in 1931. Since 1932 the Saturday matinées have been relayed nationally.

Mewton-Wood, Noel (b Melbourne, 1922; d London, 1953). Australian pianist. Studied at Melbourne Cons. and RAM, later with Schnabel. London début 1940. Regarded as one of greatest pianists of his day. Brilliant exponent of Bliss's conc., Tippett's 1st sonata, and of works by Busoni and Britten. Acc. Pears in song-cycles by Tippett. Gave f.p. of rev. version of Britten's pf. conc. 1946.

Meyer, Kerstin (Margareta) (b Stockholm, 1928). Swedish mez. Début Stockholm 1952 as Azucena in Il trovatore, then studied in Salzburg and Italy. Guest singer in opera Vienna, Venice, Hamburg, Berlin, since 1956. Sang in Eng. from 1960, esp. with Barbirolli and Hallé (Angel in Gerontius, Mahler, Chausson, etc.). Débuts CG (Dido in Berlioz's Les Troyens) and NY Met. 1960, Bayreuth 1962. Frequent appearances at Glyndebourne (début 1961 in Elegy for Young Lovers). Striking singing-actress, notably in modern operas. Created leading roles in operas by Maw, Goehr, Schuller, Searle, Henze, and Ligeti (Le grand macabre, 1978).

Meyer, Krzysztof (b Kraków, 1943). Polish composer, pianist, and writer. Studied Kraków and Amer. Cons., Fontainebleau. Prof. Kraków High School of Mus. Works incl. opera, 5 syms., 5 concs., 5 str. qts., pf. sonatas, etc.

Meyerbeer, Giacomo (really Jakob Liebmann Beer) (b Berlin, 1791; d Paris, 1864). Ger. composer who worked mainly in Paris. After receiving legacy from relative named Meyer converted his name into Meyerbeer. Child prodigy pianist, playing Mozart conc. in public at age 7. Studied counterpoint with Vogler at Darmstadt 1810--12, at which time he wrote 2 operas and an oratorio. His comic opera was a failure in Vienna, where he was urged by Salieri to study vocal methods in It. He fell under Rossini's spell in 1815 and wrote 6 It. operas between 1817 and 1824, all successful, especially Il Crociato in Egitto. Weber advised him to turn to Ger. opera, but after the Paris première of Il Crociato in 1826 he concentrated on Fr. opera, spending the next few years assimilating Fr. history and character. He collaborated with the librettist Scribe and their first opera, Robert le Diable, in 5 acts and on a grand scale, was an unprecedented success. This was followed by Les Huguenots and Le Prophète. He was Generalmusikdirektor in Berlin 1842–9, during which time he wrote Ein Feldlager in Schlesien for Jenny Lind, later incorporating some of its motifs into L'Étoile du Nord. The success of Meyerbeer's pageant-like operas irked Wagner (who nevertheless learned from them in early works like Rienzi) and Meyerbeer, born of Jewish parentage, was bitterly attacked in Wagner's pamphlet Das Judentum in der Musik in spite of the fact that Meyerbeer had assisted him early in his career. He returned to Paris in 1863 to supervise rehearsals of his longest opera, L'Africaine, on which he had been working for nearly 25 years but he became ill and died. It had been customary to deride Meyerbeer for aneclecticism which lacked sufficient inner conviction to give his operas life beyond their day and away from the spectacular dramatic productions they received in Paris. Revivals of his operas, however, have revealed virtues which were his alone, and, as with so many other figures in musical history, it would be rash to write him off as forgotten. Principal works:

operas: Jephtas Gelübde (1812), Wirth und Gast (1813, rev. 1820 as Alimelek), Romilda e Costanza (1817), Semiramide Riconosciuta (1819), Emma di Resburgo (1819), Margherita d'Anjou (1820), L'esule di Granata (1822), Il Crociato in Egitto (1824), Robert le Diable (1831), Les Huguenots (1836), Ein Feldlager in Schlesien (1844, rev. 1847 as Vielka), Le Prophète (1849), L'Étoile du Nord (1854), Le Pardon de Ploërmel or Dinorah (1859), L'Africaine (1863–64). Also wrote oratorio, marches, songs, and church music.

Meyerowitz, Jan (orig. Hans-Hermann) (b Breslau, 1913). Ger.-born composer (Amer. citizen since 1951). Studied Berlin Hochschule für Musik 1930–3 with Zemlinsky and in Rome 1933–7 with Casella and Respighi. Settled in USA 1946, teaching at Tanglewood, Brooklyn, and in NY. Works incl. 7 operas, e.g. Esther (1957); choral works incl. The Glory Around His Head (1955), Stabat Mater, e.e. cummings Cantata (1949–56), Emily Dickinson Cantata (1948), Robert Herrick Cantata (1948–54); Sym. Midrash Esther (1957); fl. conc., vc. sonata, songs, etc.

Mezzo, mezza (It.). Half. Mezza voce, half-voice, i.e. half the vocal (or instr.) power possible. (Not to be confused with Messa di voce.) Mezzo-forte, half-loud, i.e. neither loud nor soft.

Mezzo-Soprano (It.). Half-soprano. Female (or artificial male) v. midway between sop. and contr. Several operatic roles written for sophs. are traditionally sung by and better suited to mezzos, e.g. Dorabella in Così fan tutte, Carmen, Oktavian in Der Rosenkavalier, the Composer in Ariadne auf Naxos. Occasionally a singer will describe herself as 'mezzo-contralto', meaning a little lower in range than mez.

M.G. = Main gauche (Fr.). Left hand.

Mi. (1) The 3rd degree of the major scale, according to the system of vocal syllables derived from Guido d'Arezzo (see Hexachord), and so used (spelt Me) in Tonic Sol-fa, in which it is also the 5th degree of the minor scale. In many countries, however, the name has become attached (on 'fixed-doh' principles) to the note E, in whatever key it may occur. (2) Messiaen's intimate name for his first wife, the violinist Claire Desnos, for whom he wrote his Poèmes pour Mi.

Miaskovsky. See Myaskovsky, Nikolay.

Micheau, Janine (b Toulouse, 1914; d Paris, 1976). Fr. sop. Studied Toulouse and Paris. Début Paris 1933. Paris Opéra from 1936, creating title-roles of Milhaud's Médée (1940) and Manuela in his Bolivar (1950). CG 1937 (Micaela in Carmen), San Francisco 1938, Chicago 1956. Prof. of singing, Paris Cons. from 1960. Notable Mélisande and Micaela.

Michelangeli, Arturo Benedetto (b Brescia, 1920). It. pianist. Studied Brescia and Milan Cons. 1st prize Geneva Int. Mus. Competition 1939. Eng. début 1946. Remarkable artist, but appearances infrequent.

Michelangelo Buonarroti, Suite on Verses of. 11 settings by Shostakovich, Op. 145, for bass and pf., comp. 1974, f.p. Leningrad 1975. Orch. version, Op. 145a, 1974, f.p. Moscow 1975.

Michelangelo Sonnets (Britten). See Seven Sonnets of Michelangelo.

Mi contra Fa. The tritone (interval of 3 whole tones), from F up or down to B, difficult to sing, thus giving rise to the saying 'Mi contra fa diabolus est in musica' ('Mi against fa ;obthe Hexachord system names for these notes;cb is the devil in music').

Microtone. All intervals which lie between the semi-tones of the 12-note, equal-tempered tuning system. Several 20th-cent. composers have experimented in microtones and quarter-tones. Joseph Yasser proposed a scale of 19 notes per octave and Adriaan Fokker 31 per octave, but little mus. has been written using these temperaments because instrs. are not designed to play them. Elec. instrs., however, enable division of intervals otherthan the octave in equal intervals, as in Stockhausen's Gesang der Jünglinge. Among the earliest composers to employ microtones were Ives, Bartók, and Bloch but as incidental features. More systematic use was devised by A. Hábá, J. Carrillo, and H. Partch.

Militärtrommel (Ger.). Side drum.

Military band. This term is used in Britain to describe either an actual army (or naval or air-force) band or for one on the same model, i.e. comprising both brass and woodwind instr. The composition of such bands varies widely in different countries, and even in different regimental or other units of the same country. One common Brit. combination is as follows: (a) 1 picc. (or fl., or both); 1 ob.; 1 small cl., 12--14 ordinary cl., 2 bass cl.; 1 alto and 1 ten. sax; 2 bn. (b) 4 hn., 2 bars., 2 euphoniums, 4 bombardons. (c) 4 cornets; 2 tpt.; 3 tb. (d) 2 drummers with a variety of perc. instr. Sometimes, when conditions of perf. allow, 1 or 2 str. db. may appear, as an alternative to the same number of bass wind instr. Bands in USA vary from the above scheme merely in detail. The score and parts of the military band, unlike those of the brass band, employ the ordinary orch. system of notation. The term 'wind band' is used in USA.

Military, The. Nickname of Haydn's Sym. in G, No. 100 in Breitkopf edn., comp. 1794 in London. So called because of 'military' instrs. and solo tpt.-call in 2nd movement.

Minuet (Eng.), Menuet (Fr.), Menuett (Ger.), Minuetto (It.). Dance in triple time, orig. as Fr. rustic dance and adapted by the court in the 17th cent. So called because of small, dainty step (menu = small) which is characteristic. Soon taken up by composers of art mus. from Lully onwards and became one of optional movements of the Suite. It also occurred in ovs. by Bach and Handel. In 18th cent. it was used in syms. (and other forms) by Wagenseil, Haydn, Mozart, and others, becoming the standard 3rd movement until supplanted from Beethoven onwards by the scherzo. Normally in A|B|A form, the B section being a contrasting minuet called 'trio' because some Fr. composers wrote it in 3-part harmony or reduced the performers to 3. Note that, although Beethoven and other composers used it in their scores, the word Menuetto does not exist in any language.

Minute Waltz. Nickname for Chopin's Waltz in Db, Op. 64, No. 1, comp. 1847, on the assumption that it can be played in 1 minute---but only if played too fast.

Miracle. Nickname of Haydn's Sym. in D major, No. 96 in Breitkopf edn., comp. London 1791. So called in error because it used to be said thatat its f.p. in London on 11 Mar. 1791 the audience rushed forwardat the end to congratulate the composer, thereby escaping injury when a chandelier collapsed on to their vacated seats. Research has est. that this incidentoccurred during Haydn's 2nd visit to London, at a concert on 2 Feb. 1795 and that the sym. which had been played, and which therefore really deserves the nickname, was Haydn's No. 102 in Bb.

Miracle in the Gorbals. Ballet in 1 act, mus. by Bliss, lib. by M. Bentall, choreog. R. Helpmann. Prod. London 1944. The Gorbals is a notorious slum district of Glasgow.

Miracle Plays, Mysteries, and Moralities. The custom of teaching Bible stories by means of sacred dramas (often in church) is venerable. These dramas were known as Miracle Plays (or, simply, Miracles), another name, given by writers on the subject (apparently first in the 18th cent.), being Mystery. Of similar character were the plays which, personifying virtues and vices, taught moral lessons, e.g. Moralities. Religious plays of such types as these are recorded as early as the 4th cent. In Eng., there are records of them from the 11th to the 16th cents., some of the finest being perf. in York and Chester. Even today there are traces of them in the rural perfs. of mummers in the N. of Eng. (e.g. the play of St George and the Dragon). Corpus Christi (June) was in some cities a great occasion for plays in the streets (atChester 24 such played in a single day, moving to different locations, with all 24 given at each). Some of the plays involved a good deal of singing, and contained the seeds of the future masque, oratorio, and opera. In the 20th cent. several composers have based works on the old mystery plays, notably Stravinsky and Britten (whose Noye's Fludde is a fine example). Vaughan Williams described his opera based on Bunyan's The Pilgrim's Progress as a morality.

Miraculous Mandarin, The (A csodálatos mandarin). Pantomimein 1 act, Op. 19, by Bartók to scenario by Menyhért Lengyel,f.p. in Cologne 27 Nov. 1926. Orch. suite f.p. Budapest 1928. Modes. (1)^Names for each of the ways of ordering a scale, i.e. major mode and minor mode. (2)^The scales which dominated European mus. for 1,100 years (approx).

ad 1500) and strongly influenced composers for another hundred years (up to c. 1600). They have since reappeared from time to time in the work of some composers, especially in the 20th cent. Throughout that total period of 1,500 years the plainsong of the Church, which is entirely 'modal', has continued to accustom the ears of fresh generations to the melodic effect of the Modes. But the description 'Church Modes' or 'Ecclesiastical Modes' is wrong, since their use was general. The available mus. material at the time when the Modes became accepted was that which may be nowadays conveniently represented by the white keys of the pf. or org., the notes of which constitute (with slight differences of tuning) the scale worked out scientifically in the 4th cent.

ad the Greeks were using this scale in 7 different ways: Gr. influence was strong in the early Christian Church and changes in the modal system developed among singers as a practical measure. In the 5th cent. 4 modes were adopted (Authentic Modes) and at the time of Pope Gregory (c.540--604) 4 more were added (Plagal) and later 4 more, making 12. In the Authentic Modes, the 5th note (the Dominant), was much used as a reciting-note in plainsong, and the first (the Final), as a cadence-note, to close a passage. The Authentic Modes may be re-created by playing on the pf. octave scales of white notes beginning respectively on D, E, F, and G. A melody played in one of the modes and then in another will alter in some of its intervals and hence in its general effect, as opposed to a melody played in our 12 major or minor scales, which are all alike as to intervals. The Plagal Modes were merely new forms of the others, being the same 4 taken in a compass lying not between Final and Final of the corresponding authentic modes but between their Dominant and Dominant, the Final, on which the cadences fell, thus coming in the middle. In order to avoid having the Reciting Note at the very top or bottom of the series of notes a new one was chosen, lying 3 notes below the original, and this was now regarded as the Dominant. The whole series was now as follows (A = Authentic and P = Plagal): [bn [cl0][xfMode I (A)[sv1,1s] Range [sv2,1s] D-D[sv3,1s] with [sv4,1s] Dominant A^[sv5,1s] [va0,1,5][sv6,3s][vs7,6,29][vd0,2,7][dt7vg,1v,2v,3v,4v,5v] [cl8][rf[btMode I(A) [ntRange[qc[ntD-D [ntwith[qc[ntDominant A^ [et[btII (P)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntA-A [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsF^ [et[btIII (A)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntE-E [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsC;sd[fn1] [et[btIV (P)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntB-B [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsA^ [et[btV (A)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntF-F [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsC^ [et[btVI (P)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntC-C [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsA^ [et[btVII (A)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntG-G [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsD^ [et[btVIII (P)[qr[nt,,[qc[ntD-D [nt,,[qc[nt___,,[wsC;sd [et[xnNearly a thousand years after Gregory a Swiss monk, Henry of Glarus, or Henricus Glareanus, brought forth, in a book called Dodecachordon (1547), a theory that there should, historically, be 12 modes instead of 8. He added modes on A and C (none on the unsuitable B), with their Plagal forms, so that the table above was complemented as follows: [bn[el2] [cl0][xfXII (A)[sv1,1s] Compass [sv2,1s] A-A[sv3,1s] with [sv4,1s] Dominant G[sv5,1s] [va0,1,5][sv6,3s][vs7,6,29][vd0,2,7][dt7vg,1v,2v,3v,4v,5v] [cl8][rf[btIX [et[btVII.^Mixolydian [et[xn[el2]It should be clearlyunderstood that the difference between the various modes is not one of pitch but of the order in which fall the tones and semitones. Any mode could be takenat another than its original pitch (i.e. transposed), but in that case its intervals remained as before. Thus the whole series could be set out as beginningon C, when the Dorian and Lydian (to take two examples) would appear as follows: [bn[el2]The Authentic Modes shown uniformly with C as final (with the semitones marked) I.^Dorian.

 [ol30] V.^Lydian. [ol28] [xnWith the development of harmonized music the modal system in time tended to disintegrate: the two Authentic Modes added by Glareanus (the Ionian and ;jaolian) were felt to be the most suited to harmony and have remained as our`major' and `minor' scales. The other modes, however, are in use in plainsong, some folk-song, and occasionally in the work of certain composers such as Vaughan Williams, Bartók, and Kodály. [el4]Modinha.[fy75,1] Type of song (not folk song) popular in Portugal and Brazil in the 18th and 19th cents.

Mödl, Martha (b Nuremberg, 1912). Ger. sop., orig. mez. Studied Nuremberg. Opera début Remscheid 1942 as Cherubino. Modo(It.). (1) Manner, e.g. In modo di, in the manner of. (2) Mode (see Modes).

Modulation. The changing from one key to another in the course of a section of a comp. by evolutionary mus. means(not just by stopping and starting anew in another key) and as a part of the work's formal organization. The simplest and most natural modulations are to the related keys (or attendant keys) i.e. to the relative minor or major, to thedominant and its relative major or minor and to the subdominant and its relative minor or major. The tonicmajor and minor are also related keys, modulation from one to the other beingsimple, but they are not usually so described. Chromatic modulation, found frequently in Wagner, Franck, and Strauss, in general means altering a chord by means of a chromatic change. It can also be achieved by moving basses up or down major or minor 3rds. Enharmonic modulation covers the use of chords altered by enharmonic means, e.g. turning a dominant 7th chord to a Ger. 6th. Modulation becomesless of a feature in atonal mus. because of the enlargement of the scale. First composers to use modulation may have been Obrecht and Després. Chromatic modulation occurs in madrigals of Gesualdo and Monteverdi. John Bull's organ fantasia Ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la modulates a whole tone upward successively into different keys. With J. S. Bach, modulation became integral part of fugue.

Modulator.(1) Elec. device by which frequency or amplitude of a waveform can be changed.
(2) Diagram used in teaching of tonic sol-fa on which note-names are ranged in order perpendicularly.

Modus Lascivus. The Ionian mode, the same as the major scale of C.

Mono. Abbreviation for monophonic with special meaning in gramophone recording when long-playing records first appeared. Mono records were recorded on one channel requiring only one loudspeaker as opposed to stereophonic 2-channel recording. Gradually stereo ousted mono, but certain transfers from the pre-LP recording era can only be made in mono.

Monochord (Gr.). One string. (1) Scientific instr. consisting of soundbox over which is stretched a single string which can be divided at any point by a movable bridge, the position of which can be exactly determined by scale of measurements on the surface across which it moves. By altering the ratios in which the str. is vibrating, different notes of the harmonic series may be prod. Used in Ancient Egypt and Ancient Gr. and is still used by modern acousticians. (2) In later medieval times, monochords were made with 2 or 3 str., capable of emitting intervals and chords. These were ancestors of clavichord, sometimes called in It. monocordo.

Monocordo (It.). One string. Term used in str. playing to indicate when certain passage or whole piece is to be perf. entirely on one str. Orig. with Paganini in his 'Napoleon' Sonata for G str.

Monodrama (Gr.). Single play. Stage work involving only one character, e.g. Schoenberg's Erwartung, and Poulenc's La Voix humaine.

Monody, Monodic. Term sometimes used as synonym of monophonic mus. or for acc. solo song, but properly it is a particular kind of acc. solo song which developed c.1600 as a reaction against 16th-cent. polyphonic style. It is distinguished by recit.-like v.-part and figured-bass acc. The members of Bardi's Camerata in Florence wrote in monodic style, Caccini publishing a coll. of monodies, Le nuove musiche, in 1602. By 1613 it was adopted for instr. mus. e.g. in trio sonatas of Rossi and Marini.

Monophony, Monophonic (Gr.). One sound. Mus. which has a single melodic line of notes without harmonies or melody in counterpoint, as opposed to polyphony and homophony. Oldest typeof mus., being only type perf. in Ancient Gr., early church mus. (Gregorian etc.), and mus. of Minnesinger, Meistersinger, etc. All this mus. was in monophonic notation, which is a term covering several systems. For special 20th-cent. application, see Mono.
Monothematic[fy75,1] (Gr.). Having only one theme, and therefore applied to comp. or movements based on one subject, e.g. a figure. Finales of several Haydn syms. are examples of monothematic construction.

Monotone (Gr.). Recitation of liturgical text on unaltered pitch as in prayers, psalms, etc.

Monsieur Beaucaire. Operetta in prol. and 3 acts by Messager to book by Frederick Lonsdale and lyrics by Adrian Ross, based on story by Booth Tarkington. Prod. Birmingham, London, and NY 1919, Paris 1925.

Monsigny, Pierre Alexandre (b Fauquembergues, nr. St Omer, 1729; d Paris, 1817). Fr. composer. Not educated for mus. profession, though learned vn. Worked in noble household from 1749 and took comp. lessons after hearing Pergolesi's La serva padrona. After 5 months wrote operetta Les Aveux indiscrets (1759) which brought immediate fame. Wrote 12 more comicoperas, incl. La Belle Arsène (1773) and, said to be his finest, Le Déserteur (1769). Ceased composing 1777 at height of popularity, possibly unwilling to compete with Grétry. Succeeded Piccinni as Inspector at Paris Cons., 1800--02.

Montagnana, Domenico (b Lendinara, c.1687; d Venice, 1750). It. vn.-maker. Pupil of Goffriller in Venice; lived in Cremona and Venice. Also made vas. and vcs. His instr. are scarce and very valuable.

Monteverdi, Claudio (b Cremona, 1567; d Venice, 1643). It. composer. Chorister, Cremona Cath., and pupil of Ingegneri. At 16, when he was already a fine organist and viol player, he pubd. some sacred madrigals. Entered service of Duke of Mantua as viol player and singer of madrigals. Went with Duke on military expeditions to Danube and Flanders, 1595 and 1599. Heard and was influenced by Florentine operas of the Camerata, notably Peri's Euridice, 1600. His own first opera, La favola d'Orfeo was prod. in 1607, notable in history of mus. because for the first time the acc. was for a full (by the standards of the time) orch. The following year his Arianna was perf. at a ducal celebration in Mantua; only the Lamento, which was immediately popular, survives. He left Cremona after the death of the Duke in 1612 and in 1613 became Master of Mus. of the Venetian Republic. For St Mark's, Venice, he composed a superb stream of sacred works which spread his fame throughout Europe. He received a visit from Schütz and his works were studied by M. Praetorius in Ger., Mersenne in Fr., and Tomkins in Eng. 12 of the operas he had written in Mantua were destroyed there in 1630 when it was sacked by Austrian troops. In the same year the plague ravaged Venice; the combination of these catastrophes probably accounts for Monteverdi's admission to holy orders in 1632. When the first opera house, San Cassiano, was opened in Venice in 1637, Monteverdi's interest in opera was re-kindled and for the remaining 6 years of his life he comp. a series of works of which only 2 survive. Monteverdi's place in the history of Renaissance mus. can be justly compared to Shakespeare's in literature. Working from traditional beginnings, he transformed every genre in which he worked by imaginative use of available styles rather than by revolutionary means. His madrigals cover a period of 40 years, from publication of the 1st book in 1589 to the 8th in 1638 (the 9th was pubd. posthumously in 1651). He soon introduced instr. accs., and chromatic modulations, and the dramatic nature of the mus. foreshadows the solo cantata and operatic recit., culminating in Il combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda (1624) which is a miniature opera in style, acc. by str. and employing descriptive effects. His sacred mus. veered between elaborate traditional polyphony and an advanced concerted style in which elements from his secular madrigals and operas lend colour and drama to the text, as in the famous Vespers comp. for Mantua in 1610. The operas take the Florentine melodramatic and monodic form and embellish it with all that he learned from It. madrigalists and Fr. composers. They are, in effect, the first mus. dramas, making use of what came to be known as leitmotiv and deploying many startling dramatic devices. They are also the first operas in which the characters are recognizably human rather than symbolic figures. Above all, the melodic genius and fertility of his mus. and its harmonic adventurousness are what make it so attractive and 'contemporary' in the operas and ballets: [fy75,1] La favola d'Orfeo (1607); Arianna (1608, lost); Il ballo delle Ingrate (1608); Tirsi e Clori (1616); Favola di Peleo e di Theti (1617, lost); Il matrimonio d'Alceste con Admeto (1618, lost); Andromeda (1619, lost); Commento d'Apollo (1620, lost); La finta Pazza Licori (1627, lost); Mercurio e Marte (1628, lost); Adone (1639, lost); Le nozze d'Enea con Lavinia (1641, lost); Il Ritorno d'Ulisse in patria (1640); L'incoronazione di Poppea (1642).

Morasco. See Moresca.

Morceau (Fr.). Piece. So Morceau symphonique, Symphonic piece. (For Morceau d'ensemble see Ensemble.)

Morceaux en forme de poire, Trois (3 Pear-shaped pieces). Work for pf., 4 hands, by Satie, 1903, containing, title notwithstanding, 6 items. Orch. version by R. Désormière.

Mordent (from It. mordere, to bite). Mus. ornament shown by a sign over the note. There are Upper and Lower Mordents. In Ger. Mordent means only the Lower Mordent. Examples are: [bn[el2][dt5p10,1p4g,5p10][btUpper Mordent[qc(in German[qcPralltriller)][qc[ntUpper Mordent[qcwith inflected note[qc[xm33] [btLower Mordent[qc(in German simply[qcMordent)[qc[ntLower Mordent[qcwith inflected note[qc[xm33] [xn^In the case of the Upper Mordent these 'crushed in' notes are the main note itself and the note above; if the latter is to be inflected in any way the necessary sign (#|b|nat.|x|bb) appears above the mordent sign. In the case of the Lower Mordent the 'crushed in' notes consist of the note itself and the note below; if this latter is to be inflected in any way the necessary sign appears below the Lower Mordent sign (the interval is generally that of a semitone). There is a confusion of terminology. The terms 'Mordent' and 'Inverted Mordent' are very commonly used for the two forms, but some call the first one shown above the 'Mordent' and the second one the 'Inverted Mordent', and others reverse these titles. The one way of avoiding all misunderstanding is always to use the words 'Upper' and 'Lower'. In addition to these 2 forms, others were used by earlier composers but in modern edns. those are set out in full. See also Acciaccatura.

Moreau, Jean-Baptiste (b Angers, 1656; d Paris, 1733). Fr. composer, organist, and choirmaster. After holding church posts went to Paris 1686, composing divertissements for the court. Wrote incidental mus. for Racine's Esther (1689) and Athalie (1691).

Morendo (It. 'dying'). Instruction for the mus. to die away gradually, often used by Verdi(also by Beethoven, at end of slow movt. of str. qt. Op. 74).

Moresca (Moresco), Morisca (Morisco). A Moorish dance. Apparently the name (which was common from the 15th to 17th cents.) did not carry any fixed implications as to rhythm or style. Often it was applied to any rough-and-ready grotesque dance employing animal costumes, etc. In Arbeau's Orchésographie (1588--9), it is said that some performers blacked their faces to resemble Moors and wore bells on their legs; this has led to speculation that the Eng. Morris dance is a derivation.

Moresque (Fr.). Same as Moresca.

Morgenblätter (Morning leaves, or morning newspapers). Title of waltz, Op. 279, by Johann Strauss II comp. for Vienna Press Ball (1864).

Morhange, Charles Henri. Real name of Alkan.

Mörike-Lieder (Songs of Mörike). 53 songs by Hugo Wolf for solo v. and pf. to poems by the Ger. poet Eduard Friedrich Mörike (1804--75), comp. 1888, incl. Elfenlied, Gesang Weylas, Der Feuerreiter, and An die Geliebte. 11 of them were later orchestrated.

Morillo, Roberto Garcia (b Buenos Aires, 1911). Argentinian composer and critic. Studied with J.J. Castro and in Paris 1926--30. Taught at Nat. Cons., Buenos Aires; mus. critic of La Nacion. Author of books on Mussorgsky and Rimsky-Korsakov. Works incl. 2 syms., pf. conc., 3 Paintings of Paul Klee for orch., pf. qt., str. qt., mimodrama The Fall of the House of Usher, 3 pf. sonatas.

Morison, Elsie (Jean) (b Ballarat, 1924). Australian sop. Studied Melbourne and RCM (with Clive Carey). Début London 1948 in Acis and Galatea. In SW Opera Co. 1948--54 and at CG 1953--62, also many concert appearances in oratorio, etc. Sang Blanche in Eng. première of Poulenc's Dialogues des Carmélites, CG 1958, and Anne in f. Brit. p. of Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress by Glyndebourne at Edinburgh Fest. 1953. Wife of Rafael Kubelik.

Morlacchi, Francesco (b Perugia, 1784; d Innsbruck, 1841). It. composer. Studied in Perugia and with Zingarelli in Loreto. Wrote cantata for Napoleon's coronation as King of It. in Milan 1805. Comp. 8 opera buffa 1807--10, then went to Dresden as cond. of It. opera there, remaining until his death. Wrote many operas, incl. Il nuovo barbiere di Siviglia (Dresden, 1816), and much church mus. Morlacchi's absences in It. caused Weber, appointed Kapellmeister at Dresden, 1817, to overwork.

Morley, Thomas (b ?Norwich, 1557; d London, 1602). Eng. composer. Pupil of Byrd. Mus.B., Oxford Univ., 1588. Organist, St Paul's Cath. c.1589--92. Almost certainly worked as a government spy. Gentleman of Chapel Royal 1592. In 1598, granted by Elizabeth I exclusive licence for 21 years to print song-books of all kinds and mus. paper. Thus he pubd. not only his own mus. but that of his contemporaries. Pubd. and ed. The Triumphs of Oriana (1601), to which he contributed Arise, awake for 5 vv. and Hard by a crystal fountain for 6 vv. Was one of great masters of Eng. madrigal. Probably friend of Shakespeare: setting of It was a lover and his lass for As You Like It may have been for orig. prod., 1599. Specialized in balletts. Also wrote church mus., incl. Burial Service; lute songs, and A Plaine and Easie Introduction to Practicall Musicke (1597). Among his works and publications were: Canzonets for 3 vv. (1593), Madrigals for 4 vv. (1594), 1st Book of Balletts, 5 vv. (1595), 1st Book of Canzonets, 2 vv. (1595), Canzonets, 4 vv. (selected from 'best It. authors' but incl. 2 by Morley) (1597), Madrigals, 5 vv. (selected from 'best It. authors') (1598), 1st Book of Consort Lessons, 6 instr. (1599), 1st Book of Ayres, lute and bass viol (1600), The Triumphs of Oriana, 5 and 6 vv. Morris, Morrice. A type of Eng. folk dance for men, assoc. with Whitsuntide and perf. to the acc. of pipe and tabor. The dancers wear bells on their ankles: sometimes they are dressed to represent characters (the Queen of the May, the Fool, etc.). The mus. is usually in duple or quadruple time. Some Eng. villages possess Morris troupes whose origin goes back to an unknown antiquity. Conjecture that the dance derives from the moresca is unsubstantiated. Morris, R(eginald) [fy65,3]O(wen) (b York, 1886; d London, 1948). Eng. teacher and composer. Studied Oxford Univ. and RCM. On staff RCM 1920--6. Dir. of theory and comp. Weber's Euryanthe with new text, Berlin 1915; ed. Handel's Orlando (1922); ed. works of Weber with A. Sandberg. Author of many books of mus. history and biography, incl. Musiklexikon (1932--5, 1955, suppl. 1963), Geschichte der deutschen Musik (3 vols., 1920--4), J. S. Bach (1935), Heinrich Schütz (1936, rev. 1954), Gluck (1940), Handel (1941), Weber (1941), Goethe and Music (1949), Buxtehude (1957). Also composer.

Moses und Aron (Moses and Aaron). Opera in 3 acts (3rd act lib. only) by Schoenberg to his own lib. Comp. 1930--2. Prod. (concert) Hamburg 1954, stage Zürich 1957, Berlin 1959, London CG 1965, Boston 1966, Paris 1975. Schoenberg in 1951 said that the 3rd act could be spoken, but Scherchen in Berlin had it spoken to mus. taken from Act 1. Most perfs. keep to 2 completed acts. Act 2 contains Dance Before the Golden Calf.

Mosonyi, Mihály (Brand, Michael) (b Boldogasszonyfalva, Hung., 1815; d Pest, 1870). Hung. composer, teacher, and writer. Studied mus. in Pozsony from 1832 while earning living as copyist. From 1835 to 1843 was pf. teacher to aristocratic family and comp. str. qts. and pf. pieces. Moved to Pest 1842 as teacher of pf. and comp. and also played db. in orch. In 1856 became friend of Liszt and in 1859 began to comp. in national style and took Hung. name of Mosonyi. Among his later works are cantatas and operas on Hung. themes. First to use cimbalom in symphonic work. Also admirer and champion of Wagner.

Mosso (It.). Moved, e.g. più mosso, More moved, i.e. quicker.

Mossolov, Alexander (Vasilyevich) (b Kiev, 1900; d Moscow, 1973). Russ. composer. Studied Moscow Cons. with Myaskovsky and Glière. Early songs had newspaper advertisements as texts. Was among first proponents of 'Soviet realism' under name 'constructivist music', e.g. ballet The Factory (1927), which employed metal sheet, shaken in the orch., for realistic effects (perf. also as concert piece under names 'Music of the Machines' or 'Iron foundry'). This was criticised in Russia as 'decadent'. Mossolov was back in favour during 1941--5 war with patriotic works. Wrote 6 syms., 2 pf. concs., vc. conc., vn. conc., chamber mus., and songs.

Mosto, Giovanni Battista (b Udine, before 1550; d Karlsburg, 1596). It. composer. Maestro di cappella, Padua Cath., 1580--9 and 1595--6. Wrote 6 books of madrigals and church mus.

Moszkowski, Moritz (b Breslau, 1854; d Paris, 1925). Polish-Ger. pianist and composer. Studied Dresden. Début Berlin 1873, London 1886. Wrote opera, vn. conc., pf. conc., and many songs, but chiefly known for his lighter pf. pieces, esp. his Spanish Dances for pf. duet. Retired to Paris 1897.

Motet. A form of short unaccompanied choral comp. which eventually superseded conductus, although both were in use from 13th to early 16th cents. In 13th, 14th, and 15th cents. the motet was exclusively sacred and was based on a pre-existing melody and set of words to which other melodies and words were added in counterpoint. Machaut, Després, Ockeghem, and others were masters of the motet. Dufay introduced secular melodies as the cantus firmus of the motet. By the 16th cent., the motet reached its apogee as a sacred comp., with the madrigal as its secular counterpart. Palestrina wrote about 180 motets. Victoria, Morales, Tallis, Byrd, Bull, and Taverner were great composers of motets, sometimes called Canticiones Sacrae. J. S. Bach wrote motets (incl. Singet dem Herren), 4 of them for 8 vv. Soon the term came to be loosely applied by composers, sometimes to works with acc. and even to works for solo v. and acc. In some cases, e.g. Parry's Songs of Farewell, the words are not ecclesiastical. Generally today the term signifies a church choral comp., with Lat. words not fixed in the Liturgy. In 1951--2 Bernard Naylor wrote 9 motets to Eng. texts as a cycle for the 9 major church festivals.

Mother, The (Matka). Opera in 10 scenes by A. Hába to his own lib. Prod. Munich 1931, rev. version Florence 1964. First opera to employ quarter-tones.

Mother Goose (Ravel). See Ma Mère l'oye.

Motif (Fr.; Eng. motive; Ger. motiv). The shortest intelligible and self-existent melodic or rhythmic figure (e.g. the first 4 notes of Beethoven's 5th Sym.). Every 'theme' or 'subject' perhaps has several motifs, and almost every mus. passage will be found to be a development of some motif. But the word has, in mus. analysis, been used as a synonym for 'theme'; and Wagner's extension of it to leitmotiv has further complicated the issue. The adjective 'motivic' is an invention of analytical writers, functional but ugly and better avoided.

Motion. (1) Term which denotes the course upwards or downwards of a melody or melodies. In the combination of any 2 'voices' or 'parts' of a comp., if they proceed in the same direction (notationally considered), they are said to be in Similar Motion, if in opposite directions, in Contrary Motion. If one part holds (or repeats) a note and the other part moves up or down from it, that is Oblique Motion. Similar Motion in which the parts proceed by the same intervals (numerically considered) is Parallel Motion. (2)^In the shaping of a single part progress of one note to an adjacent note by step is called Conjunct Motion and progress to some other note by leap Disjunct Motion. Moto (It.). Motion. Con moto, with motion, i.e. quickly. Moto perpetuo (It.). Perpetual motion. See Perpetuum mobile.

Motor Rhythm. 20th-cent. term for the type of rhythm which is as though mechanized, i.e. like the sound of an engine. The ugly adjective 'motoric' has, alas, been coined as descriptive of this kind of comp. or passage of comp.

Mottl, Felix (b Unter-Sankt-Veit, nr. Vienna, 1856; d Munich, 1911). Austrian cond. and composer. Studied Vienna Cons. Appointed as one of Wagner's assistants at first Bayreuth Fest., 1876, becoming one of group of young admirers in Wagner's circle. Cond. Karlsruhe Opera 1881--1903, setting high standards. Cond. first complete perf. of Berlioz's Les Troyens (on 2 consecutive evenings), Karlsruhe 1890. Cond. Bayreuth Fest. 1886--92. Cond. CG 1898--1900, NY Met. 1903. Cond. Munich Opera 1903--11. Comp. 3 operas, str. qt., songs, etc. Ed. vocal scores of all Wagner's works, made reduced orch. score for some of the operas. Orchestrated Wagner's 5 Wesendoncklieder. Also ed. Berlioz works. Collapsed while conducting Tristan and died a few days later.

Motto Theme. A theme which recurs, sometimes transformed, throughout the course of a comp., e.g. in Beethoven's 5th, Tchaikovsky's 4th and 5th, and Elgar's 1st Syms. It is akin to Wagner's leitmotiv, Berlioz's idée fixe, and Liszt's metamorphosis of themes.

Moule-Evans, David (b Ashford, Kent, 1905). Eng. composer, cond., and teacher. Studied RCM under Howells and Sargent. Prof. of harmony, counterpoint, and comp., RCM, from 1945. Works incl. Concerto for Strings (1928), ov. Spirit of London (1942), ViennaRhapsody (1943), Sym. (1944), chamber mus., and songs.

Mount of Olives (Beethoven). See Christus am Ölberge.

Mouret, Jean Joseph (b Avignon, 1682; d Charenton, 1738). Fr. composer. Worked in Paris from 1707. Dir., Concert Spirituel 1728--34. Wrote operas, ballets, divertissements, and instr. works.

Moussorgsky. See Mussorgsky, Modest.

Mouth Organ. See Harmonica.

Mouthpiece (Fr. bec (woodwind); embouchure (brass)). Part of a woodwind or brass instr. which is inserted in the player's mouth or to which he applies his lips in order to produce a sound.

Mouton, Jean (b Holluigue, c.1459; d St Quentin, 1522). Fr. composer. Served at courts of Louis XII and François I. Wrote at least 15 masses, over 100 motets, and chansons. Teacher of Willaert. His music has great technical polish, excellent contrapuntal mastery, and flowing polyphony, but perhaps lacks brilliance of Desprès.

Mouvement (Fr., abbreviated to Mouvt.). Movement, either in the sense of motion, or a section of a large comp., such as a sym. (see Movement). Sometimes (as in Debussy), the word is used to indicate a return to the orig. speed after some tempo deviation. Mouvement perpétuel is the Fr. equivalent of perpetuum mobile. Movable-doh.[fy75,1] A term applied to that system of sight-singing in which Doh is the name applied to the keynote of every major scale, ray to the 2nd note, me to the 3rd, and so on--as distinct from the Fixed-doh system in which Cis, in every key in which it occurs, called doh, D called ray, and so on. (See Sight-Reading, Tonic Sol-fa.)

Movement. The primary, self-contained sections of a large comp. (sym., conc., sonata, suite, etc.), so called because each movement of a work usually has a separate tempo indication. Some comps. are in one movement, e.g. Sibelius's 7th Sym., and in many the movements are joined to play continuously. The word sometimes occurs in the title of a work, e.g. Stravinsky's Symphony in 3 Movements and his Movements for pf. and orch.

Movements. Work in 5 short sections for pf. and orch. by Stravinsky, comp. 1958--9. F.p. NY 1960. Used as mus. for ballet to choreog. by Balanchine, prod. NY, 1963.

Movimento(It.). Motion, as distinct from movement in the structural sense. Doppiomovimento means `at double the preceding speed'.

Mozart, (Johann Georg) Leopold (b Augsburg, 1719; d Salzburg, 1787). Ger. composer and violinist. Played in orch. of Prince-Archbishop of Salzburg, becoming court composer and Kapellmeister 1762. Father of 2 prodigiously talented children, Wolfgang and Anna, to whose training and exploitation he devoted much time. Comp. many types of mus., incl. famous Toy Symphony (simplified and reduced version of a Cassation in G) and author of influentialvn. method, 1756.

Mozart, Wolfgang Amadeus (baptized Johannes Chrysostomus Wolfgangus Theophilus) (b Salzburg, 1756; d Vienna, 1791). Austrian composer, kbd. player, violinist, violist, and cond. Son of Leopold Mozart, Kapellmeister to Prince-Archbishop of Salzburg, Mozart showed exceptional musical precocity, playing the klavier at 3 and composing at 5. His elder sister Maria Anna (1751--1829) was also a brilliant kbd. player and in 1762 Leopold decided to present his children's talents at various European courts. They first visited Munich and Vienna in 1762. Wolfgang was now able to play the vn. without having had formal teaching. In 1763 a longer journey began, from Munich, Augsburg, Frankfurt, and other cities to Cologne, Brussels, and Paris. They spent a fortnight at Louis XV's court at Versailles. In Apr. 1764 they arrived in London and were received by George III. While in London, Wolfgang studied with Abel, comp. with J. C. Bach, and singing with the castrato Manzuoli. He wrote his first 3 syms. in London. After visits to Holland and Switzerland, the Mozart family returned to Salzburg in Nov. 1766. Further visits to Vienna were made in 1767 and 1768 and Mozart comp. 2 operas, La finta semplice and Bastien und Bastienne. In Dec. 1769, Leopold took Mozart to It. where the boy's genius was everywhere acclaimed. He was taught by Martini and met Nardini, Jommelli, and Burney. In Rome he heard Allegri's Miserere and wrote it out from memory. His opera Mitridate, Rè di Ponto was successfully prod. in Milan in Dec. 1770. Two further visits to It. speedily followed, but the new prince-archbishop of Salzburg was less well-disposed towards the Mozarts and in 1777 Mozart left on a tour with his mother, Leopold not being well enough to go. They visited Munich, Augsburg, Mannheim (where he heard the famous orch.) and arrived in Paris in 1778. Mozart's mother died there in July of that year. No longer a Wunderkind, Mozart had less appeal for the Parisians, who were engrossed in the Gluck-Piccinni controversy. Unable to obtain a court post, Mozart returned to Salzburg where he spent the next 2 years as court and cath. org. amid growing hostility to the archbishop. In 1780 the Elector of Bavaria commissioned an opera from Mozart (Idomeneo), prod. in Munich, Jan. 1781. On Mozart's return to Salzburg he had a final confrontation with the archbishop and resigned. He went to Vienna, where he married Constanze Weber in Aug. 1782, a few days after the first perf. of his opera Die Entführung aus dem Serail. The last 9 years of his life were a juxtaposition of financial troubles with an astonishing outpouring of masterpieces in almost every genre. In 1785 he frequently played the va. in str. qts. with Dittersdorf and Haydn. To the latter, who regarded Mozart as the greatest composer he knew, Mozart dedicated 6 str. qts. in the autumn of 1785, when he also began work on Le nozze di Figaro. He frequently appeared as soloist in his own kbd. concs. Although Figaro was rapturously received in Vienna in 1786, it was taken off after 9 perfs., but was the rage of Prague when prod. there in 1787. During his visit to the Bohemian capital, Mozart's Sym. in D (K504, No. 38) received its f.p., thereafter being known as the 'Prague Sym'. He was subsequently commissioned to write an opera for Prague for the following autumn. The result was Don Giovanni, written in a few months while the 2 str. quintets in C major and G minor and Eine kleine Nachtmusik were also composed. In the same year Leopold Mozart died at Salzburg. The new opera was a success in Prague, but initially failed in Vienna, where it was prod. with some extra numbers in May 1788. A month later Mozart began to compose the first of his 3 last syms., completing them between 26 June and 10 Aug. In 1789, under severe financial pressure, he played a conc. in Dresden on the way to Berlin. He visited Leipzig, playing Bach's org. at St Thomas's. In Berlin King Friedrich Wilhelm II, a cellist, commissioned 6 str. qts. of which only 3 were written. In the autumn Emperor Joseph II of Austria commissioned a new comic opera, Così fan tutte, which was prod. early in 1790. Joseph died shortly afterwards, but Mozart's hope of being appointed by Leopold II Kapellmeister in place of Salieri was not fulfilled. In 1791 he was approached by the actor-manager Schikaneder with a view to composing a fairy-tale opera on a lib. concocted by Schikaneder. Die Zauberflöte was almost completed by July, the month in which Mozart received a commission to compose a Requiem for an anonymous patron (Count F. von Walsegg who wished to pass it off as his own). Mozart deferred work on it to compose an adaptation of Metastasio's La clemenza di Tito for Leopold II's coronation as King of Bohemia in Prague in Sept. This prod. was supervised by Mozart, who returned to Vienna, wrote the cl. conc., cond. the f.p. of Die Zauberflöte, and then resumed work on the Requiem. But ill-health which had been overtaking him for some time now became critical and he died on 5 Dec., leaving the Requiem to be completed by his pupil Süssmayr. He received a cheap funeral with others who had died at the same time, and the location of his grave remains unknown. The circumstances of Mozart's death and the unseemly and unnecessary haste with which one of Vienna's most famous men was buried have given rise to many sensational theories, none proved but all giving some ground for believing that things were not quite as they seem. The extent and range of Mozart's genius are so vast and so bewildering that any concise summing-up of his achievement must risk being trite. He took the mus. small-change of his day, learned from childhood in the courts of Europe, and transformed it into a mint of gold. His sense of form and symmetry seems to have been innate and was allied to an infallible craftsmanship which was partly learnt and partly instinctive. In his operas he not only displayed hitherto un-equalled dramatic feeling, but widened the boundaries of the singer's art through contact with some of the greatest vv. of his day and, with his amazing insight into human nature, at once perceptive and detached, he created characters on the stage who may be claimed in their context as the equal of Shakespeare's. His music was supra-national, combining It., Fr., Austrian, and Ger. elements. Not by revolutionary deliberation but by the natural superiority of the mus. he wrote, he changed the course of the sym., the pf. conc., the str. qt., the sonata, and much more besides. Perhaps the only element missing from his mus. is the worship of Nature which Beethoven and later 19th-cent. composers were to supply. There are brilliance and gaiety on the surface of Mozart's mus., but underneath a dark vein of melancholy which gives his works (Cosi fan tutte in particular) an ambivalence which is continually fascinating and provocative. 'Mozart is music', a critic said, and most composers since 1791 have agreed. A selective list of prin. works follows. Some of the dates, which are Köchel's, are conjectural:

operas: Apollo et Hyacinthus, intermezzo (K38, 1767); Bastien und Bastienne (K50, 1768); La finta semplice (K51, 1768); Mitridate, Rè di Ponto (K87, 1770); Ascanio in Alba (K111, 1771); Il sogno di Scipione (K126, 1772); Lucio Silla (K135, 1772); La finta giardiniera

(K196, 1774); Il Rè Pastore (K208, 1775); Zaide (K344, 1780); Thamos, König in Ägypten (K345, 1780, incid. music); Idomeneo, Rè di Creta (K366, 1780); Die Entführung aus dem Serail (K384, 1781--2); L'Oca del Cairo (K422, 1783); Lo sposo deluso (K430, 1783); Der Schauspieldirektor (The Impresario) (K486, 1786); Le nozze di Figaro (K492, 1786); Don Giovanni (K527, 1787); Così fan tutte (K588, 1790); Die Zauberflöte (The Magic Flute) (K620, 1791); La Clemenza di Tito (K621, 1791).

Musica Antiqua (Lat.). Old music. Coll. of 190 pieces of mus. compiled and ed. by John Stafford Smith and pubd. 1812. Ranges from ancient chants by Merbecke to Norman chansons, and masques from time of James I of Eng.

Musica ficta (Lat.). Feigned music. Musica falsa (It.). False music. In early mus., the sharpening or flattening of certain notes, conventionally prescribed or permitted in modal mus. (see Modes) to avoid certain awkward intervals, etc. Its prevalence in mus. up to and incl. that of the 16th cent. requires considerable knowledge of performing practice of the period on the part of modern eds. In most modern edns. the necessary alterations are written in.

Musica figurata (It.), Figuralmusik (Ger.). The term has 2 meanings: (1) Contrapuntal mus. in which the various melodic strands move more or less independently, shorter notes in one v. against longer in others---as distinct from mere 'note against note' counterpoint; (2) Decorated melody in plainsong, etc., as distinct from the more sober type (such decorated plainsong is also known as musica colorata, coloured music).

Musical America. American monthly mus. magazine founded as a weekly in 1898. Among eds. have been J. C. Freund, Deems Taylor, Oscar Thompson, and Everett Helm. Absorbed by High Fidelity, 1965.

Musical Box. Toy in which pins on a rotating barrel pluck the teeth of a comb. These teeth are graduated in length, thus providing a scale of notes from which tunes can be produced. (Multiple sets of pins produce several tunes.) Mechanism usually activated by lifting of lid.

Musical Comedy (Musicals). Type of musical entertainment, 20th cent. development of operetta, which relies for its popular success on a succession of catchy and easily memorable tunes, either as songs, duets, or choruses. Some early Eng. examples date from end of 19th cent., e.g. Lionel Monckton's The Runaway Girl (1898), but perhaps the first of the kind were Osmond Carr's In Town (1892) and Sidney Jones's A Gaiety Girl (1893), both staged by George Edwardes at the Prince of Wales Th., London. These were followed by Leslie Stuart's Florodora (1899), The Arcadians (Monckton, 1909), and The Maid of the Mountains (Fraser-Simson, 1916). The outstanding success of the First World War was Norton's Chu Chin Chow (1916). After 1918 American shows began to visit London and the names became familiar of Youmans (No, No, Nanette, 1924), Jerome Kern (The Cabaret Girl, 1922, Sunny, 1925, Show Boat, 1927), Gershwin (Oh Boy, 1917, Lady, Be Good, 1924, Funny Face, 1927, Girl Crazy, 1930, Strike up the Band, 1930), Rodgers and Hart (The Girl Friend, 1926, Evergreen, 1930, On Your Toes, 1936, Pal Joey, 1940), Cole Porter (Gay Divorce, 1932, Nymph Errant, 1933, Anything Goes, 1934). Emigré European composers such as Victor Herbert, Rudolf Friml (Rose Marie, 1924, The Vagabond King, 1925), and Sigmund Romberg also contributed to the transatlantic successes. Romberg's shows incl. The Student Prince (1924), The Desert Song (1926), and New Moon (1928). In England two native composers dominated the musicals of the 1930s, Noël Coward with Bitter-Sweet (1929) and Operette (1938), and Ivor Novello with Glamorous Night (1935), Careless Rapture (1936), and The Dancing Years (1939). Scarcely less popular were Vivian Ellis's Mr Cinders (1929), Jill Darling (1934), and Under Your Hat (1938), while Noel Gay's Me and My Girl (1937) made 'The Lambeth Walk' almost a national song for a time. After the Second World War, the 1930s type of musical comedy lingered on with Ellis's Bless the Bride (1947), Novello's King's Rhapsody (1949), Wilson's The Boy Friend (1953), and Julian Slade's Salad Days (1954). But the death-knell of this genteel kind of affair was sounded by the record-breaking Oklahoma! (1943) of Rodgers and Hammerstein, first of an amazing series of shows from this duo: Carousel (1945), South Pacific (1949), The King and I (1951), Flower Drum Song (1958), and The Sound of Music (1959). The stronger construction of these musicals attracted into the popular th. such choreographers as Agnes de Mille, Jerome Robbins, and George Balanchine. Comparable with them were Irving Berlin's Annie Get Your Gun (1946) and Call Me Madam (1950), Porter's Kiss Me Kate (1948, based on The Taming of the Shrew), and Can-Can (1953), and (a new team) Frederick Loewe's and Alan Jay Lerner's Brigadoon (1947), Paint Your Wagon (1951), My Fair Lady (1956, based on Shaw's Pygmalion), and Camelot (1960). A tougher vein was exploited by Leonard Bernstein with On the Town (1944), Wonderful Town (1953), and West Side Story (1957). The lyrics of the last-named were written by Stephen Sondheim, who later comp. some of the best musicals of the 1970s in Company (1970), A Little Night Music (1973), and Pacific Overtures (1976). The Brit. challenge to the Amer. dominance after 1946 was best represented by Lionel Bart's Fings ain't wot they used t'be (1959) and Oliver! (1960, based on Oliver Twist), Bricusse's and Newley's Stop the World---I Want to Get Off (1961), Charlie Girl (1965, Taylor and Heneker), but it was left to Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice to chart a new course with Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat (1968), Jesus Christ Superstar (1970), Evita (1976, a life of Eva Peron), and Cats (1981, based on T. S. Eliot poems). Other significant musicals of the second half of the 20th cent. have been Frank Loesser's Guys and Dolls (1950), The Most Happy Fella (1956), and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying (1961), Adler's and Ross's The Pajama Game (1954) and Damn Yankees (1955), Jule Styne's Funny Girl (1964), Herman's Hello Dolly! (1964), Bock's Fiddler on the Roof (1964), Leigh's Man of La Mancha (1965, based on Don Quixote), Kander's Cabaret (1966, based on Isherwood's Goodbye to Berlin), MacDermot's Hair (1967, a 'rock' musical which incorporated elec. sounds), and Marvin Hamlisch's Chorus Line (1975) and Jean Seberg (1983).

Musical Glasses. See Glass Armonica.

Musical Joke, A (Ein musikalischer Spass). Divertimento in F for 2 hn. and str. qt. by Mozart (K522) comp. Vienna, 1787, as satire on composers and perfs. of popular mus.

Musical Offering, The (Das musikalische Opfer). Coll. of 13 comps. by Bach (BWV 1079) in various contrapuntal forms, all using a theme given to Bach for extemporization by King Frederick the Great of Prussia in Potsdam in 1747. Some are for kbd., 2 for fl., and others for no particular medium. Nos. 1--8 constitute the actual offering, the remainder having been added later. Modern performing edns. exist and various composers have orchestrated certain items, e.g. Webern Ricercare. The pieces are: 1. Ricercare a 3, 2. Canon perpetuus, 3. Canon a 2 violini in unisono, 4. Canon a 2 per motum contrarium, 5. Canon a 2 per augmentationem, 6. Canon a 2 per tonos, 7. Canon a 2, 8. Canon a 2 quaerendo invenietis, 9. Canon perpetuus, 10. Canon a 4, 11. Fuga canonica, 12. Trio sonata, 13. Ricercare a 6.

Musical Switch. A medley constructed out of snatches of popular tunes dovetailed into each other so that one tune is 'switched', after a few measures, to another.

Musical Times. Eng. monthly mus. magazine founded 1844. Eds. have incl. W. McNaught (father and son), Martin Cooper, Harold Rutland, Andrew Porter, and Stanley Sadie.

Musica Mensurata (Lat.). Measured music. Medieval system of notation, necessitated by invention of figured mus. to denote relative duration and pitch of each note of plainchant to be sung.

Music and Letters. Eng. mus. quarterly founded 1920 by A. H. Fox Strangways, who was ed. until 1937. Succeeded by Eric Blom 1937--50, Richard Capell 1950--4, Blom 1954--9, J. A. Westrup 1959--76, Denis Arnold and Edward Olleson 1976--80, Edward Olleson and Nigel Fortune from 1981.

Musica Reservata (Lat.). Reserved music. (1) Term coined in early 16th cent., possibly for expressiveness of composers such as Després and for its method of perf., but exact meaning is unknown. One view applies it to mus. employing exceptional reserve in use of ornamentation and another theory is that it meant mus. reserved for what would now be called 'highbrows'. (2) Name of London ens. formed 1960 to perform early mus. in authentic manner.

Musica Transalpina. First printed coll. of It. (i.e. transalpine) madrigals with Eng. words, compiled and pubd. in London by Nicholas Yonge in 2 vols., 1588 and 1597 (both It. and Eng. words were given). Had great influence on Eng. composers. Vol. I contained 57 pieces, incl. examples by Marenzio, Palestrina, Byrd, de Lassus, and others; 2nd vol. of 24 pieces incl. Ferrabosco, Marenzio, Venturi, etc.

Music Centre. Really a place, e.g. a hall, on which mus. activity is centred, but the term has been appropriated by commerce for piece of equipment in which stereo record-player, cassette-player, recording equipment, and sometimes radio are all assembled into single item of domestic furniture.

Music Drama. Term used by Wagner after Lohengrin to describe his operas in order to emphasize that the mus., dramatic, and scenic elements were on equal terms---a fusion of thearts as Gluck had proposed. Yet the old It. description of opera was dramma per musica.

Music for a While. Song by Purcell, part of his incidental mus. to Dryden's play Oedipus, 1692.

Music Hall. Strictly, the place where a particular type of variety entertainment was held, often attached to a public house or containing a bar where customers could drink while they listened and watched; but the term also means the entertainment itself. It flourished in Brit. from c.1850 to 1914. Among the most famous London music-halls were the Surrey (Southwark), the Bedford (Camden Town), the Metropolitan (Edgware Road), and Collins's (Islington). By 1870 there were said to be 200 in London and 300 elsewhere. Many 'acts' were performed; musically the halls' importance lay in the association of a popular song with a particular performer, e.g. Charles Coborn and Two Lovely Black Eyes, Eugene Stratton and Lily of Laguna, Albert Chevalier and My Old Dutch, Harry Champion and Any Old Iron, Harry Lauder and Roamin' inthe gloamin', Vesta Victoria and Waiting at the Church, Florrie Forde and Down at the ol' Bull and Bush, Will Fyffe and I Belong to Glasgow, and Ella Shields and Burlington Bertiefrom Bow. After 1914 the consumption of food and drink in the auditorium was forbidden and the music-hall gave way to the variety theatre and itsstars like Gracie Fields and Hetty King. Something of the music-hall spirit survives in North of England working-men's clubs. It is an irony that while the songs and their singers have acquired a kind of immortality in Eng. theatrical folklore, the names of the composers are scarcely remembered, with the exception of Leslie Stuart, who wrote for Eugene Stratton. Thousands of music-hall songs, for example, were comp. by Joseph Tabrar, yet for one whose melodies reached more lips than Mozart's and Beethoven's, the reward has been almost total obscurity.

Musicians' Benevolent Fund. British mus. charity founded in 1921 orig. as fund in memory of the ten. Gervase Elwes. Maintains 3 residential homes for elderly and retired musicians, and helps many other musicians in various ways.

Musicians' Company. See Worshipful Company of Musicians.

Musicians' Union. Brit. trade union formed in 1921 by amalgamation of Nat. Orch. Assoc. of Professional Musicians (1891) and Amalgamated Musicians' Union (1893). Objective is to improve pay and conditions of professional musicians.

Music Makers, The. Ode, Op. 69, for cont. ormez., ch., and orch. by Elgar, to poem by A. O'Shaughnessy (1844--81), in which several self-quotations occur (e.g. from Enigma Variations, first Sym., Vn. Conc., etc.). Comp. 1911--12, with earlier sketches. F.p. Birmingham 1912. Also set for vv. and orch. by Kodály, 1964.

Musicology (Ger. Musikwissenschaft). Mus. scholarship. A 20th-cent. word taken into the Eng. language (from the Fr. Musicologie), but the Ger. term Musikwissenschaft was coined by J. B. Logier in 1827. It may be said to cover all study of mus. other than that directed to proficiency in perf. or comp. Thus, a musicologist is one who is a specialist in some mus. study. Among the divisions of musicology are acoustics; the physiology of v., ear, and hand; the psychology of aesthetics and, more directly, of mus. appreciation and education; ethnology so far as it bears on mus. (incl. folksongs, folk dances, etc.); rhythm and metrics; modes and scales; the principles and development of instrs.; orchestration; form; theories of harmony; the history of mus.; the bibliography of mus.; terminology---and so forth. The International Mus. Soc. (IMS, 1900--14) had as its purpose the promotion of musicalological study, and its post-war successor made its purpose clear in its name---`Société Internationale de Musicologie' (SIM, founded 1928, publishes journal Acta Musicologica). There are also nat. musicalological socs. in many countries. A Brit. musicalological soc. (The Royal Mus. Assoc.) has existed since 1874, and the Amer. Musicalological Soc. was founded in 1934: both socs. publish journals.

Music Review, The. Brit. mus. quarterly, founded 1940. Ed. Geoffrey Sharp until 1974, when A. F. Leighton Thomas took over.

Music Theatre. A type of comp., sometimes quasi-operatic but more usually a concert piece, for which a semi-staged presentation is necessary. It developed after about 1950, esp. in USA and Ger. An Eng. example is Maxwell Davies's Eight Songs for a Mad King. The term is better avoided, for a precise definition is impossible.

Musikalische Opfer, Das (Bach). See Musical Offering, The.

Musique Concrète (Fr.). Concrete music. Mus. prepared from recorded sounds, either natural (e.g. birdsong) or man-made (traffic, instr. etc.). Term originated by Pierre Schaeffer in 1948 to differentiate between mus. assembled from concrete sound objects and mus. based on the abstract medium of notation. Strictly, musique concrète should not be modified electronically but the distinction between it and electronically synthesized sound has been increasingly blurred until the term elec. mus. covers the whole process.

Mussorgsky, Modest (Petrovich) (b Karevo, Pskov, 1839; d St Petersburg, 1881). Russ. composer. Showed mus. talent as a child but was destined for an army career. In 1857 he met Balakirev in St Petersburg and studied with him, resigning his commission the next year. His early songs and pf. pieces show little sign of his later achievement, but by 1864 he was writing fine songs. He started and abandoned 2 operas, but began work in 1868 on Boris Godunov, which he rev. when it was rejected by the Imperial Th. On its prod. in 1874 it pleased audiences but not musicians, who resented its unconventional methods and unusual style in which speech-inflexion governed the vocal lines. Over the next few years Mussorgsky worked on 2 operas, but his heavy drinking, a habit acquired at cadet school, sapped his capacity for concentrated work. He was one of the group of 5 Russ. composers of nationalist tendencies known as the `Mighty handful'. After his death his works were completed and 'improved' by Rimsky-Korsakov and others, but in the 20th cent. his realistic and progressive qualities have been recognized and his orig. scores have been restored where possible. Prin. comps.:

operas: Salammbô (unfinished, 1863--6); The Marriage (1 act only finished) (1868); Boris Godunov (1868--9, rev. 1871--2, rev. 1873); Mlada (projected 4-act opera-ballet of which Cui, Rimsky-Korsakov, and Borodin were to compose the other 3 acts, 1872); Khovanshchina (1873, 5th act unfinished); Sorochintsy Fair (1874--80, unfinished).

orch: Night on the Bare Mountain (1867).

piano: Souvenir d'Enfance (1857); Intermezzo (1861, orch. and expanded 1867); Memories of Childhood (1865); Pictures at an Exhibition (1874).

songs: Many solo songs and 3 song-cycles: The Nursery (7 songs) (1868--72); Sunless (6 songs) (1874); Songs and Dances of Death (4 songs) (1875--7). (The famous Song of the Flea dates from 1879.)

Mustel Organ. Kbd. 'cabinet organ' invented by V. Mustel (1815--90).

Muta (It., plural mutano). Change, e.g. of kettledrum tuning. Muta D in C means Change tuning from D to C (no connection with the word 'mute'). Also used in connection with change of crook in brass instr.

Mutation Stop. Org. stop sounding not at normal or octave pitch, but at pitch of one of the non-octave harmonics. See Quint, Twelfth, Seventeenth, Nineteenth, Flat Twenty-first.

Mute. A mechanical device used to reduce the tonal vol. of an instr. and usually indicated by the term con sordini. (1) In bowed instr. a small clamp to be placed on the bridge. (2) In brass instr. a pear-shaped stopper to be pushed into the bell or, in the case of the hn., putting the hand in the bell. It is impossible to mute woodwind instr. (3) With the Kettledrums muting was formerly effected by placing a cloth over the parchment heads but it is usual now to employ sponge-headed drumsticks instead. (4) In the pf. the sound is muted by the left (soft) pedal. The mute should not be confused with the damper.

Muti, Riccardo (b Naples, 1941). It. conductor. Studied Naples (pf.) and Milan (cond. with Votto). Cantelli Prize 1967. Opera début Florence 1966 in work by Paisiello. SalzburgFest., 1971, Vienna 1973, CG début 1977 (Aida). Chief cond., (New) Philharmonia Orch. 1973--82. Art. dir., Florence Fest. from 1977. Prin. guest cond., Philadelphia Orch. from 1977, prin. cond. from 1981. Mus. dir. La Scala, Milan, from 1986.

Muzio, Claudia (b Pavia, 1889; d Rome, 1936). It. sop. Daughter of ass. stage manager at CG and NY Met. Studied Turin and Milan. Début Messina 1910 as Gilda. CG 1914, NY Met. 1916--22 and 1933--4, Chicago 1922--31. Created role of Giorgetta in Puccini's Il Tabarro, NY 1918. Notable interpreter of Violetta, Desdemona, and Tosca.

Myaskovsky, Nikolay (Yakovlevich) (b Novogeorgyevsk, 1881; d Moscow, 1950). Russ. composer. Studied with Glière, Lyadov, and Rimsky-Korsakov. Prof. of comp. Moscow Cons., 1921--50, pupils incl. Kabalevsky, Khachaturian, and Shebalin. One of composers denounced by Soviet officials in 1948 for 'formalism'. Wrote 27 syms., the 1st in 1908, the last being perf. posthumously. No. 19 is for military band. Also comp. symphonic poems Nevermore (after Poe's The Raven) and Alastor (after Shelley), sinfonietta, vn. conc. (1938), vc. conc. (1944--5), 13 str. qts. (No. 1 1929--30, No. 13 1949), 9 pf. sonatas, and many songs.

My Country (Smetana). See Má Vlast.

Myers, Rollo (Hugh) (b Chislehurst, 1892; d Chichester, 1985). Eng. writer on mus. Studied Oxford Univ. and Paris. Mus. critic for Times then Daily Telegraph 1920--34. BBC 1935--44. British Council officer in Paris 1944--5. Ed. The Chesterian 1947. Author of books on 20th-cent. mus. generally and on Satie and Debussy in particular. Trans. Strauss-Rolland correspondence (London, 1968).

My Fair Lady. Musical version of G. B. Shaw's play Pygmalion (1912) with music by Frederick Loewe and words by Alan Jay Lerner (b NY, 1918). F.p. NY 1956, London 1958, and has been in performance somewhere in the world almost ever since. Roles of Eliza

Doolittle and Prof. Higgins created by Julie Andrews and Rex Harrison, the latter successfully employing a type of Sprechstimme for his songs. Film version 1964.

My Lady Nevells Booke (My Lady Nevill's Book). Coll. of 42 virginals pieces by Byrd transcr. in 1591 by John Baldwin of Windsor for the use of Lady Nevell, or Nevill, believed by Dr. E. H. Fellowes to have been Rachel, wife of Sir Edward Nevill. Modern ed. by Hilda Andrews, 1926.

Myslivec^;ek, Josef (b Ober-Sárka, 1737; d Rome, 1781). Bohemian composer. Studied Venice. His first opera Medea was a big success in Parma, 1764, followed by Il Bellerofone, Naples 1767. Went to Vienna and Munich 1772. In 1773 he composed La Clemenza di Tito for Venice. Mozart admired his pf. sonatas and praised his oratorio Abramo ed Isacco, Munich 1777. Comp. 27 operas, 6 oratorios, and instr. works of all kinds.

Mysteries. See Miracle Plays.

Mystic Trumpeter, The. (1) Scena, Op. 18, by Holst for solo v. (usually sop.) and orch. to words by Whitman, comp. 1904, rev. 1912, f.p. 1905 (rev. version f.p. 1913). (2) Setting of same text for vv. and orch. by Harty, 1913. (3) Symphonic fantasy after Whitman for orch. by F. S. Converse, 1904.

Dominant. (1) 5th degree of major or minor scale, thus if the key is B (major or minor) the dominant is F. Chords built on this note are dominant chords, for instance the dominant seventh which is a chord consisting of the common chord of the dominant with the 7th from its root added, e.g. in key C it is G--B--D--F. It normally resolves on the Tonic or Submediant chord, the note constituting the 7th falling a semitone. The three inversions of the Dominant Seventh chord are, of course, in common use. (2) See [fy45]*[fy75]Modes.

Durch (Ger. 'Through'). Durchaus. 'Throughout.' Durchkomponiert or durchkomponiert ('through-composed'). Applied to songs of which the music is different for each stanza of the poem, i.e. the opposite of [fy45]*strophic; but use of the term has been widened to mean a composition which has been 'fully worked out', 'thoroughly composed', as opposed to something that seems episodic or patchy. Durchdringed ('through-forcing'). 'Penetrating', 'shrill'. Durchführung ('through-leading'). [fy45]*'Development'. Durchweg. (1) 'Throughout', 'altogether'. (2) 'Generally', 'nearly always'.

Ebony Concerto. Conc. for jazz cl. ('ebony stick') and jazz band by Stravinsky, written for Woody Herman, who gave f.p. in N.Y. 1946.

Eimert, Herbert (b Bad Kreuznach 1897). Ger. composer and critic. Studied Cologne Musikhochschule 1919--24 and at Cologne Univ. On staff of West German Radio 1927--33. Music critic Kölnischen Zeitung 1936--45. Dir. of night music programmes Cologne Radio 1945. Founded first [fy45]*electronic music studio, Cologne 1951. Co-editor periodical Die Reihe 1955--62. Compositions incl. 2 string quartets, Glockenspiel (tape), 5 Stücke (tape, 1955--6), Epitaph für Aikichi Kuboyama (sprechstimme, harmonica, electronic sound, tape 1906--2).

Eisteddfod (Welsh. 'Session', from eistedd. 'to sit'. Plur. Eisteddfodau). The national Welsh gathering of this name is one of bards, and dates in its present form from 1817, though it is said to date back, in one form or another, as far as the 7th cent. with a break during the complete 18th cent. and a few years before and after it. It now takes place annually in August in one Welsh town or another. Degrees of Ofydd (Ovate), Bardd (Bard), and Pencerdd (Chief Musician) are conferred on candidates who pass various tests and there is also a strong choral and competitive side to the gathering. Many local Eisteddfodau exist, purely of the nature of Competition Festivals. An international Eisteddfod, at which choirs and dances from all over the world compete, has been held annually in Llangollen since 1947.

Encore Fr. 'Again') In Eng. has been adopted as the word of demand for the repetition of a performance (properly, perhaps, of the same piece but it is often used of a mere return to the platform to give additional performance, whether of the same or another piece). The verb 'to encore' has also come into use. Although the word 'encore' is Fr., its entry into the Eng. language was by corruption of the It. ancora (with the same meaning), which, from the early 18th-cent. onwards, was in use amongst the audience of the It. Opera in London (indifferently with the words altra volta, 'another time') The Fr. use bis (Lat. 'twice'), with the verb bisser.

Englund, Einar Sven (b Ljugam, Sweden, 1916). Finnish composer, critic, and pianist. Studied Sibelius Acad., Helsinki, 1935--41, under [fy45]*Palmgren for comp., and in U.S.A. with [fy45]*Copland. Worked for Finnish Radio from 1950. Teacher of comp., Sibelius Acad. from 1958. Has composed 3 syms., vc. conc., pf. conc., chamber mus.

Equal Voices (It. Voci eguali; Lat. Voces aequales; Ger. Gleiche Stimmen). A choral comp. is said to be for 'equal voices' when it is for vv. of the same kind, generally for 2 sop., or 3 sop. (sch. mus. and mus. for women's choirs). In such mus., in fairness to the vv. of the performers, the parts are usually so arr. that sometimes one v. and sometimes another is at the top. Occasionally the term is less correctly used as implying 'for children's vv.' (unmixed with adults), or 'for women's vv.' (unmixed with men's), or 'for men's vv.' (unmixed with women's).

Emperor's Hymn 'Gott erhalte Franz den Kaiser', i.e. 'God preserve the Emperor Francis'---the tune being found in many hymn-books under the name Austria. The national hymn of Austria from the time of the composition of the tune by Haydn (1797) to the setting up of the Republic in 1918. Thereafter the tune was officially retained, but other words adopted---those of Ottokar Kernstock, Sei gesegnet ohne Ende ('Thine be never-ending blessings'). The original words were by Lorenz Leopold Haschka (1749--1827). Haydn, whose instructions were to compose something approaching in merit the Eng. God save the King, took one of the Croatian folk melodies of his childhood, which probably suggested itself to him as fitting metrically and rhythmically the opening lines, and altered and extended its later part. For application of the tune in Germany see [fy45]*[fy75]Deutschland über Alles.

Faburden (Eng.), fauxbourdon (Fr.), falsobordone (It.). Literally 'false bass or drone'. This term has had a surprisingly large number of different applications at different periods. (1) In very early use it meant the accompanying of a Plainsong melody with parallel added parts--in 3rds and 6ths. (2) In the 15th cent. it meant any added part to such a plainsong melody, the two moving at the same rate. It was apparently used especially of such passages interpolated among unison singing of the plainsong, e.g. in the psalms. (3) About the same period it was also used of the same kind of liturgical singing as that mentioned under (2), but without plainsong in any of the vv. (This is sometimes spoken of as free Faburden as distinct from the previous type, spoken of as strict.) (4) The name came also to be given to a sort of chanting in which the whole of a phrase was declaimed on one chord, except that the cadence was harmonized as such. (The same mus. was used for every verse of a psalm, etc., as is done today with the Anglican Chant.) (5) The name was also sometimes applied to a sort of monotoning. (6) And to a drone bass, such as that of a bagpipe. (7) In 16th- and 17th-cent. Eng. usage it was sometimes applied to the ten. part of a metrical psalm tune, etc., which part then usually carried the melody. (8) It was also applied to a refrain to the verses of a song. (9) Nowadays (as with [fy45]*[fy75]Descant) the word is used in Brit. for a freely-written sop. part added to a hymn tune while the tune itself is sung by the choir's tens. or by the congregation, or (more commonly of recent years) for a 4-part harmonization with the tune in the ten.---this last a revival of the old Eng. practice. When this word is used in old mus. treatises or in modern mus. historical works any of the above senses may be intended. Fingering of Keyboard Instruments. Since the end of the 18th cent., these have been standardized on something like modern principles. Before this period there was a good deal of passing of the 3 middle fingers over one another and comparatively little use of the thumb and little finger: this was partly due to the fall of the keys being much shallower than with modern instr. The pf. killed finger-crossing, since it demanded an actual blow (properly a blow by pressure---one sufficient to throw the hammer at the str., yet so exactly controlled as to throw it with either the greater force required by a fortissimo or the lesser required by a pianissimo). Clementi firmly est. the modern principles: his use of the thumb was the same as ours, except that he did not use it on the black keys, as is sometimes done today. These modern principles include the division of a scale into 2 groups of 3 and 4 notes respectively, with the thumb as the pivot between them, playing of arpeggio passages on the basis of the octave, some adaptation of fingering to the hand of the individual player, the planning of the fingering of a passage by working backwards from the point at which it is ultimately to arrive, and the division of such a passage into 'physical groups' as units, each of these being considered as a chord. Org. fingering follows much the same principles as piano fingering but, as the nature of the instrument generally calls for a very perfect legato, more substitution of finger is required, a key often being depressed by one finger and then held by another, so freeing the first one for use on another key. See also Continental and English fingering.

Form. The structure and design of a comp. Whereas in (say) the 16th and 17th cents., instr. comps. were practically all very brief (e.g. a movement in a kbd. suite of Byrd or Purcell), by the 19th cent. they were frequently long (e.g. a sonata or sym. movement of the later Beethoven, followed by Bruckner and Mahler). This implies an enormous growth in the understanding of the principles of Form and in mastery of the application of those principles. However, despite all experiment, the forms so far devised can be generally classified into no more than 6 categories, all of them exploiting the idea of contrast plus variety both in the domain of content (Thematic Material) and in that of key (combinations of these are, of course, possible, e.g. in Simple Ternary Form each section can be in Binary Form, and so on). Individual works may, of course, vary from these generalized descriptions. (1) Simple Binary Form (e.g. in the movements of Bach's kbd. suites) has no strong contrast of material. The first section opens, of course, in the Tonic key and then (subject to an exception shortly to be mentioned) modulates, as it ends, into the key of the Dominant. The 2nd section then opens in that 2nd key and, before it ends, modulates back to the first. There are, then, 2 distinct main cadences, or points of rest, the first in the Dominant and the 2nd in the Tonic. The exception just referred to is this: if the piece is in a minor key the first section sometimes ends in the relative major. This form, although it sometimes attained fairly considerable dimensions in the 18th cent., is unsuitable for very long pieces, since the variety offered to the listener is almost entirely confined to details of treatment and the element of key, the thematic material employed throughout being the same. This form has been little used since c.1750. (2) Ternary Form. This is one of the most commonly used forms for short comps. It consists of a first section (more or less complete and self-contained), a 2nd section, contrasting as to mus. material and key (normally in the Dominant or the Tonic Minor or Relative Major), and then the first one repeated. See ABA. (3) Compound Binary Form (also known as Sonata Form, because often employed in the first or some other movement or movements of a Sonata; and as First Movement Form for the same reason). This derives historically from Simple Binary Form, but has developed into something more resembling Ternary Form. Like the Simple Binary it falls into 2 sections, of which the first modulates to the Dominant and the 2nd takes us back to the Tonic. But the sections have become elaborated as follows: 1st Section. Strain I (called First Subject) in Tonic key; followed by Strain II (called Second Subject) in Dominant key. Those 2 strains (or 'Subjects') are generally contrasted in character. This section is called the Exposition. 2nd Section. Some [fy45]*[fy75]Development (also called 'Working-out' or 'Free Fantasia') of the material in the previous section, followed by a repetition (Recapitulation) of that section, but this time with both subjects in the Tonic key so that the piece may end in the key with which it opened. Details are the following: (a) There is a Bridge Passage, leading (in both sections) from the First Subject to the Second; (b) At the end of each section there is some sort of a closing passage (Coda). A tendency towards the evolution of Simple Binary Form into Compound Binary Form may be observed in some of J. S. Bach's movements, but its first real exploitation is connected with the name and fame of his son, C. P. E. Bach, and its further exploitation and elaboration with the names of Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and their contemporaries. This form is still in frequent use, but 20th-cent. composers have modified it in detail. (4) Rondo Form. This may be considered an extension of Ternnary Form. Let the 3 sections of that form be indicated by the formula A, B, A; then the Rondo Form must be indicated by A, B, A, C, A, D, A, or some variant of this. (The sections B, C, D are often spoken of as Episodes.) Sonata-Rondo Form, as its name implies, offers a combination of the Compound Binary and Rondo Forms. The general plan is as follows: 1st Section: Subject I, Subject II in another key, Subject I reapeated. 2nd Section: Development of the previous Subject-material. 3rd Section: Subject I and Subject II again, but the latter this time in the same key as Subject I. Sometimes the Development above mentioned is replaced by new material. And there are other variants. (5) Air With Variations. This form, which from the 16th cent. to the presentday has been popular with composers of every class from the most trivial to themost serious, consists, as the name implies, of a theme (or 'Subject'), first played in its simplicity and then many times repeated with elaborations, each variation thus taking on its own individuality. (6) Combinations of several movements in different forms (Suite, Sonata, Symphony, Concerto, etc.) are called Cyclic Forms. There are very many types of comp. to which distinctive names are given, each representing not a 'Form', but rather a style in which one of the above forms is presented; such, for instance, are the Nocturne, the Gavotte, the Barcarolle, the Concertstück, and others. With the development of elec. mus. and the use of [fy45]*aleatory techniques in 20th-cent. comps., the use of form is stretched to meet whatever the composer may wish to do. Infinite flexibility would seem to be the guiding principle in works of this kind. See Fugue. Frankel, Benjamin (b London, 1906; d London, 1973). Eng. composer and cond. Watchmaker's apprentice. Studied mus. in Ger., returning to London (GSM) 1923. Worked as café musician and as jazz-band violinist, leader, and orchestrator. On staff GSM 1946. Wrote mus. for over 100 films. Prin. works:

orch: Vn. Conc. (1951), [fy75]Concertante Lirico for str. (1953), Serenata Concertante pf. trio and orch. (1961), va. conc. (1967), Pezzi Melodici for chamber orch. (1972). Syms., No. 1(____), No. 2 (1962), No. 3 (1964), No. 4 (1966), No. 5 (1967), No. 6 (1969), No. 7 (1969), No. 8 (1972).

chamber music: Str. Trio (1944), SoloVn. Sonata No. 1 (1944), No. 2 (1962); Str. Qts., No. 1 (1944), No. 2 (1945), No. 3 (1947), No. 4 (1948), No. 5 (1965); 3 Poems for vc. and pf. (1950), Pf. Qt. (1953), Bagatelles for 11 instr. (1959).

vocal: The Aftermath, ten., tpt., str. (1947), 8 Songs, medium v. and pf. (1959).

opera: Marching Song (1972--3), 3 acts, lib. by Hans Keller after play by John Whiting.[cm[u1]]

Fugue. Type of contrapuntal composition for particular number of parts or 'voices' (described thus whether vocal or instr.), e.g. fugue in 4 parts, fugue in 3 vv. The point of fugue is that the vv. enter successively in imitation of eachother, the 1st v. entering with a short melody or phrase known as the Subject (different from sonata-form 'subject' in that it is merely melodic and short). When all the vv. have entered, the Exposition is over. Then (normally) there comes an Episode or passage of connective tissue (usually a development of something that has appeared in the exposition) leading to another entry or series of entries of the Subject---and so on until the end of the piece, entries and episodes alternating. Contrasts of key constitute an important element in fugal construction. In the Exposition the Subject first appears, naturally, in the Tonic key; the 2nd v. to enter with it does so a 5th higher (or lower), i.e. in the Dominant key, the name Answer now being attached to it; the 3rd one is a repetition of the Subject (in a higher or lower octave) and so on. Subject and Answer thus appearing alternately, according to the number of 'voices' engaged, and Tonic andDominant keys thus also alternately. One function of the Episodes is to effect modulation to various related keys, so that the later entries may have the advantage of this variety, but once the Exposition is over it is not considered necessary that further series of entries shall always alternate as to keys in the Subject-Answer manner. In addition to the Subject there is often a Countersubject appearing in the Exposition and probably later in the Fugue. It is of the nature of a melodic accompaniment to the Answer and Subject (generally in double counterpoint--see Counterpoint). The v. which has just given out the Subject or Answer then goes on to the Countersubject whilst the next v. is giving out the Answer or Subject and so on. Sometimes in later entries there is overlapping of the Subject, each v., as it gives out, not waiting for the previous v. to finish it but breaking in, as it were, prematurely. This device, which is called Stretto, tends to increase the emotional tension of the entry in which it occurs. Occasionally, after the Exposition (and possibly before the 1st Episode) there is a Counter-Exposition, much like the 1st Exposition in that the same 2 keys are employed. Appearances of the Subject (in the Exposition or elsewhere) are sometimes separated by something of the Episode nature but shorter, called a Codetta. There exist 2 types of Fugue with Two Subjects (or Double Fugue), one in which the 2 Subjects appear from the outset (in double-harness, so to speak) and another in which the first Subject is treated for a certain time, the other then appearing and being likewise treated, after which the 2 are combined. In choral fugues (e.g. in an oratorio movement) there is sometimes a free instr. part, an Accompanied Fugue. The device of [fy45]*[fy75]Pedal is often employed in fugue, especially near its close. An explanation must now be given of a detail sometimes present in the Answer. There are cases in which, instead of its being an exact replica of the Subject (a Rear Answer), it is, for reasons not easily explained in so short a treatment as the present, slightly changed in 1 or 2 of its intervals (Tonal Answer). The results are a Real Fugue and a Tonal Fugue (an absurdity since the tonal treatment maynot extend beyond the exposition). A shortened type of fugue is sometimes called a Fughetta. A passage in fugal style, not in itself an actual fugue, is called Fugato. The above descriptions are of the academic fugue form, but the great composers have, naturally, varied it, e.g. Bach in Der Kunst der Fuge. Superb fugues occur in many works, e.g. Beethoven's Great Fugue for str. qt., Op. 133, known as the Grosse Fuge, in Elgar's Introduction and Allegro for str., and in many choral comps. Fugue-form is also used effectively in opera, e.g. the finale of Act 2 of Wagner's Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg and the finale of Verdi's Falstaff. Funeral marches. Among the best known of these (all of them in some public use on occasions of mourning) are the following: (1) Handel's Dead March in Saul (from the oratorio of that name); (2) The 2nd movement of Beethoven's 3rd Sym. (Eroica); (3) The 3rd movement of Chopin's 2nd Pf. Sonata (in Bb minor, Op. 35); (4) Chopin's Marche funèbre, Op. 72b in C minor. There are also (5) Beethoven's March 'sulla morte d'un eroe' (on the death of a hero), which is a movement in his Pf. Sonata in Ab, Op. 26; (6) Mendelssohn's Song without Words No. 28, in E minor (the title 'Funeral March' not, however, authentic); (7) The Funeral March for Siegfried from Wagner's Götterdämmerung; (8) Grieg's Funeral March for Nordraak (Military Band, but scored also by Halvorsen for orch.); (9) Berlioz's Funeral March for the Last Scene of 'Hamlet' (Op. 18 No. 3; 1848). Several symphonic movements (e.g. Elgars's 2nd Sym. Larghetto and various examples in the works of Mahler) have the character if not the title of funeral marches. Gamut. (1) Properly, the note G at the pitch now indicated by the lowest line of the bass staff. Greek G or 'gamma' was used for its designation, and as the note just mentioned was the 'Ut' (or as we should now say, 'Doh') of the lowest [fy45]*Hexachord this portmanteau word came into use as a name for it. (2) By extension the word came to be used as a comprehensive name for the whole series of Hexachords as displayed in writing. (3) By a further extension it came to mean 'scale' in general (Fr. [fy45]*[fy75]gamme). (4) It came also to mean the whole range of mus. sounds from the lowest to the highest; and to be applied in a metaphorical way to a singer's or actor's range, i.e. 'He coverd the whole gamut of tragic expression'.

Gigue or Giga (Fr. and It.). Jig. A rustic Eng., Scot., and Irish dance type (see Jig), in which the mus. runs along quickly in rhythmic groups of 3 beats ( $^3/_{[zs4[cf1]}}$ ,  $^6/_{[zs8[cf1]}}$ ,  $^9/_{[zs8[cf1]}}$ ,  $^{12}/_{[zs8[cf1]}}$ , etc.): often there is a long-short effect, a sort of merry limp (e.g. ;Ya;Yb ;Ya ;Yb). Eng. virginalists were first to employ the gigue, which was introduced to the Continent by [fy45]*Froberger, 1649. Pieces in gigue style came to be the customary closing movements of the suite: the form was binary, and, with J. S. Bach, the 2 halves often opened in something like fugal style, the subject of the first half being often inverted as that of the 2nd half. (Occasionally Bach applied the term 'gigue' to a piece that was not such, being in simple duple or quadruple time.)

Glee. A choral comp. in a no. of short self-contained sections, each expressing the mood of some particular passage of the text, the mus. predominantly harmonic (i.e. in blocks of chords), rather than contrapuntal. Properly it is for unacc. male vv. Its great period, during which a remarkable series of able composers, chief among them Samuel Webbe, made lavish contributions to the repertory, was from about 1750 to about 1830, after which it gradually gave way to the [fy45]*part-song. It is a purely Eng. form, and was much fostered by the popularity of glee clubs. (In USA this name has been applied to univ. mus. clubs with much more general aims.)

Glissando (bastard It., from Fr. glisser, to slide). (1, pf., harp, xylophone, vibraphone, etc.) The drawing of a finger down or up a series of adjacent notes. (2, bowed instr.) Passing from one note to another on the same str. (or part of the way to this other) in much the same manner as above and with much the same effect---with the difference that the pitches passed through, instead of representing the fixed tones and semitones of a scale, are infinite in no. Tb. can also perform a satisfactory glissando.

God save the King (Queen). The tune of the Brit. 'National Anthem' must long have been the best-known tune in the world, having at one time or another been borrowed by about 20 countries as that of their official nat. song. The popularity of the words and tune in Brit. seems to date from the time of the landing of the Young Pretender, in 1745, when they were introduced in London ths. and widely adopted. The authorship of both words and tune is obscure. The common attribution to Henry Carey is untenable. The tune is in rhythm and style a galliard. There is a Geneva tune of this type with some phrases resembling some in God save the King; it was introduced in 1603 at a banquet celebrating the first anniversary of the unsuccessful attempt of the Duke of Savoy to seize the city (the 'Escalade'). An Eng. Christmas carol printed in 1611, Remember, O thou man, shows similar resemblances. Much stronger resemblances are seen in akbd. piece of John [fy45]*Bull, though this is in the minor, and his name is sometimes attached to the tune. In the Amer. colonies and the USA the tune has at different times been sung to many different sets of words---God save America, God save George Washington, God save the Thirteen States, and the like. The present words My country, 'tis of thee, date from 1831 and are the work of the Rev. Samuel Francis Smith. The name usually given to the tune is America. Many composers have introduced the tune into their comps. or based comps. upon it---Beethoven, Weber, Brahms, Donizetti, etc. Gramophone (or Phonograph) Recordings. The idea of recording sound by attaching a needle to a membrane vibrating in sympathy and by allowing its point to mark a plate travelling at a fixed speed dates from as early as the beginning of the 19th cent., the object being to add to acoustical knowledge about the differences in the vibrations evoked by sounds of various pitches and timbres. Edison, in the USA. in 1877 constructed such an apparatus, with the intention that it should be used in a 'dictating machine': this he called The Phonograph - the Ideal Amanuensis, and the records, on wax cylinders, he called Phonograms. The vv. of many celebrities of the day were crudely preserved in this way (e.g. Gladstone, Irving, Tennyson) and in 1878 Lily Moulton, an amateur singer, sang into Edison's device. Other musicians, incl. Brahms, made recordings in the 1880s. Emile Berliner, a Ger.-born citizen of the USA, had by 1888 obtained patents for important improvements---a circular plate of a shellac mixture instead of a waxed cylinder, and a horizontal motion of the needle instead of a perpendicular one (i.e. a motion making lateral impressions on the sides of a spiral track instead of the previous 'hill and dale' impressions), and his principles were in time developed and universally adopted. The patented title for the instr. which played Berliner's discs was 'gramophone', but the less accurate 'gramophone' was adopted. The flat disc record led to a boom among commercial cos. for preserving the vv. of celebrated singers. The first singer to record commercially and to make a reputation thereby was the Russian sop. Maria Mikhailova. Soon Calvé, Van Rooy, Plan; Alcon, Kirkby-Lunn, Albani, Maurel, and Ben Davies were recorded, but it was the ten.

[fy45]*Caruso who 'made' the gramophone record. Instrumentalists, too, were recorded, among them Grieg, Sarasate, Joachim, and Pugno. The historical importance of these discs is obvious, and many of them have been transferred on to modern records and tapes. So far the processes used had been purely 'Acoustic', the result of the direct action of sound vibrations. The human v. could be fairly satisfactorily and faithfully recorded by this means, but attempts to record orch. mus. were crude and primitive. In 1925 appeared the earliest electrically-made records, in which the vibrations had been received by means of a microphone and converted into electrical vibrations, causing, in turn, mechanical vibrations in a steel or fibre needle travelling over the recording disc. It was found that by the use of electrically-made records, operating at the standard speed of 78 revolutions per minute, very much more faithful reproductions could be secured, and the acoustic-made record in time disappeared from the market. The motive power of the Edison and early Berliner instrs. had been supplied by a handle turned by the operator. This had been superseded by a clock-spring device, which in the more expensive instr. was, in turn, superseded by electric power obtained by plugging in to the domestic electric circuit: such instr. also reproduced the sounds by electric means, reversing the process of electrical recording as above described. The new apparatus was very commonly combined with 1 for the reception of radio broadcasting and called a radiogram. During the 1920s and 1930s recordings of most of the world's great orchs. and chamber groups were made. the perfs. of great artists such as Rakhmaninov, Kreisler, and Heifetz were preserved, and the composers Elgar and Strauss cond. their own music for the gramophone. Whole operas were issued, and the significance of the gramophone as an educative force and as a means of widening the public's repertory became apparent. A great disadvantage of the 78 r.p.m. record was that comps. were cut up into sides lasting less than 5 minutes. An opera could run to 40 or more sides. It was only in 1948 that (at first in the USA) all the problems inherent in trying to combine a narrower groove and slower speed without loss of 'high fidelity' throughout the greater part of the range of audible frequencies was satisfactorily solved. This was when the Columbia co. announced the long-playing, (LP), disc. Attempts to introduce LPs had been made in 1904 and 1931, but the 1948 version offered an average of 23 mins. per side at 33 r.p.m., with the advantages of records made from non-breakable material, with greatly improved recording techniques, and with lightweight pick-ups and sapphire and diamond needles. At first there was some resistance and a 'battle' between the 33 r.p.m. and 45 r.p.m. (for short items) speeds. In Britain, Decca was the first firm to market LPs in 1950, the EMI group not following until 1952. However, the artistic advantages of being able to record a whole opera on 6 or 8 sides, a Mozart symphony on 1 side, and to offer complete recitals by singers and instrumentalists on 1 record revolutionized the industry and listening habits. The standards of recording improved constantly with the advent of the record 'producer', who, like an opera producer, governed the whole recording process. It could be argued that the remarkable growth of the public appetite for the mus. of Mahler is partly due to the fact that LPs enabled his vast symphonies to be easily recorded. The rise of the LP was paralleled by the growth of high-fidelity---'hi-fi'---reproductive equipment---the coupling of amplifier, speakers, pick-up, and needle-cartridge instead of the mass-produced radiogram. The other important factor in LP recording was the use of magnetic tape instead of wax or acetate for the orig. recording process. Experiments with tape were made, esp. in Germany, in the late 1930s and early 1940s. Tape enables long stretches of mus. to be recorded without a break; it also enables flaws and errors to be corrected by the re-recording of the offending bar or two, so that a final recording may be, and often is, a compilation of the best of several 'takes', skilfully edited. The next 'recording revolution' was in 1958 with the introduction of stereophonic (as opposed to monophonic) sound, whereby the sound of instr. or singers was as realistically 'placed' as in the hall or opera house. Eventually 'stereo' replaced 'mono' entirely; and demands for still more realistic and spectacular sound led in the 1970s to 'quadraphonic' recordings (which means that the engineers have used four independent signal channels into the master tape). Of less commercial success at first was the issue of recordings as tapes instead of discs (mono from 1951, stereo from 1956 in the USA). These did not appeal to the public until, in 1965, the automatic cassette was introduced, much more easily and conveniently playable. Soon the sales of cassettes threatened to rival those of discs and to replace them. Along side the enormous expansion of recording has developed the 'literary' side of the gramophone, not only expert reviewing, but the specialized compilation of lists of recordings made by individual artists, these being known as [fy45]*[fy75]discographies. Great Staff or Great Stave (or Grand Staff or Stave). Fictional notational device rather unnecessarily introduced by mus. pedagogues for the purpose of explaining the clefs--- ____ and __ or ___. [qc[qc^The two staves in common use are brought near together. It suffices then to place between them 1 extra line for Middle C ('middle' in a double sense: in the middle of this diagram, as it is in the middle of the pf. kbd.). The C Clef is placed on this line. The Treble (or G) Clef now comes 2 lines above and the Bass (or F Clef) 2 lines below. The Treble Staff, Bass Staff, Soprano Staff (still in some choral use in Ger.), the Alto Staff (in use in older choral mus., in mus. for the Va., etc.) and the Tenor Staff (in use in older choral mus., for the tb., etc.) are seen as sections of the 1 'Great Staff', with Middle C as the connexion. __G__Soprano Staff Alto Staff Tenor Staff C__F

Greensleeves. Old Eng. tune twice mentioned by Shakespeare in The Merry Wives of Windsor and by other writers of this period and later. It is first referred to in the Stationers' Co. Register in 1580, when it is called 'a new Northern Ditty', but there is evidence that it is of earlier date. There seem to be many ballads to the tune, as also some examples of its being converted to pious uses, as, for instance (again in 1580), 'Green Sleeves moralized to the Scripture'. During the Civil War of the 17th cent. Greensleeves was a party tune, the Cavaliers setting many political ballads to it. From this period the tune is sometimes known as The Blacksmith, and under that name Pepys alludes to it (23 Apr. 1660). The tune is sung by Mistress Ford in Act 3 of Vaughan Williams's opera Sir John in Love (based on The Merry Wives) to the words printed in A Handfull of Pleasant Delites, 1584. An orch. fantasia from the opera is frequently played. The tune is also used by [fy45]*Holst in his St Paul's Suite for str.

Gruppetto (It.). Grouplet. The Turn, a type of ornament in vocal and instr. mus. Gruppetto implies a 4-note figure---the note above, the note itself, the note below, and the note itself. This figure is performed after the note itself or instead of it, according to whether the turn sign is placed after the note itself or over it. The inflection of the upper or lower note of the turn (in either form) is shown by the placing of a sharp, flat, natural, etc., sign above or below. When the Gruppetto occurs after the note there is a good deal left to the taste of the performer as regards the division of the time available. The general principle seems to be that the gruppetto is to be performed pretty quickly. To bring this about, the first example just given (if occurring in a slow tempo) might be treated thus: Largo or [qc[qc^Whilst in a very quick tempo it might be treated as follows (indeed there might be no time to treat it in any other way): Prestissimo = [qc[qc^The number of different examples given in different textbooks is very large, and no 2 textbooks quite agree, but the above statement gives the chief general principles accepted by all. They also apply, of course, to the Inverted Turn, which begins with the lower auxiliary note, instead of the upper one.

Gymel or Gimel (from Lat. gemellus, twin). The word has been used in mus. in 3 senses, all with the idea of twinship. (1) Style of singing alleged to have been common in parts of Brit. as early as the 10th or 11th cents. Whilst one body of singers took the tune of a song another body would extemporaneously add a part in 3rds beneath it. (2) Type of comp. found in the 14th and early 15th cents. in which, whilst the main tune, or [fy45]*[fy75]canto fermo, was sung in a lower v., 2 upper vv. sang an acc. in which they moved independently of the other v. but in 3rds with one another. (3) In 16th-cent. choral mus. the word Gymel on a vocal part means that the singers of that part are here divided---our divisi, in fact. The restoration of the status quo is then indicated by the word Semel.

Habanera (Fr. havanaise). Slow Cuban (orig. African) song and dance (Habana = Havana), which became very popular in Sp. It is in simple duple time and dotted rhythm. Famous examples are the Haba;Atnera in Bizet's opera Carmen ('L'amour est un oiseau rebelle') which is an adaptation of a popular song by [fy45]*Yradier, and the Habanera for 2 pf. by Ravel, later incorporated in his Rapsodie espagnole for orch.

%1% Harmony. The simultaneous sounding (i.e. combination) of notes, giving what is known as vertical mus., contrasted with horizontal mus. ([fy45]*Counterpoint). Composers, in much the greater proportion of their mus., maintain in their minds some melody which ranks as the principal 1, and which they intend the listener to recognize as such, whilst other melodies which are combined with it, or chords with which it is acc., rank as subsidiary. The word [fy45]*chord may be defined as any combination of notes simultaneously perf., and even when the main process in the composer's mind is a weaving together of melodic strands he has to keep before him this combinational element, both as regards the notes thus sounded together and the suitability of one combination to follow and precede the adjacent combination. At different periods composers have given more attention to 1 or the other of the 2 aspects of their work: (a) the weaving together of melodic strands and (b) the chords thus brought into existence from point to point. The former aspect of the result is the Contrapuntal element (see [fy45]*Counterpoint) and the latter the Harmonic element. In less elaborate mus. (as, for instance, a simple song with pf. acc.) the contrapuntal element may be unimportant or even non-existent. Counterpoint necessarily implies also harmony, but harmony does not necessarily imply counterpoint. Over a long period the resources of harmony may be said to have widened: new combinations introduced by composers of pioneering spirit have been condemned by unaccustomed ears as ugly, have then gradually come to be accepted as commonplace, and have been succeeded in their turn by other experimental combinations. The following definitions concern traditional and basic harmonic procedures: (a) diatonic harmony: Harmony which confines itself to the major or minor key in force at the moment.

chromatic harmony Harmony which employs notes extraneous to the major or minor key in force at the moment. (b)

open harmony: Harmony in which the notes of the chords are more or less widely spread.

close harmony: Harmony in which the notes of the chords lie near together. (c)

progression: The motion of one note to another note or one chord to another chord. (d)

triad: A note with its 3rd and 5th (e.g. C--E--G).

common chord: A Triad of which the 5th is perfect.

major common chord: A Common Chord of which the 3rd is major.

minor common chord: A Common Chord of which the 3rd is minor.

augmented triad: A Triad of which the 5th is augmented.

diminished triad: A Triad of which the 5th is diminished. (e) root of a chord. That note from which it originates. (For instance, in the common chord C--E--G we have C as the root, to which are added the 3rd and 5th.)

inversion of a chord: The removal of the root from the bass to an upper part.

first inversion: That in which the 3rd becomes the bass (e.g. E--G--C or E--C--G).

second inversion: That in which the 5th becomes the bass (e.g. G--E--C or G--C--E).

third inversion: In a 4-note chord that inversion in which the fourth note becomes the bass. (For instance, in the chord G--B--D--F the form of it that consists of F--G--B--D or F--B--G--D, etc.)

fundamental bass: An imaginary bass of a passage, consisting not of its actual bass notes but of the roots of its chords, i.e. the bass of its chords when uninverted. (f) concord. A chord satisfactory in itself (or an interval that can be so described; or a note which forms a part of such an interval or chord).

consonance[nm: The same as Concord. [smdiscord: A chord which is restless, requiring to be followed in a particular way if its presence is to be justified by the ear (or the note or interval responsible for producing this effect). See, for instance, the examples given under Dominant Seventh and Diminished Seventh.

dissonance[nm: The same as Discord. [smresolution: The satisfactory following of a discordant chord (or the satisfactory following of the discordant note in such a chord).

suspension: A form of discord arising from the holding over of a note in one chord as a momentary (discordant) part of the combination which follows, it being then resolved by falling a degree to a note which forms a real part of the second chord.

double suspension: The same as the last with 2 notes held over. (g) anticipation: The sounding of a note of a chord before the rest of the chord is sounded.

retardation: The same as a Suspension but resolved by rising a degree.

preparation: The sounding in one chord of a concordant note which is to remain (in the same 'part') in the next chord as a discordant note. (This applies both to Fundamental Discords and Suspensions.)

unprepared suspension: A contradiction in terms meaning an effect similar to that of Suspension but without 'Preparation'.

fundamental discord: A discordant chord of which the discordant note forms a real part of the chord, i.e. not a mere Suspension, Anticipation, or Retardation. Or the said discordant note itself (e.g. Dominant Seventh, Diminished Seventh, etc.).

passing note: A connecting note in one of the melodic parts (not forming a part of the chord which it follows or precedes). (h)

false relation: The appearance of a note with the same letter-name in different parts (or 'voices') of contiguous chords, in one case inflected (sharp or flat) and in the other uninflected. (i) pedal (or 'Point d'Orgue'): The device of holding on a bass note (usually Tonic or Dominant) through a passage including some chords of which it does not form a part.

inverted pedal: The same as the above but with the held note in an upper part.

double pedal: A pedal in which two notes are held (generally Tonic and Dominant). From Wagner onwards the resources of harmony have been enormously extended, and those used by composers of the present day often submit to no rules whatever, being purely empirical, or justified by rules of the particular composer's own devising. Among contemporary practices are: [fy45]*[fy75]Bitonality--in which two contrapuntal strands or 'parts' proceed in different keys. [fy45]*[fy75]Polytonality--in which the different contrapuntal strands, or 'parts', proceed in more than 1 key. [fy45]*[fy75]Atonality--in which no principle of key is observed. [fy45]*[fy75]Microtonality--in which scales are used having smaller intervals than the semitone. In the 20th cent. greater freedom in the treatment of the above procedures has developed, together with a much wider application of dissonance. Chords of 7th, 9th, 11th, and 13th are treated as primary chords, and there has been a return to the use of pentatonic scales, medieval modes, and the whole-tone scale. Aprin. revolution c.1910 was the abandonment of the triad as the prin. and fundamental consonance. Composers such as Bartók, Stravinsky, Schoenberg, and Webern widened the mus. spectrum of tone-colour by showing that any combination of notes could be used as a basic unresolved chord. The tritone has been used as the cause of harmonic tensions in place of tonic-dominant relationships. Another 20th-cent. harmonic feature is the 'layering' of sound, each layer following different principles of organization. Milhaud produces bitonal passages from 2 layers in different tonalities. Since 1950 much mus. has been comp. in which harmony has hardly any place, for example in some of the serial works of Boulez and Stockhausen. Where non-pitched sounds are used, harmony no longer exists and its place is taken by overtones, densities, and other concomitants of 'clusters', etc. In amplification of this entry see Added Sixth, Augmented Sixth, Consecutive Fifth, Counterpoint, and Chromatic Chords.

%%2%Harp. This instr., of very ancient lineage, can be simply defined as an open frame over which is stretched a graduated series of str., set in vibration by plucking with the fingers. In the modern orch. harp the series is not normally chromatic, as it is in the pf., having merely 7 different notes with the octave, these being in the major scale of B (treated for convenience as that of Cb). There are 7 pedals, each affecting one note of this foundational scale; each pedal works to 2 notches, and by depressing it to its first or 2nd notch, respectively, the vibrating lengths of all the relevant strings are simultaneously shortened by fractions representing a semitone and a tone: thus all keys become possible, and by depressing all the pedals together the pitch of the complete instr. can be raised from Cb (the normal key) to Cnat. or C#. The usual compass is 5;FD octaves from C. Chords are normally played in more or less rapid succession of their notes, in the form understood by the word arpeggio (It. arpa, Harp). The typical 'sweeping' (glissando) action of the hand may be used in many kinds of scale (but evidently not in the chromatic scale, however, nor in any other scale passage employing more than 8 notes to the octave). In addition, of course, single str. may be plucked individually or in small groups. The instr. described above is the double-action harp, introduced by Erard (c.1810), the word 'double' marking its differences from its predecessors on which the pitches could be raised only a semitone. One earlier form of the harp is the Welsh harp or telyn, with 3 rows of str., the 2 outer rows (tuned in unison or octaves) giving the diatonic scale and the inner row the intermediate semitones: a simple modulation was effected by touching 1 of the inner str. The harp has been much used as a solo instr. in Wales from time immemorial and in Eng. domestically during the Victorian period. It was a frequent member of the early 17th-cent. orch. but in later times was rarely found again in orch. use until the 19th cent. when the great Romantic orchestrators--- Berlioz, Wagner, Strauss, Mahler, Elgar, etc.---made effective use of it. In the 20th cent. it has been used in chamber mus. (e.g. by Debussy and Ravel). There are several harp concs. See also Chromatic Harp, Double Harp, Clarsach, Bell Harp, Dital Harp, Aeolian Harp.

%4%Harpsichord Family (Virginals, Spinet, Harpsichord). The harpsichord is a wing-shaped kbd. instr. in which the str. are plucked mechanically. It was developed during the 15th cent., the earliest surviving example (in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London) having been made in Bologna in 1521, but there are illustrated representations of the instr. dating from nearly a century earlier, and a reference in a Ger. poem of 1404 to the clavicimbalum, the earliest recorded use of the name from which the It. word clavicembalo is derived. The hpd. is fundamentally a mechanized [fy45]*psaltery. Each key operates a mechanical device known as the 'jack', equipped with a small leather or quill plectrum attached to a pivoted tongue. When the key is released the jack descends and, by positioning of a spring, the tongue pivots back, allowing the plectrum to pass the str. silently on its return. When the jack is back in its orig. position, a felt damper silences the vibration of the str. Very few contrasts of tone or dynamics are possible, variation in finger touch having little effect. Italy was the home of the first important sch. of hpd. makers; at the end of the 16th cent., however, Antwerp became the centre of activity, particularly for the family of Ruckers. Their aim was to give the players some tonal contrast, a typical Ruckers single-manual instr. having a compass of four octaves from C and two sets of strings, one 8' and one 4'. Hand stops in the right-hand side of the case brought 1 or both sets of jacks into contact with the strings. Ruckers also prod. a 2-manual hpd., the lower manual a 4th below the upper. From the 17th cent. to the end of the 18th, the hpd. was the indispensable supporting basis for continuo in almost every instr. combination, as well as being a popular domestic instr. With the development of the pf., the hpd. fell into semi-oblivion during the 19th cent., but in the 20th it has been revived both by modern composers, several of whom--e.g. Falla and McCabe--have written concs. for it, and in the authentic perf. of baroque mus. The [fy45]*Dolmetsch family played a major part in the revival, and there are several distinguished modern hpd. manufacturers. 20th cent. virtuosi have incl. Wanda [fy45]*Landowska and Ralph [fy45]*Kirkpatrick. Virginal or Virginals. This plucked kbd. instr. was first mentioned c.1460. The origin of the name is not, as is generally supposed, Eng. nor has anything to do with Elizabeth I, but it is widely accepted that the name derives from the fact that young ladies were regularly depicted playing the instr. The main differences from the hpd. are in the oblong shape of the soundbox, the placing of the str. parallel to the kbd. instead of at right-angles, and the existence of 2 bridges. Sometimes one sees references to 'double virginals' or 'a pair of virginals'. The origins of these terms are obscure, since a double-manual virginal was extremely rare; a likely explanation is that they referred to the instr.'s compass. Eng. virginal mus. of the 17th cent. is of major importance; colls. of it incl. the [fy45]*[fy75]Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, [fy45]*[fy75]My Ladye Nevells Booke, [fy45]*[fy75]Benjamin Cosyn's Virginal Book and [fy45]*[fy75]Will Forster's Virginal Book. The earliest pubd. coll. was [fy45]*[fy75]Parthenia(c.1612). Spinet. This resembles the virginals in having 1 str. to a note, but differs from it in being not rectangular but wing-shaped in an uneven 6 sides with the longest containing the kbd. It had a 4-octave compass. The str. either ran roughly parallel to the kbd. as with the virginals, or diagonally in front of the player. (In the Clavicytherium, however, a rarer form than that described above, the str. ran perpendicularly like those of an upright pf.) The spinet was in use from the later 15th cent. to the end of the 18th.

Interpretation in mus. is merely the act of perf., with the implication that in it the performer's judgement and personality have a share. Just as there is no means by which a dramatist can so write his play as to indicate to the actors precisely how they shall speak his lines, so there is no means by which a composer can indicate to a performer the precise way in which his mus. is to be sung or played---so that no 2 performers will adopt the same slackenings and hastenings of speed (incl. [fy45]*[fy75]Rubato), the same degree of emphasis on an accented note, and so forth. The matter is further complicated by composers' latitude in use of metronome markings as applied to a term such as allegro or moderato (e.g. varying in 1 work from ;Ya = 160 to ;Ya = 100 for allegro). Thus there is no 'right' or 'wrong' interpretation in the strict sense, but in matters of style and taste, a performer's 'interpretation' may be felt by listeners to be out of sympathy with, or a distortion of, the composer's intentions.

Interval. The 'distance' between 2 notes is called an 'interval' i.e. the difference in pitch between any 2 notes. The size of any interval is expressed numerically, e.g. C to G is a 5th, because if we proceed up the scale of C the 5th note in it is G---and so on. The somewhat hollow-sounding 4th, 5th, and 8ve of the scale are all called Perfect. They possess what we may perhaps call a 'purity' distinguishing them from other intervals. The other intervals, as they are found in ascending the major scale from its key-note, are called Major ('Major 2nd', 'Major 3rd', 'Major 6th', 'Major 7th'). If any Major interval be chromatically reduced by a semitone it becomes Minor; if any Perfect or Minor interval be so reduced it becomes Diminished; if any Perfect or Major interval be increased by a semitone it becomes Augmented.

enharmionic intervals are those which differ from each other in name but not in any other way (so far as modern keyboard instruments are concerned, at all events). As an example take C to G sharp (an Augmented 5th) and C to Aflat (a Minor 6th).

compound intervals are those greater than an 8ve, e.g. C to the D an 8ve and a note higher, which may be spoken of either as a Major 9th or as a Compound Major 2nd.

inversion of intervals is the reversing of the relative position of the 2notes defining them, e.g. C to G inverted becomes G to C. It will be found that a 5th when inverted becomes a 4th, a 3rd becomes a 6th, and so on (i.e. the number-name of the new interval = 9 minus the number of the old interval). It will also be found that Perfect intervals remain Perfect (C to G a Perfect 5th; G to C a Perfect 4th, etc.), Major ones become Minor, Minor becomes Major, Augmented become Diminished, and Diminished become Augmented. Every interval is either concordant[nm or [smdiscordant]. The Concordant comprise all Perfect intervals and all Major and Minor 3rds and 6ths; the Discordant comprise all Augmented and Diminished intervals and all 2nds and 7ths. It follows from what has been said in this and the previous paragraphs that all Concordant intervals when inverted remain Concordant and all Discordant intervals remain Discordant. Musical examples of Intervals are as follows:

Intonation. (1) The opening phrase of a [fy45]**plainsong* melody, perhaps so called because it was often sung by the precentor alone and gave the pitch and (in the Psalms) the 'tone' of what was to follow. (2) The act of singing or playing in tune. Thus we speak of a singer or instrumentalist's 'intonation' as being good or bad.

Intrada. The It. equivalent of [fy45]*[fy75]Entrée. Used as name for a movement by 18th.-cent. composers and also in 20th cent. (e.g. in Vaughan Williams's Concerto Grosso).

Invention. The name given by Bach to 15 of his shorter kbd. comps.in 2 parts or 'voices' incl. in his Klavierbüchlein, 1720. They are highly contrapuntal, being largely imitative in nature. Each works out some short melodic motif. Bach also left another 15 comps. in the same style, known today as his 'Three-part Inventions', but to these he gave the title 'Symphonies'.

Inventionshorn, Inventionstrompete (Ger.). Invention Horn, Invention Trumpet. In the second half of the 18th century, the natural hn. was provided with crooks, i.e. additional lengths of tubing which could change the pitch of the instr. Thus a hn. in F could be changed into E or D, etc. At first the crooks were inserted under the mouthpiece, which considerably increased the length, and therefore the clumsiness, of the instr. The hn.-player Hampel of Dresden is said to have invented curved, sliding crooks, called 'inventions', which together with the use of stopped notes (also discovered by Hampel), made the Inventionshorn an almost completely chromatic instr. Hampel's device was adopted until superseded by the invention of valves, c.1815. The term Inventionstrompete was applied to the tpt. equivalent of the Inventionshorn, and also to the so-called 'Italian Trumpet' (coiled into hn. shape).

Often heard in orch. arr. by Berlioz (1841), and sometimes, much changed, in 1 by Weingartner. Adopted by Russian Ballet as mus. for their Le Spectre de la rose.

Jew's Harp. 1 of the simplest and most widely distributed instr., being found throughout Europe and Asia. It consists of a tiny iron frame, open at 1 end, in which end a single strip of metal vibrates. The frame is held between the teeth and the strip then twanged by the finger. The strip, in itself, is obviously capable of producing only 1 note, but the harmonics of this note become available by resonance, through various shapings of the cavity of the mouth. Thus tunes can be played. The origin of the name is unknown and seems to be unconnected with Jewry. The name 'Jew's Trump' was recorded in 1545. The Fr. called the instr. rebube or guimbarde, and in Ger. it is Trumpel.

Kaiserwalzer. See [fy45]*[fy75]Emperor Waltz. Key. (1) As a principle in mus. comp., implies adherence, in any passage, to the note-material of one of the major or minor scales (see [fy45]*[fy75]Scale)---not necessarily a rigid adherence (since other notes may incidentally appear), but a general adherence, with a recognition of the [fy45]*Tonic (or [fy45]*keynote) or the scale in question as a prin. and governing factor in its effect. Thus we speak of a passage as being `in the key of' (say) C major or F minor, and also use the same terms to describe a comp. (or movement) as a whole---in this latter case implying merely that the key mentioned is the one in which the piece begins and sometimes but not always (e.g. Mahler) ends and is its governing one (see [fy45]*[fy75]Modulation). If a piece of several movements is so spoken of it does not necessarily mean more than that the first movement (usually also the last one) is in that key. It will be realised that all major keys are exactly alike, as are all minor keys, so that the particular key chosen for a comp. is more a matter of the desired pitch-level than of anything more important (see Transposition). The element of key crept into European mus. in the early 17th cent., as the [fy45]*[fy75]Modes gradually fell out of use: it remained of supreme importance to the end of the 19th cent., but in the 20th cent. many composers, led by [fy45]*Schoenberg, have abandoned tonality. See Atonality. (2) A lever on an instrument which is depressed by finger or foot to produce a note, e.g. on a pf. by finger, on an organ by foot, on woodwind by finger (the levers covering the airholes). Keyboard. (1) A frame, or set, of [fy45]*keys presenting them in a continuous arr. The purpose of kbds. is to enable the 2 hands (e.g. on pf. or harmonium) or the 2 hands and 2 feet (org.) readily to control the sounds from a much larger number of str., reeds or pipes than could other-wise be controlled. One standardized apparatus of this sort, which has been gradually developed over a long period, has come to be universally adopted: it is by no means the most convenient imaginable, but the conservatism of musicians will probably prevent its supersession unless some drastic change in the scales used in mus. (e.g. by the general adoption of [fy45]*Microtones) makes such a change imperative. The unchanging span of the octave is determined by the average span of the human hand. The earliest kbd. was, apparently, that of the organ, in the days when the melodic plainsong of the Church was played on that instr., at first thumped out on keys as broad as the fists that operated them. In those days, and for long after the keys had been adapted for finger-pressure, mus. was still modal and the longer finger-keys, as we still have them, were all that were needed. With the coming into use of the practice of [fy45]*[fy75]musica ficta a Bb was found to be desirable and space for it was made by placing a short finger-key between the A and the Bnat. (It appears that a few kbds. like this still existed as late as the beginning of the 17th cent.). Other finger-keys were similarly added, and our present-day kbd. of 7 different long and broad keys and 5 short and narrow ones so came into existence. This still leaves out many notes (e.g. B#, if required, has to be played as C, Fb as E, and so on). The restricted number of keys which the individual can manipulate and the necessity of avoiding the high cost of providing a larger number of extra organ pipes, str., etc., precluded the provision of further finger-keys, and the difficulty was overcome by methods of tuning: at first, partially, with Mean-tone tuning and then, fully, with Equal [fy45]*Temperament tuning. There have been many attempts at the invention of a kbd. which would be free (or largely free) from this principle of compromise, but whilst some of them have been interesting scientifically none has proved of value practically in the making of mus. Various ingenious inventions, such as the [fy45]*Janko kbd., have also proved ephemeral. (2) The term is also used generally, as in `keyboard works', to indicate that the works may be played on more than one kind of keyed instr. Key-signature. The sign, or no. of signs, written at the beginnng of each staff, to indicate the [fy45]*key of the comp. No signature indicates a [fy45]*natural key. A sharp (#) or flat (b) signature indicates a [fy45]*chromatic key. Use of a key-signature dispenses with the need to write [fy45]*accidentals for the notes affected throughout the comp. The keys of C major and A minor require no chromatic alteration. The key of the 5th above C, root G, requires 1 sharp. The 'natural' form of the minor scale determines key-signature. Major and minor key-signatures are indicated thus: Sharp [el32]Flat (Seldom used). [qr]The white note in each case represents the major key, the black note the minor key with the same signature (called 'Relative Minor'). It will be observed that, starting from C, the keynotes of the Sharp Keys rise 5 notes (a Perfect 5th) each remove, and that the keynotes of the Flat Keys fall 5 notes (a Perfect 5th) each remove. It will also be observed that in the Sharp Major Keys the keynote is immediately above the last sharp. And that in the Flat major Keys the keynote is 4 notes below the last flat (i.e. is at the pitch of the last flat but one in the signature). And that 3 notes down any Major Scale we come to the keynote of its Relative Minor or, to state it the other way, 3 notes up any Minor Scale we come to the keynote of its Relative Major. Note that keys with 6 sharps (F# major and D# minor) are (on kbd. instr.) the equivalents of the keys with 6 flats (Gb major and Eb minor), and that keys with 7 sharps (C# major and A# minor) are the equivalents of the keys with 5 flats (Db major and Bb minor). Thus composers use either 1 or the other of these signatures, but it is much easier to write in Db with 5 flats than in C# with 7 sharps. The order of the sharps in the signature is by rising 5ths, and the order of the flats is by falling 5ths. [el4]Sharps ;BY;BZ F^C^G^D^A^E^B ;BX;BY Flats[qc[el4]]That is, the 1 order is the other reversed. King's Singers, The. Male-v. ens. of 6 singers (2 counter-ten., ten., 2 bar., bass) formed in 1968 and so called because orig. members met at King's College, Cambridge. Specialize in part-songs and in arrs. of various genres, incl. humorous songs. Range from Monteverdi to Noël Coward, with several works written specially for them by contemporary composers.

Kleine Nachtmusik, Eine (A little Night Music, or Serenade). Comp. (K525) by Mozart (for which occasion is not known) dating from 10th Aug. 1787, and in 4 movements. It is the serenade No. 13 in G major, scored for '2 violins, viola, and bassi' or small str. orch. Orig. MS, recovered 1955, indicates that a 5th movement, a first minuet, was torn out.

Kol Nidrei (Kol Nidre; All vows). (1) For vc. and orch., Op. 47 by Bruch, comp. in 1881. Arr. for vc. and pf. (2) Setting for rabbi, ch., and orch., Op. 39 by [fy45]*Schoenberg (1938), f.p. Los Angeles 1938, cond. Schoenberg. The Kol Nidrei is the opening prayer of the Jewish service on the evening of the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur). It has tragic associations with the Sp. persecution of the Jews in the 17th cent.

Konzertstück (Ger.). Concert piece, generally with the implication of 'concerted' piece, i.e. for solo instr. and orch. Term often applied to short or 1-movement cons., e.g. Weber's Konzertstück for pf. and orch.

Korchinska, Maria (b Moscow, 1895; d London, 1979). Russ.-born harpist. Studied Moscow Cons. Prin. harpist, Bolshoy Th., 1918--24, prof. of harp, Moscow Cons., 1918--24. Settled in Eng. 1926. Took part in f.p. of Britten's A Ceremony of Carols, 1942.

Krakoviak, Krakowiak. (1) Polish dance from district of Krakow. In lively  $\frac{2}{[zs4[cf1]}}$  time, with distinctive syncopation. (2) Title of Chopin's concert rondo for pf. and orch., Op. 14, comp. 1828.

Kunst der Fuge, Die (The Art of Fugue). Posthumous and unfinished work by J. S. Bach, comp. 1748--9, and designed to establish the possibilities of 1 simple subject in the various types of fugal and canonic writing. [el24]^It is not clear what medium was intended to be employed, or, indeed whether actual perf. was in view. Pubd. posthumously in 1750. Modern edns. for pf. and versions for str. instr. and for orch. have appeared. Completions of the final fugue have been made by Donald [fy45]*Tovey and by [fy45]*Busoni in his [fy45]*[fy75]Fantasia Contrappuntistica.

King Lear. Mus. works inspired by Shakespeare's play incl. (1) ov. by Berlioz, Op. 4, comp. 1831. (2) Ov. and incid. mus. by Balakirev, 1859--61. (3) 2 movements of incid. mus. by Debussy, 1904. Various opera xomposers, incl. Verdi and Britten, have contemplated but abandoned King Lear projects.

Bégué, Nicolas Antoine (b Laon, 1631; d Paris, 1702). Fr. organist and composer. Organist, churches of St Merry and St Médéric, Paris, and court organist to Louis XIV, 1678. Comp. 2 vols. of hpd. works and 3 vols. of org. pieces (1676).

Lenya, Lotte (orig. Karoline Blamauer) (b Vienna, 1898). Austrian-born singer of mez. quality (later Amer. citizen). Went to Zürich 1914, where she studied acting, dancing, and singing. Member of corps de ballet, Zürich Stadttheater and made stage acting début at Schauspielhaus. Moved to Berlin 1920, where she met the playwright Bertolt [fy45]*Brecht and the composer Kurt [fy45]*Weill, whose wife she became. Her distinctive singing style and accomplished acting made a major contribution to the success of the Brecht-Weill collaborations such as Mahagonny, and Der Dreigroschenoper, especially in such songs as 'Pirate Jenny', 'Surabaya Johnny' and 'Alabama Song'. With Weill, went to USA in 1933 and made new career on plays and films, incl. From Russia with Love.

Lutyens, Agnes Elisabeth (b London, 1906). Eng. composer. Studied École Normale de Musique, Paris, 1922--3, RCM (with Harold [fy45]*Darke) 1926--30. One of first Eng. composers to use 12-note system. Has written nearly 200 scores for films and radio, also incidental mus. for plays. Helped to found Macnaughten-Lemare concerts, London, 1931, and founded Composers' Concourse 1954. Author of books and articles. CBE 1969. Prin. works: [el-4]

La. The 6th degree of the major scale, according to the system of vocal syllables derived from [fy45]*Guido d'Arezzo (see Hexachord), and so used (spelt Lah) in [fy45]*Tonic Sol-fa, in which it is also the first degree of the minor scale. In many countries, however, the name has become attached (on 'fixed-doh' principles) to the note A, in whatever key this may occur.

Lai (Fr.), Lay. A 13th-and 14th-cent. Fr. song-form, usually 12 unequal stanzas sung to different tunes. Later examples are in several vv. Also can mean purely instr. piece.

Lancashire Sol-fa. System of sight-singing more properly called 'Old English Sol-fa', since it was universally used in Eng. from at least the early 17th cent. and its latest textbook appeared in 1879. It is a method of solmization applied to the normal staff notation; the first 3 notes of every major scale are called fa-sol-la, and so are the second 3 notes, the remaining note being called mi; the minor scale is read as if its notes were those of the relative major. In Amer. often called Fasola.

Last Temptations, The (Viimeiset Kiusaukset). Opera in 2 acts by [fy45]*Kokkonen to lib. by L. Kokkonen, based on life of Finn. evangelist Paavo Ruotsalainen (1777--1852). Prod. Savonlinna 1977, London (Finn. Nat. Opera) 1979.

Lied; Lieder (Ger.). Song; Songs. The word is applied to a distinctive type of Ger. solo vocal comp. that came into being as an outcome of the Romantic movement of the late 18th and earlier 19th cents. In this type the poem chosen is of great importance. The treatment of the poem may be either 'verse-repeating' (strophic) or 'through-composed' (Durchkomponiert) (i.e. either the same for every stanza or different for each), according to the lyrical or dramatic demands of the poem. The pf. part (simple or highly elaborate) is more than a mere acc. and, as much as the vocal part, demands an artistic interpretation. Some great names in the history of the Lied are [fy45]*Schubert, [fy45]*Loewe (1796--1869), Schumann, [fy45]*Franz, [fy45]*Brahms, [fy45]*Wolf, [fy45]*Mahler, and [fy45]*Strauss. Certain poets occur frequently in these composers' Lieder, e.g. Goethe, Dehmel, Eichendorff, Heine, Hesse, Liliencron, Mayrhofer, Mörike, Rilke, Rückert, Schack, Schicker, Trakl, Tieck. A Lieder recital should correctly contain only Ger. songs.

Ligature. (1) The mark which in plainsong notation binds several notes into 1 group. (2) The slur which in modern notation of vocal mus. shows that the 2 or more notes it affects are to be fitted to 1 and the same syllable or, in instr. mus., that the notes are to be phrased together. (3) The tie or bind (see Tie--a use of the word better avoided as unnecessary and confusing. (4) The adjustable metal band which in instr. of the cl. family secures the reed to the mouthpiece. See Curved Line, Various uses of.

Lilliburlero. Tune of unknown origin, first appeared in print in 1686 in a book of 'lessons' for the recorder or fl., where it is styled a 'Quickstep'. Next year it became popular set to some satirical verses (with the mock Irish word 'Lilliburlero' as a refrain) referring to the appointment to the Lord-Lieutenancy of Ireland of General Talbot, just created Earl of Tyrconnel, whose name is several times mentioned. It has remained a song of the Orange party to this day, set to the words 'Protestant Boys'. in Purcell's Musick's Handmaid, it appears, under the title 'A New Irish Tune', as hpd. piece; he also used it as [fy45]*ground bass in incidental mus. for The Gordian Knot unty'd, 1691. Lloyd, Richard (b Cheshire, 1933). Eng. organist and composer. Studied Lichfield Cath. Sch. and Cambridge Univ. Sub-organist, Salisbury Cath. 1957--66, organist, Hereford Cath. and cond. 3 Choirs Fest. 1966--74, Durham Cath. from 1974. Comp. anthems, etc., mus. for children, and incidental mus.

Lloyd Webber, Andrew (b London, 1948). Eng. composer. Studied Oxford Univ., GSM, and RCM. With Tim Rice (b 1944) as librettist, comp. highly successful musicals, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolour Dreamcoat (1968), Jesus Christ Superstar (1970), and Evita (1976). Wrote Jeeves (1975) to lir. by Alan Ayckbourn. Variations (1978) for vc. and jazz

The other modes, however, are in use in plainsong, some folk song, and occasionally in the work of certain com- posers. Such as Vaughan Williams, Bartók, and Kodály. (Occasionally in old music the notes are to be played from the top downwards and the question as to which is intended is sometimes a difficult one). Sometimes the wavy line is not continuous between the two staves, and then it is to be understood that the composer intends the arpeggio effect to go on in the two hands simultaneously. It is to be noted that all spread chords should be so played as not to destroy the rhythm of the passage.

%8%Scale (from It. scala, `staircase', `ladder'; Ger. Tonleiter; It. scala; Fr. gamme). A series of single notes progressing up or down stepwise. Thus, a series of notes within an octave used as the basis of comp. Scales are arbitrary, and the no. in use throughout theworld is incalculable. For the older European scales, used in the Church's plainsong and in folk song, see [fy45]*[fy75]Modes. Two of these ancient Modes remained in use by composers, when the other 10 were almost abandoned, and these are our Major and Minor Scales---the latter, however, subject to some variations in its 6th and 7th notes. Taking C as the keynote these scales (which have provided the chief material of music from about a.d. 1600 to 1900) run as follows: [cp7,7][ih1n]Major Scale (Semitones 3--4and 7--8---the two halves thus being alike). [el24]Minor Scale---`Harmonic' Form (Semitones 2--3, 5--6, 7--8; there is the interval of the Augmented Second, 6--7). [el24]Minor Scale---`Melodic'

Form (Semitones 2--3, 7--8 ascending; 6--5, 3--2 descending; this avoids the interval of the augmented 2nd while allowing the Leading Note to retain its function of 'leading' to the Tonic). [el24][cp8,8]^The Major and Minor scales are spoken of as

diatonic scales, as distinct from a scale using nothing but semitones, which is the chromatic scale, for which 2 different notations are employed: [el2][cp7,7][ih1n]Chromatic Scale (in 'melodic' notation---sharps upwards, flats downwards; this notation economizes accidentals), Chromatic Scale (in 'harmonic' notation). [cp8,8]^This scale when begun on other notes is 'harmonically' notated according to the same principles; for instance, beginning on D it reads: [cp7,7][ih1n]The scheme is: the notes of the major scale, plus those of the harmonic minor scale, plus the minor 2nd and augmented 4th. [el2][cp8,8]^A scale comprising the same notes as the Chromatic Scale is the [fy45]* dodecaphonic scale, in which the 12 notes are considered to be all of equal status and are so treated, whereas the Chromatic Scale beginning on any particular note is considered to comprise the Diatonic Scale of that note 'coloured' (this is the literal meaning of 'chromatic') by the addition of the extra semitones. Scales with smaller intervals than the semitone have been introduced. See [fy45]*[fy75]Microtones. ^The whole-tone scale is free of semitones and thus allows of only 2 different series, each with 6 notes: [cp7,7]The Whole-tone Scale.[qc[qc[cp8,8]^An extremely widespread scale is the 5-note or pentatonic scale (common in Scottish, Chinese, and other music): [cp7,7]The Pentatonic Scale (commonest order of the intervals).[qc[qc[cp8,8]^The Scottish Highland Bagpipe is tuned to a scale that cannot be represented in orthodox notation. It is roughly that of the white notes of the piano with the C and F about a quarter of a tone sharp. %%9% Sequence.

(1) In mus. construction, the more or less exact repetition of a passage at a higher or lower level of pitch. If the repetition is of only the melody it is called a melodic sequence; if it is of a series of chords it is a harmonic sequence. If the intervals between the notes of the melody are to some extent altered (a major interval becoming a minor one and so forth, as is practically inevitable if the key is unchanged) it is called a

tonal sequence; if there is no variation in the intervals (usually achieved by altering not merely the pitch of the notes but also the key) it is called a real sequence. If there are several repetitions, some of them Tonal and some Real, the result is a mixed sequence. A Harmonic Real Sequence is sometimes called [fy45]*[fy75]Rosalia (some authorities, however, require as an additional qualification for this description a rise of 1 degree of the scale at each repetition). (2) In ecclesiastical use the term Sequence is applied to a type of hymn which began as one of the many forms of interpolation in the original liturgy of the Western Christian Church. As the traditional plainsong did not provide for such interpolations special melodies were composed. In the Church's service Sequences follow (whence the name) the Gradual and Alleluia. The earliest Sequences were in prose, not, as later, in rhymed verse, and the term 'Prose' is still sometimes used instead of 'Sequence'. The following are examples of the Sequence: Dies Irae (now a part of the Requiem), Veni Sancte Spiritus Lauda Sion, and Stabat Mater dolorosa. ^ (3) The It. composer [fy45]*Berio uses the title Sequence ([fy45]*[fy75]Sequenza) for a series of works for solo instr. and v.

%%10%Short Octave and Broken Octave. Devices for avoiding expenditure on the lowest and biggest (and consequently most costly) pipes of the organ, and as they were adopted also in domestic kbd. instrs. such as virginals, spinet, and clavichord, the economic motive probably operated in their case also. (2) Where the broken octave device was adopted the arrangement was generally the following or something like it. The lowest octave was complete from C to C, except that the lowest C# was replaced by a more useful note, the A from below. % 2 Tarantella (It.), Tarantelle (Fr.). Neapolitan dance in  $\frac{6}{8}$  time which probably takes its name from Taranto, in the heel of Italy, or from a spider common there, the tarantula, whose bite is alleged to be poisonous and to cause the disease known as Tarantism, of which disease the dance is supposed to be both symptom and cure. The music is of great rapidity with an approach to the [fy45]\*perpetuum mobile. The saltarello is a similar type. Chopin, Rossini, Liszt, and Mendelssohn are among composers who have used the tarantella in their works.

% 5% Tchaikovsky (Chaykovsky), Pyotr (Ilyich) (b Votkinsk, 1840; d St Petersburg, 1893).
Russ. composer and cond. Studied law before entering St Petersburg Cons. (comp. with A.
Rubinstein) 1863--5. Went to Moscow 1866, becoming prof. of harmony at new Cons. under directorship of N. Rubinstein. During first 2 years there wrote First Sym. and opera Voyevoda. In 1868 met nationalist group of young Russ. composers headed by Rimsky-Korsakov and was stirred by their enthusiasm, as is shown by his 2nd Sym., but later came to be regarded by them as cosmopolitan rather than truly Russ. From 1869 to 1875 wrote 3 more operas and first pf. conc. and was mus. critic of Russkiye vedomosti 1872--6, going to first Bayreuth Fest. 1876. In 1877 married one of his pupils, separating from her 9 weeks later and coming near to mental collapse, psychological result of fatal step for a man of homosexual tendencies. At this time was taken under patronage of wealthy widow, Nadejda von Meck, who out of admiration gave him yearly allowance which enabled him to abandon teaching and devote himself wholly to comp. She and Tchaikovsky met but never spoke to each other, though they corresponded voluminously. 4th Sym. is ded. to her. Went to Switz. and It., composing opera [fy45]*[fy75]Evgeny Onegin, prod. by students of Moscow Cons.
1879, with moderate success. By 1880, his works were popular in Russia (thanks to advocacy of N. Rubinstein), and in Brit. and USA but still met with hostility in Paris and Vienna. In 1885 bought country house, first of several, at Klin, living in hermit-like isolation. There, wrote [fy45]*[fy75]Manfred and in 1887 made début in Moscow as cond.
of rev. version of opera Vakula the Smith undertitle Oxana's Caprice. In 1888 toured Ger., Fr., and London as cond., returning to Ger. and Eng. in 1889. Ballet [fy45]*[fy75]Sleeping Beauty prod. 1890, after which Tchaikovsky went to Florence to work on opera

[fy45]*[fy75]Queen of Spades, prod. St Petersburg 1890. Year ended with sudden rupture of relationship with Mme von Meck; illness had dictated her decision, which wounded Tchaikovsky deeply. Visited USA with great success 1891, and in Jan. 1892 heard Mahler conduct Evgeny Onegin at Hamburg. Ballet [fy45]*[fy75]Nutcracker comp. 1891--2, and work started on a 6th Sym. In that year, again visited Vienna and in 1893 went to Eng., where hon. doctorate of mus. was conferred on him by Cambridge Univ. During 1893 wrote 6th Sym., having abandoned sym. begun in 1891--2 and re-worked it as a 3rd pf. conc., eventually retaining only 1 movement (2nd and 3rd orch. from the surviving sketches by Taneyeva after Tchaikovsky's death). F.p. of the sym. was only moderately successful, though Tchaikovsky was convinced it was his best work. It is usually stated that 4 days later felt ill and drank a large glassful of unboiled water (possibly with deliberate intent) and developed cholera, which led to his death. But in 1979 the Russian scholar Alexandra Orlova revealed some substantiation for the theory that the composer's death was suicide by poison, ordered by a private court of his former law-student colleagues to prevent revelation of a homosexual scandal involving the aristocracy. %%6%<sup>A</sup>Few composers are more popular with audiences than Tchaikovsky; the reasons are several and understandable. His music is extremely tuneful, luxuriously and colourfully scored, and filled with emotional fervour directed to the heart rather than to the head (though the notion that Tchaikovsky's syms. are lacking in symphonic thinking and structure does not bear serious consideration). Undoubtedly the emotional temperature of the mus. reflected the man's nature. He was doubly afflicted: by repressed homosexuality (hence his disastrous attempt at marriage) and by the tendency to extreme fluctuations between elation and depression, each success being followed by a period of introspective gloom and melancholy which stemmed from psychological defects rather than from 'typical Russian melancholy'. This showed itself also in his attitude to his visits abroad. As soon as he left Russia he was ill with homesickness; once back, he was restlessly planning to be off again. In 19th-cent. Russ. mus., Tchaikovsky stands alone. His Romeo and Juliet was ded. to Balakirev, one of the 'Five', but he never identified himself with out-and-out nationalism. He succumbed to the influence of neither Brahms nor Wagner, but greatly admired the Fr. mus. of Bizet and Saint-Saëns. This can be linked with his lifelong passion for Mozart, and many passages in Tchaikovsky's mus. are as delicately detailed and coloured as works by Bizet and Mozart. The other element of his nature, the fate-laden, Byronic, emotional impact of the last 3 syms., is traceable in many episodes in the operas, notably Evgeny Onegin. None of his operas was a success on its first appearance, but Onegin and Queen of Spades are now widely perf. and admired, and adventurous cos. have explored the others, which, however, are marred by dramatic defects. The true theatrical Tchaikovsky is to be found in the ballets, a supreme combination of melodic inventiveness, grandsweep, and constant freshness. Nor should the superb songs be forgotten: in them, in miniature, the soul of Tchaikovsky is enshrined as surely as in the great syms., concs., and orch. masterpieces. Prin. works (dates of comp.):

%22% Transposing Instruments. Instruments which are not notated at their true pitch but (mechanically and without any effort on the player's part) produce the effect of that pitch. For example, the cl. is made in several sizes, the Bb and A being the most often used because these keys reduce the difficulty of playing in the flat and sharp keys, respectively, by reducing the number of flats or sharps with which the player has to cope. In the Bb instr., that key is to its player the 'natural key' (as C is to the pianist): the player faced with music in (say) the key of Eb finds the music written in the key of F, i.e. there are 2 flats fewer to consider. Similarly with the A instrument a piece written in the key of B is notated in the key of D, i.e. there are 3 sharps fewer to consider. Thus music for the Bb cl. is notated a tone higher than it is to sound and music for the A cl. a minor 3rd higher. Many players, with improved mechanism and developed technique, use the Bb instrument for all keys, making the transposition mentally. On the rare C cl. the note sounded is the note written; the Eb cl. transposes 1;FD tones higher than written note; the bass clarinet in Bb an octave and a tone lower. The transposing instruments are as follows: (a) Bass Fl.;(b) Cor Anglais, Ob. d'Amore, Ob. in Eb, Heckelphone, Sarrusophone (c) Cl. in Bb and A, Bass Cl., High Cl. in Eb and D, Alto Cl. in Eb and F, Bassett Hn., Pedal Cl. (d) Saxophones (e) Cornets (f) French Hns. (g) Tpts. (h) Saxhorns(i) Kettledrums (up to Mozart's period, but excluding Handel).[cm%[u20]]

Namensfeier (Name Day). Concert ov. in C major by Beethoven, Op. 115, comp. 1814 for name-day festivities of Emperor Francis II of Austria. F.p. 1815, pubd. 1825. Names of the Notes and Rest Values. The Eng. names of the longer notes are based upon the old Lat. names of the early Middle Ages. The earlier It. names are similar. The Fr. names stand alone as being purely descriptive of the appearances. The Ger. names are arithmetical, and the Amer. practically a trans. of them. The Amer. and Ger. names require no remembering, being logically descriptive of time-values. They are undoubtedly the best, and the Amer. names are now largely adopted in the Commonwealth.[cm[fp[gcNänie (Ger., from Lat. Naenia, 'dirges'). Ode by Brahms, Op. 82, for ch. and orch., comp. 1880--1, to text by Schiller.

Nanino, Giovanni Bernardino (b Vallerano, c.1560; d Rome, 1623). It. composer, studied with his brother G. M. Nanino. Maestro di cappella, S. Luigi de' Francesi, Rome, 1591--1608, and later at S. Lorenzo in Damaso. One of first to use org. in acc. to church comps. Wrote 3 books of madrigals (1588, 1599, 1612), 4 vols. of motets (1610--18), and other works.

Nanino, Giovanni Maria (b Tivoli, c.1545; d Rome, 1607). It. composer. Studied Rome and sang ten. at S. Maria Maggiore there, becoming maestro di cappella in 1567. Maestro di cappella S. Luigi de' Francesi, Rome 1575--7. Tenor in Sistine Chapel ch. from 1577, becoming maestro di cappella 1586. Est. Rome's first public sch.of mus. to be run by an Italian, being helped by his brother G. B. Nanino and Palestrina. Narrator (It. testo, 'witness'). Singer or speaker in oratorios, cantatas, and sometimes operas who tells the basic story of the work, normally in recit. Among the first works to use a narrator was Monteverdi's dramatic madrigal Il combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda (1624). In the Passion settings of the 17th and 18th cents. the narrator is often called the Evangelist, e.g. in Bach's St Matthew Passion. Narrators are used in many 20th-cent. works, e.g. Stravinsky's The Soldier's Tale, Vaughan Williams's An Oxford Elegy, and Honegger's Le Roi David. The Male and Female Ch. in Britten's opera The Rape of Lucretia (1946) act as narrators.

Narváez, Luis de (b 1500; d c.1555). Sp. player of vihuela for which he wrote many pieces. Said to have introduced variation-form into Sp. mus.

Nascimbeni, Maria Francesca (b Ancona, 1657--8). It. composer, lived in Ascona. Pupil of Lazarini. Comp. madrigals, canzonas, and motets.

Nash, Heddle (b London, 1894; d London, 1961). Eng. ten. Chorister, Westminster Abbey. Studied London and Milan with Borgatti. Début Milan 1924 as Almaviva in Rossini's Il barbiere di Siviglia. Nationalism in Music. A mus. movement which began during the 19th cent. and was marked by emphasis on nat. elements in mus. such as folk-songs, folk dances, folk rhythms or on subjects for operas and symphonic poems which reflected nat. life or history. It burgeoned alongside political movements for independence, such as those which occurred in 1848, and as a reaction to the dominance of Ger. mus. Haydn was an early 'nationalist' in his use of folk-song in many works. Chopin, by his use of Polish dance rhythms and forms, e.g. the mazurka and the Krakowiak, was a nationalist and wrote a Fantasia on Polish Airs in 1828. In Russ., Glinka's A Life for the Tsar (1836) began the nationalist movement, which was sustained by Cui, Mussorgsky, Balakirev, Rimsky-Korsakov, etc. Liszt expressed the Hungarian spirit in his works, and this spirit was later intensified by Bartók and Kodály. Smetana, Dvořák, and Janáček were leading nationalists in Bohemia; in Norway, Grieg; Finland, Sibelius; Spain, Falla, Albéniz, and Granados; England, Holst and Vaughan Williams; USA, Copland, Gershwin, Ives, and Bernstein; Brazil, Villa-Lobos.

Str. are set in vibration by hammers, but blow required is very light (F1;E2;E0 that given on ordinary pf). No sound-board, the vibrations being amplified through a loudspeaker. Vol. or tone controlled by pedal acting on the amplifier. Neo-Classicism. Term applied to 20th-cent. mus. trend which developed in the 1920s, when several composers wrote works in 17th- and 18-cent. forms and styles as a reaction against the excessive orchestration of the late 19th-cent. romantics. Prokofiev's Classical Symphony (1916--17) and R. Strauss's Ariadne auf Naxos (1912) can be claimed as neo-classical, but the movement began in earnest with Stravinsky (Capriccio for pf. and wind, pf. conc., Pulcinella, vn. conc., Oedipus Rex, etc.) and Hindemith. In Eng. Vaughan Williams's vn. conc. (orig. Concerto Accademico) of 1925 was neo-classical in style, though, because for most composers the model was Bach, neo-baroque might be a more accurate description. (Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, being a pastiche of Haydn, is truly named.)

New World, From the (Z noveho svéta). Sub- title given by Dvořák to his 9th (5th in the old numbering) Sym. in E minor, Op. 95, comp. 1893 and f.p. NY Dec. 1893 cond. Anton Seidl. Some themes are regarded as in the spirit of Amer. Negro folk tunes but none is directly quoted, though the resemblance of one to 'Swing low, sweet chariot' is often noticed. On the other hand, the Bohemian element is equally strong. The main theme of the largo has been made into a Negro spiritual to the words 'Goin' Home'. Dvořák himself hoped to write an opera based on Longfellow's Hiawatha and he said that the largo was a study for it.

Directive closely, almost exclusively, assoc. with mus. of Elgar, who first used it in a pubd. score in the pf. transcription of 'Nimrod' in the Enigma Variations (1899), but not in full score. First used in pubd. orch. score in Cockaigne concert-ov., 1901. Though widely regarded as symbol of Elgar's 'ceremonial' manner, it should be noted that he did not apply it to the Pomp and Circumstance marches, nor to the Coronation Ode, but used it for themes of a particular emotional intensity, as in the Vn. and Vc. Concs., and the syms. Vaughan Williams also used the term in his Coastal Command film mus., 1942. Noble, Dennis (b Bristol, 1899; *d*Jávea, Spain, 1966). Eng. bar. Chorister BristolCath. Heard by Percy Pitt singing in cinema and offered CG audition. Début there 1924. Sang there regularly until 1938 and also in 1947. Also with BNOC and Carl Rosa. Sang bar. part in f.p. of Walton's Belshazzar's Feast, Leeds 1931.

Noble, (John) Jeremy (b London, 1930). Eng. musicologist and critic. Studied Oxford Univ. Wrote mus. criticism for The Times 1960--3, Sunday Telegraph 1972--6. Assoc. prof. State Univ. of NY at Buffalo 1966--70 and from 1976. Specialist in Renaissance mus.

Noble, John (b Southampton, 1931). Eng. bar. Studied Cambridge Univ. Abandoned career as physicist 1954 when he sang Pilgrim in Vaughan Williams's The Pilgrim's Progress at Cambridge. Since then has had successful career in oratorio and opera, with tours of Europe and USSR.

Noble, Thomas (Tertius) (b Bath, 1867; d Rockport, Mass., 1953). Eng. organist and composer. Studied at RCM with Parratt, Frederick Bridge, and Stanford. Ass. organist, Trinity Coll., Cambridge, 1890--2. Organist, Ely Cath. 1892--8, York Minster 1898--1912, St Thomas's Church, NY, 1912--47. Comps. incl. anthems, hymns, cantata, and org. pieces.

Noces, Les (Russ. Svadebka; Eng. 'The Wedding'). 'Choreographic scenes with song and music' by Stravinsky (words adapted by composer from popular sources) for mixed ch., 4 soloists, 4 pf., and 17 perc. instr., in 4 scenes: The Blessing of the Bride, The Blessing of the Bridegroom, The Bride's Departure from her Parents' Home, and The Wedding Feast. 1st version 1917 unfinished (scored for full wind, str. octet, with cimbalom, hps., perc., and harmonium. Completed 1971 by R. Craft and C. Matthews). 2nd version 1919, for perc., harmonium, cimbalom, and pianola. Prod. Paris 1923, choreog. Nijinskaya, cond. Ansermet. Later choreog. Béjart.

Noches en los Jardines de España (Nights in the Gardens of Spain). Symphonic impressions for pf. and orch. by Falla, comp. 1909--16, f.p. Madrid 1916; f.p. in England, London 1921 (soloist Falla); f.p. in Amer., Boston, Mass., 1924. Movements are: 1. En el Generalife. 2. Danza lejana (Dance in the distance). 3. En los jardines de la Sierra de Córdoba.

Nocturne (Fr., 'pertaining to night'). A comp. which suggests a nocturnal atmosphere, e.g. Haydn's Notturnos for lira organizzata, Mozart's Serenata Notturna, but more specifically a short pf. piece of romantic character. First to use the title for this genre was John Field, followed by Chopin. An expressive melody in the right hand is accompanied in the left by broken chords.

Nocturne. Song-cycle for ten., 7 obbl. instr., and str. orch., Op. 60, by Britten, comp. 1958. Settings of 8 poems about night by Shelley, Tennyson, Coleridge, Middleton, Wordsworth, Owen, Keats, and Shakespeare. The opening poem is acc. by str. only; each succeeding setting is dominated by an obbl. instr. (bn., harp, hn., timp., cor anglais, and fl. and cl.), and the finale is for the full complement. Ded. to Mahler's widow. F.p. Leeds 1958.

Nocturnes. Symphonic triptych for orch., and in the last movement women's ch., by Debussy, comp. 1897--9. The 3 movements are Nuages (Clouds), Fêtes (Festivals), and Sirènes (Sirens). F.p. (Nos. 1 and 2), Paris[rf 1900, f. complete p. Paris 1901. F.p. in England, London 1909, cond. Debussy. Arr. for 2 pf., 4 hands, by Ravel 1909.

Nocturnes and Arias. (1) Orch. work by Musgrave comp. 1966, f.p. Zürich, cond. N. Del Mar. (2) Settings by Henze of poems by I. Bachmann for sop. and orch. Comp. 1957. F. p. Donaueschingen (Gloria Davy; H. Rosbaud).

Node (of a vibrating string). Point of rest between two vibrating portions. Noël (Fr.), Nowell (Eng.). A popular Christmas song or carol. In Eng. several 15th-cent. carols begin with the word 'Nowell' and Busnois (c.1430--92) wrote a work for 4 vv. with the word 'Noël' as the sole text. In the 17th cent. the name 'noël' was given to organ pieces to be played during the Christmas services and based on Christmas melodies.

Noire (Fr.). The crotchet or Amer. quarter-note.

Nola, Domenico da (b Nola, Naples, early 16th cent.; d Naples, 1592). It. composer. Between 1541 and 1564 pubd. books of motets, madrigals, villanelles, etc. Choirmaster, Ch. d'Annunziata, Naples, 1563--88.

None. The 6th of the Canonical Hours of the R.C. Church. Properly it takes place at 3 p.m. (i.e. the '9th hour').

Nonet (Eng.), nonette (Fr.), nonett (Ger.), nonetto (It.). Comp. for 9 solo instr. or 9 vv. Famous examples are by Spohr, Rheinberger, Stanford, Ravel (3 Poèmes de Mallarmé for v. and 9 instr.), and Webern (Concerto, Op. 24).

Non-Harmonic Note. Term in harmonic analysis meaning a note not part of the chord with which it sounds and therefore requiring explanation, e.g. passing-note or appoggiatura.

Nonnengeige (Ger.). Nun's fiddle. The Tromba Marina.

Non Nobis Domine (Not unto us, O Lord). Vocal canon, said to be by Byrd, sung at the end of banquets or other festive occasions as a kind of 'grace after meat'.

Nono, Luigi (b Venice, 1924). It. composer. Law student at Padua Univ. but turned to mus., studying in Venice with Malipiero and later with Maderna and H. Scherchen. Early works showed Webern's influence; later works became dominated by his commitment to Communist political and social causes and themes. What may be called the 'protest' element in his mus., expressed by heavy use of perc. and by use of pre-recorded tape, has not entirely obscured a characteristically Italian lyricism, such as may be found in his early works and in Liebeslied. Prin.comps.:

orch: Variazioni canoniche (1950), Composizione I (1951), Due espressioni (1953), Composizione II (1959), Per Bastiana Tai-Yang Cheng, orch. and tape (1967).

instrumental: Polifonica-Monodia-Ritmica, 7 players (1951), Canti per tredici (1955), Incontri, 24 instr. (1955), Varianti, vn., str., woodwinds (1957).

chorus and orch: Epitaffio per García Lorca (1951--3), Il mantello rosso, ballet for sop., bar., ch., and orch. (1953), La victoire de Guernica (1954), Liebeslied (1954), Il canto sospeso (1956), La terra e la compagna, sop., ten., ch., and instr. (1958), Coro di Didone (1958), Canciones a Guiomar I, sop., 6-part women's ch., and instr. (1962), II, 12-part women's ch. and instr. (1963), Ricorda cosa ti hanno fatto in Auschwitz, solo vv. and tape (1966), Non consumiamo Marx, vv. and tape (1969), Un volto e del mare, vv. and tape (1969), Voci destroying Muros, women's ch. and orch. (1970), Y entones comprendio, 6 women's vv., ch., and tape (1970), Ein Gespenst geht um in der Welt, sop., ch., and orch. (1971).

unacc. voices: 'Ha venido', sop. solo and 6-part sop. ch. (1960), Sarà dolce tacere, 8 vv. (1960), Siamo la gioventù del Vietnam (1973).

voice and orch: Canti di vita e d'amore (Sul ponte di Hiroshima), sop., ten., and orch. (1962); La fabbrica illuminata, mez. and tape (1964); Como una ola de Fuerza y Luz, sop., pf., orch., tape (1972).

tape: Omaggio a Vedova (1960), Music for Die Ermittlung (Weiss) (1965), Contrappunto dialettico alla mente (1968), Musiche per Manzu (1969), Für Paul Dessau (1974), Notturni-albe (1974), Sofferte onde serene (1976).

Noonday Witch, The (The Mid-day Witch, Cz. Polednice). Symphonic poem for orch., Op. 108, by Dvořák, comp. 1896.

Noras, Arto (Erkki) (b Turku, 1942). Finn. cellist. Studied Paris Cons. with Tortelier. 2nd prize Tchaikovsky Competition, Moscow, 1966. Soloist with leading orchs. Exponent of Walton and Bliss concs. Gave f.p. of conc. by Sallinen.

Norcome (Norcombe, Norcum), Daniel (b 1576; d Windsor, before 1626). Eng. lutenist and composer. Contrib. 5-part madrigal With Angel's Face to The Triumphs of Oriana. Lutenist at Danish court 1599--1601.

Nordheim, Arne (b Larvik, Norway, 1931). Norweg. composer. Studied Oslo Cons. Worked as mus. critic 1960--8. Since 1968 has concentrated on elec. mus. not only in the concert-hall but by providing 'accompaniment' for an Oslo sculpture. Works incl.:

ballet: The Tempest (1979).

orch: Canzona (1960); Floating (1970); Katharsis, suite (1962); Epitaffio, orch. and magnetic tape (1963); Greening (1973); Tenebrae, vc., orch. (1982).

chamber music: Epigram, str. qt. (1955); str. qt. (1956); Aftonland, song-cycle for v. and chamber ens. (1957); Partita, va., hpd., perc. (1963).

electronic: Favola, musicalplay for TV, sop., ten., ch., orch., and elec. sound (1965); Evolution, elec. and concrete sound on tape (1966); Colorazione, Hammond organ and perc., 2 tape-recorders, amplifiers, loudspeakers (1968); Solitaire, elec. and concrete sound on tape (1968); Partita II, electric guitar (1969); Lux et tenebrae (1970); Pace (1970); Osaka-Music (1970); Dino-sauros, for accordion and elec. sounds (1970).

Nordica (really Norton), Lillian (b Farmington, Maine, 1857; d Batavia, Java, 1914). Amer. soprano. Studied Boston. Début NY 1877, London 1878, under name Lilly Norton. Lessons in Milan 1878 were followed by début (as 'Nordica') in Don Giovanni (Elvira), 1879. Paris début as Marguérite 1882, CG 1887 (Violetta), singing there regularly until 1893. NY Met. début 1890, joining co. 1893. First Amer. to sing at Bayreuth (Elsa in Lohengrin 1894). Became noted singer of Isolde, Brünnhilde, and Kundry in USA and Europe from 1895 to her death. Her technique enabled her to follow Brünnhilde one night with Violetta the next night.

Nordoff, Paul (b Philadelphia, 1909; d Herdecke, Ger., 1977). Amer. composer and teacher. Studied Philadelphia Cons. and Juilliard Sch., NY. Head of comp., Philadelphia Cons. 1938-43, prof. of mus., Bard Coll., 1949--58. Specialist in mus. as therapy for handicapped children. Works incl. 2 syms., 2 pf. concs., vn. conc., operas, ballets for Martha Graham, chamber mus.

Nordraak, Rikard (b Christiania, 1842; d Berlin, 1866). Norweg. composer. Advocate of Norweg. nationalism and influenced Grieg. Wrote Norweg. nat. anthem Ja, vi elsker dette landet ('Yes, we love this land') (1863--4).

Norfolk Rhapsody. Orch. work in E minor by Vaughan Williams comp. 1906 and rev. in early 1920s. Based on 3 folk-songs collected in Norfolk in 1905 by composer. F.p. London 1906. 2 other Norfolk Rhapsodies, in D minor and G minor, were written and f.p. in Cardiff 1907, the orig. plan being a 'Norfolk Symphony', but they were withdrawn in 1914.

N;Uprg;anard, Per (b Gentofte, 1932). Danish composer. Studied Copenhagen Cons. with Holmboe, then in Paris with Boulanger. Worked as mus. critic in Copenhagen and teaches at Copenhagen Cons. and at ;anAarhus Cons. since 1965. Works make use of complex contrapuntal techniques and of some aspects of serialism. In 1959 developed 'the infinite row', a 12-note series which expands, it is said, to infinity, and has combined this with rhythms expressed in graphic notation. Works incl.:

orch: 4 syms.; Constellations, conc. for 12 solo str. or 12 str. groups (1958); Lyse Danse (1959); Fragment VI for 6orch. groups (1959--61); Iris (1967); Luna (1968); Voyage into the Golden Screen, chamber orch. Nota Cambiata (It.). Exchanged note. See Changing Note.

Notation and Nomenclature. The methods of writing down mus. so that it can be performed. These are devices for which the human being long felt no need, and although every race has its mus. they are still unknown to the larger part of the world's population. They are apparently purely European in origin and even in Europe thousands of tunes existed which were transmitted by one generation to another without achieving the dignity of being recorded on paper until the folk-song collectors came on to the scene.

Romans also possessed an alphabetical system. In both cases, however, this nomenclature served rather the purposes of scientific discussion than those of performance. An early (7th-cent.) system of notation was that of neums (neumes). Our conventional signs for the turn and the trill are derived from details of neum notation. The present exactitude in pitch indication has been effected by adding to the one line of the early neum notation. Plainsong now uses a staff of 4 lines, and other mus. one of 5 lines. The clef derives from neum notation: attached to the Staff it fixes the pitch of one of its lines as middle C or some other note, from which all the others may be deduced. Proportional notation of an exact character (i.e. as to the time values) began in the 10th cent. when the primitive developments of polyphony brought about its necessity. Definite notes, of different shapes according to their intended proportionate length, were devised, from which our present series of semibreve (whole-note), minim (half-note), etc. is derived. Bar lines became common only during the 16th and 17th cents. (the earliest use dates from 1448): they were at first casually drawn as aids to the eye---the idea of making them of equal time-value coming later. They first arose in choral scoring to demonstrate the coincidence of the different vv., and were originally not present in the independent vocal parts for the use of singers. Adjustments to and changes in traditional staff notation have increased in the 20th cent., particularly since c.1950 when total serialism, aleatory procedures, etc. have required a parallel development of notational signs, resulting in some confusion where individual composers have devised their own methods which may use terms employed by another composer for a different effect. Some mus. cannot be written at all in conventional notation. The subject is too large for more than an outline to be given here, but some of the changes can be mentioned briefly. With the arrival of atonal and 12-note mus., conventional pitch notation, with its selection of accidentals, tended to become unworkable, but no new system has been generally adopted, and makeshift adaptation of conventional methods has been favoured by performers.

Systems of microtonal notation devised by A. Hába and J. Carillo have not lasted.

Traditional notation is little use in pulseless mus. and in mus. in which different and often complicated rhythms progress simultaneously at different speeds. To cope with notating these durations, proportionate notation has been employed, whereby durational proportions are transmuted into the graphic equivalent of notes spaced out horizontally along the staff according to their durations. For graphic notation, see the separate entry under Graphic scores. Mention may be made here of 2 explicit new notational systems which have not yet found acceptance. Equiton uses only 2 staff lines per octave. The 12 chromatic notes are notated with alternating black and white note-heads and without accidentals. Note-heads appear below, on, and above each staff line; and those between the staff-lines occur close to lower or upper line and centred between the lines. Those close to the lines have ledger lines drawn through them. Notation of durations is proportionate. Klavarscribo uses a staff in which lines and spaces run vertically, being grouped according to the black and white keys of the keyboard. No accidentals are needed. Black-and-white note-heads are used for easy identification with corresponding keys. The mus. is read from top to bottom. Notation of durations is proportionate and bar-lines are horizontal. [bn^Below is a selection of some of the generally accepted new notational symbols: [xm[xm60] [an[ol15] [an[ol85] [an[ol72] [xnNote. (1) A single sound of a given mus. pitch and duration; in Amer. called a tone. (2) A written sign representing (1). (3) A finger-key of the pf., organ, accordion, etc. to produce a sound of particular pitch.

Note-row (Amer. `tone-row'). In 12-note mus., the order in which the composer decides to arrange the 12 notes within the octave, this order acting as the basis for the comp. (almost like a motto-theme). Strictly no note should be repeated before the row comes to an end, but the rhythm in which they are presented may be. Also, any note in the row may appear an octave higher or lower than it did originally and the whole row can be used at any higher or lower level. But successive composers have broken the rules.

Notes Inégales (Fr. `unequal notes'). Rhythmic convention whereby certain divisions of the beat move in alternately long and short values even when written as equal. Inequality was normal feature of musical teaching in 17th and 18th cent. in France. Its use in baroque performance in modern times is subject of much controversy.

Nottebohm, (Martin) Gustav (b Lüdenscheid, Westphalia, 1817; d Graz, 1882). Ger. composer and musicologist. Studied Berlin and Leipzig, having a few lessons from Schumann and Mendelssohn. Settled in Vienna 1846, became friend of Brahms, and wrote some minor works, but is known for his valuable research into Beethoven's sketchbooks embodied in three books, pubd. 1872 and 1887(posth.). Also pubd. thematic catalogues of works of Beethoven (1868) and Schubert (1874). One of first authorities in textual criticism.

Notturni ed Alba (Nocturnes and Dawn). Song-cycle for sop. and orch. in 5 movements, to words from medieval Lat. texts, by McCabe.F.p. Hereford Fest. 1970. Perf. as ballet, Westfalen, 1976.

Notturnino (It.). A miniature Nocturne.

Notturno. See Nocturne.

Novachord. Patented elec. kbd. instr. invented by Laurens Hammond. It has 6-octave kbd. like that of a pf. Chords and not just single notes can be played. Tone is varied by manual controls and vol. is controlled by pedals, which also sustain notes.

Novák, Jan (b Nová ;akRís^;a na Morave^;, 1921). Cz. composer. Studied Brno Cons. 1940--6. In 1947--8 studied with Copland in Tanglewood and Martin; anu in NY. Settled Brno 1948, but emigrated to Denmark 1968--70, thereafter to It. The neo-classical style of his early works gave way in 1958 to employment of jazz elements and 12-note techniques. Works incl.: Passion Play (1965), ob. conc. (1952), 2-pf. conc. (1955), Philharmonic Dances, orch. (1955--6), Variations on a Theme of Martin; anu, orch. (1959, pf. version 1949), Concentus Eurydiceae, guitar, str. (1971), Dido, speaker, mez., male vv., orch. (1967), Orpheus et Eurydice, sop., va. d'amore, pf. (1971), Voces latinae, ch., drum, pf., db. (1975), and pf. pieces.

Novák, Víte^;zslav (b Kamenice, Cz., 1870; d Skutec^;, 1949). Cz. composer. Studied Prague Cons. 1889--92 (comp. with Knittl and Dvo; akrák). Prof. of comp. Prague Cons. 1909--39, influencing and teaching many Cz. composers. His early works were Brahmsian in style but he became more nationalist under the influence of Janáć^;ek. Works incl.:

Novelette (Eng.), Novellette (Ger.). A term introduced by Schumann as a compliment to the Eng. soprano Clara Novello as the title for his 8 pf. pieces Op. 21, 1838. They have no individual titles but each, says the composer, is to be taken as the mus. equivalent of a romantic story. A few other composers have adopted the term: it has no special connotation as to form.

Novello, Clara (Anastasia) (b London, 1818; d Rome, 1908). Eng. soprano, daughter of Vincent Novello. Studied in Paris. Sang at Worcester Fest. 1833 and in Mendelssohn's St Paul in Birmingham 1837. Mendelssohn engaged her for Leipzig Gewandhaus concerts, leading to triumphs in Ger. Went to Milan 1839 to study for operatic stage, making her début at Bologna in 1841 in Rossini's Semiramide. Rossini chose her as sop. soloist in f. It. p. of his Stabat Mater in 1841. Gave up career on marriage in 1843 to It. Count, but resumed it in 1849. On return to Eng. in 1851, became leading oratorio singer in choral fests. Retired 1861.

Novello, Ivor (Davies, David Ivor) (b Cardiff, 1893; d London, 1951). Welsh composer, actor, playwright, and impresario, son of choral cond. Clara Novello-Davies (1861--1943). Composer of Keep the Home Fires Burning, one of the most popular songs during 1914--18 war. Wrote, comp., and acted in successful mus. comedies, e.g. Glamorous Night (1935), Crest of the Wave (1937), The Dancing Years (1939), King's Rhapsody (1942), and Perchance to Dream (1945). Acted in Shakespeare.

Novello, Vincent (b London, 1781; d Nice, 1861). Eng. organist, publisher, and composer of It. origin. Organist, Portuguese Embassy chapel, London, 1797--1822. Founded publishing house Novello and Co. 1811. Founder-member of Phil. Soc. Comp. sacred mus. and ed. classics. Pubd. 5 vols. of 17th cent. It. church mus. under title The Fitzwilliam Music, 1825, and 5 vols. of Purcell's sacred mus., 1826--9. In 1829 organized fund to assist Mozart's widow, going to Salzburg to give her the money and collect material for biography of Mozart which he never wrote. Diaries of this journey pubd. 1955 as A Mozart Pilgrimage. Also helped to prepare way for Bach revival in Eng.

Novello and Co. Eng. music publishers, founded in London 1811 by Vincent Novello. His son Alfred, from 1829 to 1857, followed by Henry Littleton (1823--88), made the business extremely successful by issuing standard edns. of the classics, particularly choral works. Most Eng. Victorian oratorios and cantatas were pubd. by Novello, incl. those by Elgar. Its house magazine, The Musical Times, remains one of the most respected publications. Business was purchased by Granada, 1970.

Novotná, Jarmila (b Prague, 1907). Cz. soprano. Studied in Prague with Destinn and in Milan. Début Prague 1925 as Ma;akrenka in The Bartered Bride. Sang at Vienna Opera 1933--8, and was a distinguished Oktavian in Strauss's Der Rosen-kavalier in Vienna and Salzburg. Created title role in Lehár's Giuditta, with Tauber as ten., 1934. Amer. début S. Francisco 1939 as Butterfly. NY Met. 1940--56. Sang in Vienna and Salzburg after Second World War.

Nowak, Leopold (b Vienna, 1904). Austrian musicologist. Prof. at Vienna Univ. Dir., mus. division, Vienna Nat. Library 1946--54. Author of books on Liszt, Haydn, and Bruckner. Ed., following R. Haas in 1954, of complete works of Bruckner.

Nowak, Lionel (b Cleveland, 1911). Amer. composer and pianist. Studied Cleveland Institute of Mus. 1929--36, with Sessions and Q. Porter. Composer and mus. dir. Humphrey-Weidman Dancers 1938--42, since when he has held teaching posts. Wrote several ballets, ob. sonata, ob. qt., 3 vc. sonatas, etc.

Noye's Fludde. Setting by Britten, Op. 59, of Chester miracle play for adults' and children's vv., children's ch., chamber ens., and children's orch. F.p. Aldeburgh Fest. (Orford Church) 1958.

Nozze di Figaro, Le (The Marriage of Figaro). Commedia per musica in 4 acts (K492, 1786) by Mozart to lib. by da Ponte after Beaumarchais's comedy La Folle Journée, ou Le Mariage de Figaro (1778). Prod. Vienna 1786, London 1812, NY 1824.

Nuance (Fr.). Shade, distinction, gradation. A word frequently used by writers on mus. to imply those delicate differences of intensity and speed which largely constitute the character of a perf. Nuits d'été, Les (Summer Nights). 6 songs, Op. 7, by Berlioz to poems by Théophile Gautier. Comp. 1840--1, rev. 1843 and 1856. Orig. for mez. or ten. with pf. acc. Berlioz orchestrated Absence in 1843, and the rest in 1856. The songs are: 1. Villanelle. 2. Le Spectre de la rose. 3. Sur les lagunes. 4. Absence. 5. Au Cimitière. 6. L'Île inconnue. A problem arises in performing these songs: usually one singer (sop. or mez.) is engaged, but it is a rare v. which can encompass them all. The pubd. version for v. and pf. is marked 'for mez. or ten.', but in orchestrating the songs Berlioz rewrote them in some respects, also transposing the first 3. He also specified the v. for each song as follows: 1. Mez. or ten. 2. Cont. 3. Bar., cont., or mez. 4. Mez. or ten. 5. Ten. 6. Mez. or ten.

Numbers. Term used for self-contained item in a musical or opera (because each piece of this kind is separately numbered in the score). A 'numbers opera' is an opera in which these divisions occur, as opposed to Wagner's later operas, for example, where each act is written continuously without internal divisions or pauses.

Number Systems. J. Rousseau introduced a system of numerical notation in which the first 8 numerals are substituted for the 8 notes in the scale. Nos. are popular among 20th-cent. composers, because of the concept of 'parameters', in which mus. sounds are regarded as the sum of several components (pitch, duration, intensity, timbre, and position in space). What is called the Fibonacci series (each no. the sum of the previous 2) has been used to control these components by such composers as K; Akrenek, Stockhausen, and Nono.

Nunc Dimittis. The Song of Simeon in St Luke's Gospel (Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace). It is a part of the service of Compline in the R.C. Church and of that of Evensong in the Anglican Church. It has its traditional plainsong in the former, and is often sung to an Anglican chant in the latter. It has also been set innumerable times by church composers, usually as an adjunct to a Magnificat.

Nun's Fiddle. The Tromba Marina.

Nuove Musiche. See New Music.

Nursery Suite. 7-movement orch. suite by Elgar, f.p. London 1931, and ded. to the then Duchess of York and her daughters Princess Elizabeth (later Queen Elizabeth II) and Princess Margaret Rose. Ballet with choreog. by N. de Valois, London 1932. Nusch-Nuschi, Das. 1-act opera by Hindemith, Op. 20, for Burmese marionettes to lib. by Franz Blei. Prod. Stuttgart 1921.

Nussbaum, Der (The Nut tree). Song for v. and pf. by R. Schumann, to poem by Julius Mosen (1803--67), being No. 3 of cycle Myrthen, Op. 25 (1840).

Nut. (1) On a str. instr., the slight ridge over which the str. pass on leaving the pegs. On a ukelele and similar instr. a moveable nut is placed on the fingerboard which can shorten all str. equally and thus raise the pitch. (2) Device at the heel of the bow of a vn., etc., which adjusts the tension of the bow-hairs.

Nutcracker (Russ. Shchelkunchik, Fr. Casse-Noisette). Ballet in 2 acts and 3 scenes with mus. by Tchaikovsky, Op. 71, comp. 1891--2, choreog. by Ivanov, and lib. by Petipa based on Hoffmann's Der Nüssknacker und der Mäusekönig (The Nutcracker and the King of the Mice). Prod. St Petersburg 1892, London (complete) 1934. Has been choreog. also by Balanchine, Cranko, Nureyev, etc. Orch. suite of 8 numbers, Op. 71a, arr. Tchaikovsky, 1892.

Nymphs and Shepherds. Song by Purcell, part of his incidental music for Shadwell's play The Libertine, 1692. Often sung by sop., but made famous in choral version recorded by Manchester schoolchildren's choirs cond. Harty in 1929.

Nystedt, Knut (b Oslo, 1915). Norweg. composer. Studied Oslo and in USA with Copland. Wrote orch. and choral mus. and 4 str. qts.

Oberto, Conte di San Bonifacio (Oberto, Count of Bonifacio). Opera in 2 acts by Verdi to lib. by A. Piazza, rev. with additions by T. Solera. Comp. 1837--8, being Verdi's first opera to be prod. (Milan 1839). Chicago 1903 (concert version), London 1965 (concert), NY 1978.

Oberwerk (Ger.). Upper-work, i.e. Swell Org. (Abbreviated to 'Obw' or 'O.W.')

Oblique motion. See Motion.

Oboe. Org. reed stop of 8' pitch, imitative of instr. whose name it bears.

Oboe family. The ob. is a woodwind instr. blown through a double reed and with a compass from the B $\flat$  below middle C upwards for over 2;FD octaves. Standard orch. instr., also in chamber mus. and military bands. It is the note A sounded on the oboe to which the rest of the orchestra tune their instr. Many concs. have been written for its solo use, e.g. by Vivaldi, Albinoni, R. Strauss, Vaughan Williams, Martin; Anu, etc. Derives from the shawm and the curtal. Known in Fr. and Eng. in the 17th cent. as hautbois and hautboy. There also exist: (1) Oboe d'amore (ob. of love): pitched a minor 3rd below normal oboe. Has pear-shaped bell, which gives it its mellow and individual tone-colour, and is midway in size between ob. and cor anglais. Was favoured by Bach, but subsequently neglected. In 20th cent, has been used by R. Strauss in Symphonia Domestica, Holst in Somerset Rhapsody, Ravel in Boléro, and John McCabe has written a conc. for it (1972). (2) Oboe da caccia (hunting ob.): obsolete predecessor of cor anglais. See also cor anglais, bassoon, Heckelphone, shawm.

Oborin, Lev (Nikolayevich) (b Moscow, 1907; d Moscow, 1974). Russ. pianist. Studied Moscow Cons., where he taught from 1928, becoming prof. 1935. Won first Warsaw int. Chopin comp. 1927. Many successful pupils, incl. Ashkenazy.

Obrecht (Obertus), Jacob (b Bergen-op-Zoom, c.1451; d Ferrara, 1505). Flemish composer. Kapellmeister, Utrecht, c.1474; worked in Cambrai and Bruges 1484--91; Kapellmeister, Antwerp Cath., 1491. Visited It. several times. Wrote much church mus., incl. masses, motets, etc., and secular songs. Forerunner of Josquin Després. Used secular cantus firmus in his masses, e.g. Missa super Maria Zart. Used number symbolism in his works, cabalistic significance having been discovered in many of his structures, e.g. the number of tactus in his Missa 'Sub tuum praesidium' is 888, the symbol of Christ. Some of his works are deliberately imitative of other composers. The 'boundless exuberance', as one scholar has put it, of his music ranks it with the greatest of its time.

Obukhov, Nikolay (b Kursk, 1892; d Paris, 1954). Russ. composer. Pupil of Tcherepnin and Steinberg, and, after settling in Paris in 1918, of Ravel. Developed elec. instr., croix sonore, for which he comp. works. Invented new system of notation and 12-note system independent of Schoenberg's. Devoted most of his life to mystical choral work Le Livre de vie, soloists, ch., 2 pfs., and orch., (begun in 1916).

Obw. Abbreviation for Oberwerk (i.e. Swell Org. in Ger. org. mus.).

O.C. Abbreviation for Organo corale (It.), choir org.

Oca del Cairo,L' (The Goose of Cairo). Unfinished opera buffa in 2 acts (K422) by Mozart 1783 to lib. by Varesco; prod. Paris 1867, London 1870. Several modern edns., incl. one by Redlich.

O Canada! Canadian nat. song, especially popular among Fr.-Canadians. The mus., by Calixa Lavallée, comp. 1880, was orig. a hymn in honour of St John the Baptist.

Ocarina (It. 'Little goose'). Small keyless wind instr., shaped rather like an egg with holes for fingers and invented c.1860. Made of earthenware or metal. Mainly used as a toy and sometimes nicknamed 'sweet potato' (as in once-popular song Sweet Potato Piper).

Ockeghem (Okeghem), Johannes (Jean) (b c. 1410; d ? Tours, 1497). Fr.-Flemish composer. In about 1445 was a singer in Notre Dame, Antwerp, and in 1446 was member of chapel of Duke of Bourbon at Moulins, nr. Dijon. About 7 years later was at Fr. court, where he stayed for the rest of his life, serving three successive kings. Travelled on court missions to It. and Sp. Leading composer of period between Dufay and Josquin Després, but only 14 Masses, fewer than a dozen motets, and about 20 chansons survive, enough to show his stature. Style noted for contrapuntal richness. His Missa 'Fors seulement' was one of first parody Masses, based on one of his own chansons. His Missa pro Defunctis is earliest surviving requiem, Dufay's having been lost. His chansons were the 'popular songs' of his day. After he died, Molinet's commemorative poem Nymphes des Bois was set to mus. by Després.

O Come, all ye Faithful. See Adeste Fideles.

OldHundredth (Amer. Old Hundred). Metrical psalm tune of uncertain origin. Its name indicates that it was set to the 100th psalm in the 'old' version of the metrical psalms, i.e. Sternhold and Hopkins as distinct from Tate and Brady. The edn. of this version in which it first appeared was Daye's of 1560--1, where it was set to the words 'All people that on earth do dwell' by W. Kethe. But the history of the tune goes back to Marot and Béza's Genevan Psalter of 1551, in which it is attached to the 134th psalm. An even earlier form of the tune appears in the Antwerp collection Souter Liederken (1540). A ceremonial arr. of the tune for ch., congregation, orch., organ, and 'all available trumpets' was made by Vaughan

Williams for the coronation of Elizabeth II, 1953. (It was also perf. at his funeral in Westminster Abbey, 1958.)

Ondes Martenot. Elec. instr. developed by Maurice Martenot, a Fr. musician, who patented it in 1922 and produced it in 1928. Looks like a spinet, with a kbd. of 5 octaves but can produce only one note at a time. Uses oscillating valves like theremin, but is operated by a wire across the kbd., the player producing the desired pitch by manipulating the wire which moves a variable condenser, the kbd. serving as a guide. The signal is amplified through a loudspeaker. Tone-colour and timbre are obtained by pressing a button, and vol. is controlled by a key. The instr. is used in Messiaen's Turangalila Symphony and in Honegger's Jeanne d'Arc au bûcher.

Opera (It., work, but actually plural of Lat. opus, a work; Fr. Opéra; Ger. Oper). The term is an abbreviation of opera in musica. Opera is a drama set to mus. to be sung with instr. acc. by singers usually in costume. Recit. or spoken dialogue may separate the numbers, but the essence of opera is that the mus. is integral and is not incidental, as in a 'musical' or play with mus. Although literary dramas and sacre rappresentazione were its precursors in some respects, opera is generally said to have originated in Florence towards the close of the 16th cent. (see Camerata) with the earliest examples by Peri and Caccini. Recit. was the dominant feature, but with Monteverdi, whose operatic career extended from 1607 to 1642, opera developed rapidly, borrowing elements from the madrigal and from the ornate Venetian church mus. The aria became an important element, and in L'incoronazione di Poppea, the insight shown into the humanity of the characters anticipated 19th-cent. developments. Cavalli followed Monteverdi's lead, but a more formal approach was reintroduced by A. Scarlatti, who comp. 115 operas between 1679 and 1725. He introduced instr. acc. for recit. in 1686. During the 17th cent. opera was pioneered in Fr. by Lully and Rameau and in Ger. by Schütz and Keiser. But the next great figure in operatic history was Handel, whose operas were mostly comp. for London (between 1711 and 1741) in the It. opera seria style. His glorious solo arias were written for the brilliant techniques and skills of the great castrato singers of his day and for equally fine sops.; in addition, he imparted a lengthened degree of dramatic tension to the form both in arias and recits. It was left to J. C. Bach in his London operas of the 1760s to restore the ch. to a place in opera, as was done also by Gluck, whose operas were written between 1741 and 1779. Gluck's Orfeo, written for Vienna in 1762, is a revolutionary opera because it exploits to the full the mus. and dramatic possibilities of the lib. Gluck scrapped the da capo aria, which was a primary cause of holding up the dramatic development of the plot, and in his preface to Alceste (1767) he wrote of reducing mus. to its true function 'which is that of seconding poetry in the expression of sentiments and dramatic situations of a story'. Although opera seria was to reach its culmination with Mozart's Idomeneo (1781), Gluck's reforms effectively killed it off, even if fashion still prevented him from carrying out his theories fully. Haydn's operas, mostly written for Esterháza, are rich in mus. content but were eclipsed by the works of genius with which Mozart ended the 18th cent., operas which brought the orch. into the forefront of the art, giving it a whole new dimension. Moreover they were works which defied classification under the old headings of opera seria and opera buffa. After Don Giovanni almost anything was possible. The beginning of the 19th cent. was given a post-Mozartian sparkle by the brilliance, wit, and zest of Rossini's comic operas, and a generation of remarkable singers was served by Rossini, Bellini, and Donizetti. In Ger. the romantic movement, with its interest in folklore and fantasy, found an operatic spokesman in Weber, whose Der Freischütz, Oberon, and Euryanthe opened the way for the colossal transformation wrought by Wagner, who in his maturity dispensed with the established numbers opera and converted recit. and aria into a seamless, continuous, and symphonic web of mus., with the orch. almost an extra character on the stage. He preferred the term 'music drama' to 'opera', wrote his own libs., and viewed opera as an amalgam of all the arts. In one sense his operas were a reaction against the spectacular 'singers' operas' of Meyerbeer which he had seen in his Parisian youth. Meyerbeer was Ger., but it is with Paris that he is assoc., enjoying success while the much more talented Berlioz had little operatic success in his lifetime, though his Les Troyens is now recognized as a major masterpiece. The operas of Massenet, Gounod, Bizet, and Saint-Saëns dominated Fr. mus. in the latter half of the 19th cent. But next to Wagner the outstanding figure was Verdi, also born in 1813, who learned much from Donizetti and refined and developed his art, keeping to a numbers-opera format, from Oberto of 1837--8 to the magical Falstaff of 1889--92. Nationalist opera was principally an E. European development, beginning with Glinka's A Life for the Tsar in 1836 and continuing with Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov and Borodin's Prince Igor. Tchaikovsky's operas, of which Eugene Onegin is the best known, were not overtly nationalist, however. Smetana in Bohemia with Dalibor and The Bartered Bride est. a Cz. operatic tradition which reached its apogee in the first quarter of the 20th cent. with the powerful, realistic, and orig. operas of Janáček. In Ger. the greatest post-Wagnerian figure in opera was Richard Strauss, whose first opera, Guntram, was prod. 1894 and his last, Capriccio, in 1942. He was continually trying to find new ways of reconciling words and mus., several of his works having the advantage of fine libs. by the Austrian poet Hofmannsthal. Other major operas from Ger. and Austria in the 20th cent. were written by Berg (Wozzeck and Lulu), Schoenberg, Pfitzner, Korngold, Einem, Orff, and Henze. After Verdi in It. came the verismo (reality) movement, in which operas, often but not necessarily in contemporary settings, strove to present the harsh realities of the situations with which they dealt. In many cases these derived from the realistic novels of Fr. literature in the late 19th cent., e.g. Zola, but like all such categorizations, verismo is hard to define and it could easily be said that Verdi's La traviata is verismo. However, the term is generally applied to the works of Mascagni, Leoncavallo, Montemezzi, Leoni, and, though he is a special case, to Puccini, whose operas achieved and have retained a wide popularity because of their mus. and dramatic colour and immediate appeal. La Bohème in particular is among the most frequently perf. of all operas, with Madama Butterfly running it close. Opera in Eng. was for many years mainly an imported commodity. Only Purcell's short Dido and Aeneas (1689) and the ballad-opera The Beggar's Opera (1728) were of any quality among native products, although Balfe's The Bohemian Girl (1843) achieved popularity. Sullivan wrote a grand opera (Ivanhoe) but won immortality through the light operas written in collab. with Gilbert in which his flair for parody and pastiche could be exploited to the full. Vaughn Williams comp. 5 operas which have excellent mus. qualities but are still held to be dramatically weak. Britten, with Peter Grimes in 1945, showed that Eng. had at last produced a natural operatic composer, as was shown by the eagerness with which these works were also staged abroad. He wrote several operas which needed only a chamber orch. and also developed a genre which he called 'church parables'. These are midway between opera and medieval morality play. The example of Britten was followed by Tippett, Bennett, Walton, Maxwell Davies, Oliver, Tavener, and many others. In the USA, native opera took even longer than in Brit. to find its feet. Gershwin's Porgy and Bess has a claim to be the first successful Amer. opera. Operas by the It.-born Menotti and by Barber followed the European tradition, and qualities of exuberance, raciness, and wit which the Americans bring to mus. have been channelled most effectively into the genre of 'musical' such as Oklahoma! and Kiss Me Kate. Some great composers have written only one opera, the supreme examples being Beethoven, whose Fidelio is regarded by many as the greatest of all operas, and Debussy (Pelléas et Mélisande), while others have written none, e.g. Brahms, Bruckner, Elgar, Mahler, Ives, and Rubbra. Yet opera remains for most composers the greatest and most attractive challenge. With the development of mechanical and elec. techniques and the advance of the stage producer to an importance comparable with that of the cond., the staging of operas has grown more exciting and controversial, and has been exploited in the works of Henze, Maxwell Davies, Ginastera, and others. It has also become more expensive. Finance was a contributory cause of Britten's development of chamber operas, and has also led to the emergence of music theatre, a genre in which works of quasi-operatic character, sometimes involving only one singer or reciter, can be perf. either with a minimum of stage trappings (costumes, etc.) or with none at all but purely as a concert performance. A remarkable example of mus. theatre at its best is Maxwell Davies's 8 Songs for a Mad King. Yet even here it can be argued that 20th-cent. mus. theatre is merely a reversion to Monteverdi's Il combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda. The term opera not only covers the form of mus. composition but the whole business of performing opera. Thus it embraces the famous opera houses and cos. of It. in Milan, Rome, Naples, and Venice, of other parts of Europe in Vienna, Salzburg, Berlin, Dresden, Frankfurt, Munich, Bayreuth, and Paris, of Russia in Moscow and Leningrad, in the USA in NY and Chicago, and in Eng. in London. Two prin. cos. work in London, the Royal Opera at CG, and ENO at the Coliseum. Outside London there is the summer fest. at Glyndebourne, Sussex, but opera is provided on almost an all-the-year-round basis by the regional cos., Scottish Opera (based in Glasgow), WNO (Cardiff) and Opera North (Leeds). These cos. also tour. There are also many other cos., e.g. Kent Opera, which provide excellent perfs. and reflect the immense development of operatic life in Britain since 1945. All these activities, except Glyndebourne, are heavily subsidized. Commercial sponsorship of opera has become a valuable and necessary contribution to its continuance.

Opéra-ballet. Stage work, especially assoc. with Campra and Rameau in Fr. in the late 17th and early 18th cents., in which equal or nearly equal importance is given to singing and dancing.

Opera buffa (It.; Fr. Opéra bouffe). Comic opera, the opposite of opera seria. Began as use of a comic subject involving characters drawn from everyday life. Examples are Mozart's Le nozze di Figaro, Rossini's Il barbiere di Siviglia, and Donizetti's Don Pasquale.

Opéra comique (Fr.). Comic opera. By no means the Fr. equivalent of opera buffa, and it has changed its meaning several times. It now means opera in which there is spoken dialogue, but the subject-matter ought to be light-hearted and treated thus. Beethoven's Fidelio and Bizet's Carmen are technically opéras comiques but cannot be classified as such.

Opéra-Comique, Paris. The 2nd opera house of Paris, orig. housing Fr. mus. works with spoken dialogue. It has had a chequered history: opened 1715, closed 1745, reopened 1752. Moved to the rue Favart 1782 (still sometimes being known as the Salle Favart). Closed 1801, amalgamated with a rival co. Works by Méhul, Boieldieu, and Auber were produced there in the first half of the 19th cent. as well as Donizetti's La Fille du régiment (1840). Later, Offenbach's Tales of Hoffmann and Delibes's Lakmé had their f.p.s. there. The building was burned down in 1887, the co. finding haven elsewhere until 1898 when the present th. opened. Debussy's Pelléas et Mélisande was given its f.p. in the new th. in 1902. In 1959 administration of the Opéra-Comique and the Paris Opéra was merged under A. M. Julien, succeeded 1962 by Auric, 1969--71 by Nicoly. The th. closed in 1972 and reopened 1973 as Opéra Studio de Paris under dir. of L. Erlö. Opéra Studio moved to Lyons 1976, and Opéra-Comique, dir. by R. Liebermann, opened with old name of Salle Favart.

Opera North. Opera company based in Leeds, Yorkshire, formed in 1978 as northern arm of English National Opera at the London Coliseum. F.p. November 1978, Grand Th., Leeds, Saint-Saëns's Samson et Dalila. Mus. dir. David Lloyd-Jones. As financial independence grew, co. altered name from English National Opera North to Opera North in 1981. Gives regular seasons in Manchester, York, Nottingham, etc. Commissioned Wilfred Josephs's Rebecca 1983. Gave f. Eng. p. of K;akrenek's Jonny spielt auf, 1984.

Opera-Oratorio. Term used by Stravinsky to describe his Oedipus Rex, which is designed to be presented on the stage but in the static manner of a concert perf. of an oratorio.

Opéra, Paris. See Paris Opéra.

Opera Seria (It.). Serious opera. In the 17th and 18th cents., opera seria was the chief operatic genre, becoming very formal and complex, with elaborate display arias. Mythological subjects were the norm, and most of these were written for various composers by the librettist Metastasio. The last and greatest examples of the form were Mozart's Idomeneo (1781) and La clemenza di Tito (1791).

Operetta (It.; Fr. opérette). Little opera. Strictly a play with ov., songs, entr'actes, and dances, but the term has become synonymous with 'light opera', e.g. Offenbach's La Belle Hélène and Strauss's Die Fledermaus, and 'musical comedy', e.g. Coward's Bitter-Sweet.

Opernball, Der (The Opera Ball). Operetta in 3 acts by Heuberger to lib. by Léon and Waldeberg after the farce Les Dominos roses by Delacour and Henniquin. Prod. Vienna 1898, NY 1909. Contains the song Une Chambre séparée.

Oper und Drama (Ger.). Opera and Drama. Long essay by Wagner, written in Zürich 1850--1, in which he expounded his theories on mus. drama, speech-origins, etc.

Ophicleide. (1)^Obsolete keyed brass instr. of conical bore and played with cup mouthpiece. Was a development of the serpent and existed in alto, bass, and double-bass sizes, but only the bass was much used. Was used in military bands and is also incl. in early scores of Mendelssohn, Berlioz, Verdi, and Wagner. Superseded by the bass tuba. (2)^Org. stoplike Tuba.

Op. Posth. Posthumous work, i.e. work pubd. after composer's death. See Opus.

Opus (Lat.). Work. Word used, followed by a number, e.g. Opus 50, for the numbering of a composer's works. This numbering gives a rough idea of the order in which works were comp., but can be misleading. Sometimes the Opus no. is allotted by the composer, sometimes by the publisher. Some composers, e.g. Mozart, Haydn, did not number their works; some, e.g. Elgar, gave some works Opus nos. and not others; some, e.g. R. Strauss, did likewise but also reallocated Opusnos. so that much confusion arises in his case. Dvořák allowed early works to be given late Opus nos. by his publisher. In many cases an Opus no. covers a group of works, in which case the numbering is subdivided, e.g. Op. 59, No. 3, or in a style often used, Op. 59/3. In other cases, 2 versions of the same work exist and the composer uses letters after the number to differentiate them, e.g. Op. 49a, Op. 49b. Although the Latin plural of Opus is Opera, it has become customary to write 'opuses', to avoid confusion, just as in Italian 'opera' has become a singular noun with the plural opere.

Oracolo, L' (The Oracle). Opera in 1 act by F. Leoni to lib. by C. Zanoni from a story 'The Cat and the Cherub' by C. B. Fernald. Prod. CG 1905, NY Met. 1915.

Oration. 'Concerto elegiaco' for vc. and orch. by Frank Bridge, comp. 1930.

Oratorio. (1) Strictly, a mus. setting of a religious lib. for solo singers, ch., and orch., in dramatic form but usually perf. without scenery or costumes in concert-hall or church. The form originated in plays given in the Oratory of S. Philip Neri, Rome, in the mid-16th cent., the mus. form developing c.1600. The first oratorio was Cavalieri's La rappresentazione di anima e di corpo (The Representation of Soul and Body), a morality set to music and perf. in costume. Later oratorios, in concert-form, were written by Carissimi, A. Scarlatti, Schütz, Handel (esp. Messiah, the most popular of all oratorios), Haydn, Spoerl, Beethoven, and Mendelssohn (Elijah). Elgar wrote 3 oratorios (but The Dream of Gerontius is not an oratorio). (2) The term is also applied to works similar to these cited above but on a non-religious subject, e.g. Handel's Semele, Tippett's A Child of our Time. Stravinsky's Oedipus Rex is described as an opera-oratorio.

Orb and Sceptre. Coronation march by Walton, comp. for coronation of Elizabeth II, 1953 and f.p. in Westminster Abbey, cond. Boult, 2 June 1953.

Orchésographie. Treatise on dancing by Thoinot Arbeau, written in Fr. and pubd. 1588--9. Important source of information on ancient dances and their tunes. They are described in a dialogue with his pupil Capriol, hence the title Capriol Suite for Warlock's work based on several of the dance tunes.

Orchestra (Fr. orchestre, Ger. Orchester). A mixed body of instrumentalists for the perf. of symphonic and other works. There are various types of orch., e.g. symphony orchestra, a body of (usually) over 90 players able to play elaborate works; chamber orchestra, small version of above (from, say, 15 to 45 players); string orchestra, strings only; theatre orchestra, medium-size orch. used for musicals, etc., and often incl. saxs. The orch. has changed and developed over the centuries, the standard version today comprising str., woodwind, brass, and perc. In the 17th cent. the orch. was a haphazard affair, often incl. viols, fls., obs., cornetts, tbs., drums, and hpd. In the 18th cent., with instr. improvements, vns. ousted viols. Accs. were realized by the harpsichordist or org. from a figured bass. From c.1800, the orch. became more elaborate and composers more skilled in its use, obtaining tone-colour by subtle combinations and by solo passages. In Beethoven's 1st Sym. (1800) the orch. consisted of: Vns., div. into 1st and 2nd sections, vas., vcs., dbs., fls., obs., cls., bns., tpts., hns., timp. Later composers added the harp and Berlioz enlarged the woodwind, brass, andperc. departments, as did Wagner and Liszt. Towards the end of the 19th and in the 20th cents., composers enlarged the orch. enormously, andwe have the marvellously rich, exotic, and grandiose orch. works of Strauss, Mahler, Elgar, Havergal Brian, Ravel, Stravinsky, and many more. Huge brass sections are often a feature of their scores, with triple or quadruple woodwind (i.e. 3 or 4 of each instr.). Later in the 20th cent. even more variety in orch. use is encountered, with reversions to smallcombinations of instr., works scored for solo instr. and wind or brass instr. only, exotic perc. effects, and of course the addition of elec. instr., tape-recorded and synthesized effects. The lay-out of the standard sym. orch. isnormally as shown in the accompanying diagram, but certain works call for special seating arrangements and some cond. have individual preferences.[ln1]

Orchestral Employers' Association. British advisory and consultative committee of which the members are the managers of the prin. London and provincial sym. and opera orchs. Acts as advisory and consultative body on matters of common interest and represents its members in negotiations with Musicians' Union on pay and conditions, and in representations to the Govt. Works in assoc. with Arts Council.

Orchestral oboe. Org. stop.

Orchestral Pieces, Five (Fünf Orchesterstücke). Work for large orch. by Schoenberg, Op. 16, comp. June--Aug. 1909, rev. 1922 and 1949 (reduced to normal-sized orch.). F.p. Berlin (Nos. 1, 2, and 4), Jan. 1912, cond. Schoenberg; f. complete p. London 1912, cond. Wood (also cond. Schoenberg in London 1914). Arr. for chamber orch. 1925 by Felix Greissle and for 2 pf. by Webern.

Orchestral Set. Name of 2 orch. works by Ives. No. 1 is usually known as Three Places in New England, 1908--14; No. 2, comp.1909--15, has 3 movements: 1. An Elegy to our Forefathers; 2. The Rockstrewn Hills Join in the People's Outdoor Meeting; 3. From Hanover Square North at the end of a Tragic Day (1915), the Voice of the People again Rose.

Orchestration. (1) The art of scoring mus. for an orch. or band. Many composers showspecial skill in this, e.g. Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven, while Berlioz, Wagner, Mahler, Elgar, Strauss, Ravel, Rimsky-Korsakov, and Brittenare all masters of the art. (2) Arr. of a work for orch. which was comp. for another medium, e.g. Ravel's orchestration of his own Ma Mèrel'Oye, written for pf. duet.

Orchestre de la Société des Concertsdu Conservatoire. Fr. symphony orch. inaugurated by Habeneck on 5 Feb. 1828, with Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, and comprising over 80 past and present students of the Conservatoire. Habeneck was succeeded by Girard (1849), Tilmant (1861), and Hainl (1864). Towards the end of the century Messager was cond. and after 1945 Munch and Cluytens were associated with it. Disbanded 1967 and succeeded by the Orchestre de Paris. Orchestre de la Suisse Romande.[fy75,1] Orch. based on Geneva founded 1918 by Ernest Ansermet, who was cond. until 1966. His successors have been Paul Kletzki 1967--9, Wolfgang Sawallisch 1970--80, Horst Stein 1980--5, and Armin Jordan from 1985.

Ord, Boris (Bernhard) (b Bristol, 1897; d Cambridge, 1961). Eng. organist, choirmaster, and composer. Studied RCM and Cambridge Univ. Organist and choirmaster, King's Coll., Cambridge, 1929--57, popularizing through radio the famous Christmas Eve Fest. of Nine Lessons and Carols; lecturer in mus., Cambridge Univ. 1936--58; cond. Cambridge Univ. Mus. Soc. 1938--54. Wrote one carol, Adam lay y-bounden (1957). C.B.E. 1958.

Ordinario (It.). Ordinary, normal, e.g. tempo ordinario.

Ordre (Fr.). Term synonymous with suite used by Couperin and his contemporaries.

Orel, Alfred (b Vienna, 1889; d Vienna, 1967). Austrian musicologist. Librarian, music div., Austrian Nat. Library 1918--40 and of Vienna Univ. musicological institute. Worked with R. Haas from 1934 on collected works of Bruckner. Wrote books on Beethoven, Bruckner, Mozart, Schubert, Wolf, and Brahms, and ed. coll. of Bruckner's letters and other documentary sources.

Orfeo ed Euridice (Orpheus and Eurydice). Opera (azione teatrale per musica--theatrical action for mus.) in 3 acts by Gluck to lib. by Calzabigi based on mythological legend. Prod. Vienna 1762, London 1770, NY 1863. Title-role sung at f.p. in Vienna by alto castrato Gaetano Guadagni. For Parma prod. 1769, male sop. sang role. Fr. version, Orphée, to trans. by Moline with title-role transposed for high ten. prod. Paris 1774. (Some mus. from ballet Don Juan recurs, and other new mus. was added.) Orfeo is now generally sung by mez. but sometimes by bar. Ed. by Berlioz prod. Paris 1859 (with Viardot as Orpheus). See also Favola d'Orfeo (Monteverdi) and Orpheus. Many composers have written works on the Orpheus legend.

Orff, Carl (b Munich, 1895; d Munich, 1982). Ger. composer, teacher, and cond. Studied Mu-nich Acad., leaving to join army 1914. Worked in opera houses and returned to Munich 1920 for further study with Kaminsky. In 1924 founded the Günther School, Munich, where his life-long interest in children's mus. education began. About this time he made edns. of several operas by Monteverdi, incl. L'incoronazione di Poppea, comp. cantatas and an Entrata for orch. 'after William Byrd'. In 1937, when his Carmina Burana was f.p., he disowned all his previous works, though some were later rev. and restored. From then he comp. exclusively for the stage, though not conventionally (Carmina Burana, for example, is usually given in a concert version). His mature style is dry and staccato, with much use of perc. and the content of the mus. based on rhythmic patterns and their variations. Harmony is reduced to basic elements, and melody is nearer to rhythmic speech than to the 'expressive' ideal of other composers. Prin. works:

stage: Trionfi---Trittico Teatrale (Triumphs---theatrical triptych): 1. Carmina Burana (Songs of Beuren), cantiones profanae (1935--6); 2. Catulli Carmina (Songs of Catullus), ludi scaenici (1943); 3. Trionfo di Afrodite (Triumph of Aphrodite), concerto scenico (1950--1). Der Mond (The Moon), ein Kleines Welttheater (1937--8, rev. 1945); Die Kluge (The Clever Girl) (1941--2); Die Bernauerin (1944--5); Astutuli (1945--6); Antigonae (1947--8); Comoedia de Christi Resurrectione, an Easter play (1955); Oedipus der Tyrann (1957--8); Ludus de Nato Infante Mirificus, a Christmas play (1960); Ein Sommernachtstraum (A Midsummer Night's Dream), incidental mus. for Shakespeare (1939, rev. 1944 (withdrawn) and 1952); Prometheus (1963--7); De temporum fine comoedia (1969--71).

chorus and orch: Die Sänger der Vorwelt (The Singer of Former Times) (1955); Nänie und Dithyrambe (1956); Rota (1972).

educational: Das Schulwerk, Musik für Kinder, 5 vols. (1930--54).

arrangements: Monteverdi: L'Incoronazione di Poppea (1925, rev. 1940); Lamenti (triple bill, prod. Schwetzingen 1958, of Lamento d'Arianna, 1925, rev. 1940, La Favola d'Orfeo, 1925, rev. 1931, 1940, Il Ballo delle Ingrate, 1925, rev. 1940). [ol0]

Organ (Ger. Orgel; Fr. orgue; It. organo). Kbd. instr. operated by air blown by a bellows through pipes to sound the notes. Often known as 'the king of instruments' because of its normal large size, although it is made in various sizes. The phrase was coined by Machaut, who was probably referring also to the organ's versatility. The principles of construction, in primary outline, are: (1) A row of Pipes, graduated as to size (and hence as to pitch), is placed in a corresponding row of holes in a Windchest, which is fed by a Bellows. Under each hole in the Windchest is a Pallet, i.e. a type of hinged cover which can be opened and closed. The pallets are operated, in the older orgs., by a series of rods, called Stickers, and these are connected with the kbd. of the instr. by levers called Backfalls and rods called Trackers: thus on depressing a finger-key a current of air is admitted to its particular pipe, and on releasing it the current of air is then cut off. In many modern organs, instead of the Sticker-Backfall-Tracker action there are the tubes of a Pneumatic Action or the wires of an Electric Action. What has been described is a theoretical org. of only one row of pipes. But in practice the Windchest has several such rows, the pipes being some of wood and some of metal, some of normal pitch and some of a pitch an octave below or above that pitch, etc., some being simple ('flue') pipes and others supplied with a vibrating tongue of metal called a Reed, and so on. The Pallets extend, from front to back, under each of these rows, so admitting air to, or excluding it from, the pipes related to one finger-key of the organ, whilst from side to side of the Windchest, under each row of pipes, runs a board with holes in it, called a Slider; when slid into one position the holes in this board coincide with those under the pipes and so permit the pallets to operate as regards that row; when slid into another position they no longer coincide, and so cut off the operation of the pallets in admitting air. The sliding is accomplished (mechanically, pneumatically, or electrically) by connexion with handles or other devices; these are the Drawstops, Stop-Keys, etc., respectively, each of which operates one row of pipes---called a Register or Stop (we speak of an organ of '20 stops', of '100 stops', etc.). A kbd. operated by the hands is called a Manual and one operated by the feet, a Pedal-Board. All orgs. nowadays possess both types of kbd. When an instr. contains any considerable number of stops, differentiation in their use is made easier by their being distributed over 2, 3, or 4 manuals (occasionally more). These are banked up stepwise before the player. The chief manual is that of the Great Organ, which contains a variety of stops, incl. especially many of robust tone. Above it is that of the Swell Organ, the pipes belonging to which are enclosed in a Swell Box---with Venetian shutters which by means of a Swell Pedal can be opened or closed, so increasing or diminishing the volume of tone. Below the Great Organ manual, in a 3-manual organ, is that of the Choir Organ which contains softer stops, intended originally in a church, chiefly for the acc. of the choral body. If there is a 4th manual (above the Swell manual) it is that of the Solo Organ (with special stops of the character indicated by that name), and there may also be an Echo Organ, with very soft stops. (2) The two varieties of stop are respectively called Flue Pipes and Reed pipes. Both are graduated in size, the larger producing the lowest notes and the smaller the highest. The normal pitch of an organ (the same, properly, as that of a pf.) is the product of any set of open-ended flue pipes of which the largest (representing C two lines below the bass staff) is 8' long, the length of the remaining pipes of the set diminishing by half as each octave is ascended. The tone from the stops with these pipes of normal size can be reinforced by that from others of abnormal size, with their pipe for low C 4' or 2' long (so that the whole stop concerned gives an effect respectively 1 or 2 octaves higher than the normal) or, on the other hand, 16' or even 32' long (so that the stop concerned gives an effect respectively 1 or 2 octaves lower than normal). There are also stops of other lengths which give intermediate pitches reinforcing some of the natural harmonics of the normally pitched stops: these are called Mutation Stops or, if several rows (Ranks) of them are operated in chorus as though they made one, Mixture stops. The chief stops on the Pedal Organ are pitched an octave below those of the manuals (i.e. whereas the chief stops of the manuals are 8' stops, those of the Pedal are 16' stops). Besides 'open-ended flue pipes' there are flue pipes which have a stopper at the top ('End-plugged' is a term used in various entries in this dictionary), which lowers their pitch by an octave. The chief manual stop of the organ is the 8' Open Diapason: but there is generally also a Stopped Diapason, also, from its pitch, spoken of as an 8' stop although, in actual physical length, 4'. (These stops are also to be found in the pedal department.) By a system of Couplers the Pedal organ can have one or more of the manuals connected with it. Some of the organ's stops are imitative of other instrs. such as the Flute, the Orchestral Oboe, Clarinet, and Trumpet (the last 3 being Reed Stops), and the Gamba (a String-Toned stop, supposed to reproduce the tone of the old viola da gamba). Stops presumably intended to be imitative are the Vox Humana (a reed stop) and the Vox Angelica or Voix céleste (with 2 flue pipes to each note slightly out of tune with each other, so producing a somewhat mysterious effect---or, if only one, by the drawstop simultaneously bringing into action some normally tuned soft stop). The Tremulant is not a stop, though operated by the player by similar means: it causes a slight fluctuation of the tone.

History: the org. is the oldest kbd. instr. The first was built by Ktesibios, a Gr. engineer living in Alexandria, in the 3rd cent.

bc. This was called the hydraulis, and wind pressure was stabilized by the use of water. During the 4th cent.

ad bellows replaced the hydraulic mechanism (creating the pneumatic org.), and thereby increasing the vol. of sound. In the medieval org., pipes were of the 'flute' type (voiced with a lip, like the recorder); instead of the hydraulis kbd. (levers, each with a return mechanism, which were depressed by fingers to play notes), there was a series of tongues or sliders which were pulled or pushed manually; 2 players were often required, seated at the same manual; pipes sometimes outnumbered sliders by 10 to 1 and each note was prod. by a simultaneous 'mixture' of different pipes, producing a variety of timbre and pitch---there were unisons (basic pitch), octaves (octave higher), and quints (1 or more octaves plus a 5th higher).

^During the 13th and 14th cents. the fashion for building very large instrs. was succeeded by a trend to smaller varieties, with the clumsy slider movement being replaced by the more flexible and sensitive kbd. One of the most popular types of org. from the 13th to the 16th cent. was the portative org. (organetto), so called because it could be carried. There were usually 2 rows of pipes giving a range of up to 2 octaves. The player provided his own air supply, using the right hand for the kbd. and the left for the bellows. The portative org. was monophonic, suited to playing a solo dance-tune. The 'great' church org. gained additional kbds. to offer variety of tone, that at Halberstadt, Ger., built in 1361, having 3 manuals and a pedal kbd. It had 20 bellows worked by 10 men. When the wind pressure was strong, the player had to use the full power of his arm to hold down a key. Between the cath. and the portative orgs. in size was the positive, which could be used in church and for chamber mus. It required 2 or 3 sets of bellows and someone else to operate them so that the player could use both hands on the kbd. Though not portable, the positive could be easily moved, smaller versions often standing on a table. In Eng. it became known as the 'chair' org., corrupted into 'choir' org. At the close of the Middle Ages, several improvements occurred in construction of large church orgs., making them less unwieldy. By the beginning of the 16th cent. the kbd. had been altered to make it as responsive as that of smaller orgs; registration for each kbd. could be controlled by stops which worked in a similar way to the slider mechanism; in addition to open and stopped 'flue' pipes, there were 'reed' pipes employing a single vibrating tongue and a resonator; stops were contrasted, many of them being designed to imitate instr., and couplers were used to join manual to manual or manual to pedals. Further improvements were added over the course of the next century. Pedals were not introduced into Eng. org.-building until nearly the end of the 18th cent. In Paris, 1867, electricity was first used to activate the key action. Since that time every kind of refinement has been introduced to make orgs. capable of a wider and subtler range of tone-colour. The elec. org. was introduced in 1935. See also Regal.

Organistrum. The Hurdy-Gurdy.

Organ Solo Mass. Mozart's Mass in C, K259 (1776). So named because there is an important org. solo in the Benedictus.

Organum. An early form of melodic harmonization which flourished from c.900 to 1200. In plainchant the melody was harmonized by addition of 1, 2, or 3 parts, usually parallel.

Orgelbüchlein (Little Organ Book). Unfinished coll. of 46 short chorale preludes for org. by Bach (164 were intended), written for instruction and for pedalling practice.

Orgue de Barberie. Small mechanical organ played by turning a handle. At one time frequently heard in Eng. streets.

Orgue expressif (Fr.). Harmonium.

O'Riada, Seán (Reidy, John) (b Cork, 1931; d London, 1971). Irish composer. Studied Univ. Coll., Cork, under Fleischmann 1948--52. Ass. mus. dir. Radio Éireann 1954--5, mus. dir. Abbey Th., Dublin, 1955--62. Lect., Univ. Coll., Cork, 1963--71. Works incl. 2 ballets; The Banks of Sullane, sym. essay (1956); Nomos No. 4, pf., orch. (1957--8); Requiem for a Soldier, sop., ten., bar., ch., org. (1968).

Orlando. Opera in 3 acts by Handel to It. lib. by G. Bracciotti based on Ariosto's 16th-cent. poem Orlando furioso (Mad Orlando). Prod. London 1733.

OrlandoPaladino. Opera in 3 acts by Haydn to lib. by N. Porta based on version by P. Guglielmi (1771) of Ariosto's Orlando furioso. Prod. Esterháza 1782.

Orloff, Vladimir (b Odessa, 1928). Russ.-born cellist. Studied Bucharest Cons. Prof., Vienna Acad. 1967, Toronto Univ. from 1971. Début, Bucharest 1947. First prize Bucharest Int. Competition, 1947, Warsaw Int. competition 1955.

Ormandy, Eugene (Blau, Jenö) (b Budapest, 1899; d Philadelphia, 1985). Hung.-born cond. (Amer. citizen since 1927). Entered Budapest Royal Acad. of Mus. at 5 to study vn. as pupil of Hubay. Toured Europe as child prodigy until 1914. Head of master classes, Budapest Cons. 1919. Went to USA 1920, becoming leader and later cond. of orch. at Capitol cinema, NY. Cond. Minneapolis S.O. 1931--6; Philadelphia Orch. 1936--80. Hon. K.B.E. 1976.

Ornaments (Fr. agréments; It. fioriture; Ger. Verzierungen, Manieren). Embellishments and decorations of a melody as expressed through small notes or special signs. Further detail will be found under Acciaccatura, Appoggiatura, Mordent, Gruppetto, and Trill. In early vocal mus. and opera, embellishments were improvised by the singers, some of whom carried them to ridiculous lengths. In the 19th and early 20th cent. this improvised ornamentation became almost unknown (except in jazz), but since the 1950s it has been restored to some perf. of oratorios and operas, incl. (under Charles Mackerras) the operas of Mozart.

Ornstein, Leo (b Kremenchug, 1892). Russ.-born composer and pianist (Amer. citizen). Given pf. lessons by father, a cantor. Studied Imperial Cons., St Petersburg, 1900--07. Settled in USA 1907, studying in NY, where he made début 1911. Became leading soloist in Amer. and Europe. Introduced pf. mus. of Schoenberg to USA. Retired from public perf. in 1935 to devote time to comp. Taught in Philadelphia and founded Ornstein Sch. of Mus. (retiring 1953). His early works (c.1913) were regarded as extremely discordant and innovative. Prin. comps. incl.: Lysistrata Suite for orch. (1930), Nocturne and Dance of the Fates, orch. (1936), vn. sonata (1917), pf. conc. (1923), Hebraic Fantasy, vn. and pf. (1929), str. qt. (1940), vc. sonata (1916); and for pf.: Wild Men's Dance (1912), Impressions of Chinatown (1917), Poems of 1917 (1919), 20 Waltzes (1955--68), Tarantella (1958), and 4 sonatas.

Orozco, Rafael (b Córdoba, 1946). Sp. pianist. Studied Cordoba, Madrid Cons., and Siena Acad. with Weissenberg. Won Leeds Int. pf. competition 1966. Int. career.

Orpharion. Development of the cittern very popular in Eng. in 16th and 17th cent. Had 15 frets and wire strings. Bridge was fixed and the str. ran over a small metal saddle into the bridge and were fastened to small metal pegs driven into lower side of bridge. Orig. had 6 courses but a 7th was added c.1600. Specified as alternative to lute in several books of lute tablature.

Orphée aux enfers (Offenbach). See Orpheus in the Underworld.

Orpheus. (1) Symphonic poem by Liszt, comp. 1853--4 as introduction to his Weimar prod. of Gluck's Orfeo. (2) Ballet in 3 scenes to mus. by Stravinsky, comp. 1947, choreog. Balanchine, prod. NY 1948, Hamburg 1962. Other versions choreog. Cranko, Georgi, and others.

Orpheus Britannicus. The 'British Orpheus', i.e. Purcell. Title given to 2 posthumous vols. of Purcell's vocal mus. pubd. by H. Playford (1698--1702), also to vol. of his songs pubd. by J. Walsh (1735). Britten and Pears realized and ed. 18 of these solo songs for v. and pf. and 6 duets for high and low vv. and pf. They also made a Suite of Songs for high v. and orch. and arr. 3 songs for high v. and orch.

Orpheus in the Underworld (Orphée aux Enfers). Opéra-féerie by Offenbach to lib. by Crémieux and Halévy. Comp. in 2 acts 1858, rev. in 4-act version 1874. Prod. Paris (2-act version) 1858; NY 1861; London 1865 (adapted by Planché as Orpheus in the Haymarket).

Orr, Charles (Wilfred) (b Cheltenham, 1893; d Painswick, 1976). Eng. composer and writer on mus. Studied GSM. Wrote mainly songs, incl. 24 settings of Housman. Also A Cotswold Hill-Tune for str.

Overture (from It. overtura, opening). (1) Piece of instr. mus. which precedes opera, oratorio, or play. Lully est. the French Overture in a 3-movement style of slow---fast (fugal)---slow (concluding section). The Italian Overture, introduced by A. Scarlatti, also had 3movements, quick--slower--quick (see Symphony). Gluck was the first to give ovs. a thematic connection with what followed. Weber'sovs. were orchestral synopses of the opera. But in It. opera, ovs. were stillused as a way of stopping the audience talking and giving latecomers a chance to reach their seats. Thus one of Rossini's ovs. did duty for 3 of his operas (incl. Il barbiere di Siviglia). Wagner preferred the term Vorspiel (Prelude). In the 20th cent., operatic ovs. have become rare, composers often bringing up the curtain immediately. Strauss's orch. introduction to Der Rosenkavalier is almost an ov., as is the sextet whichopens Capriccio. For his comic opera *Die schweigsame Frau*he wrote a potpourri, a medley of tunes from the opera in the style of the composers of light operas, e.g. Sullivan. (2) Term sometimes used as equivalent of Suite (by Handel and Bach) or Symphony (Haydn's London programmes 1791). (3) See Concert Overture.

Paganini, Niccolò (b Genoa, 1782; d Nice, 1840). It. violinist and composer. Regarded as greatest of all vn. virtuosos. Studied with father and later with other teachers. Made first tour at 13 and comp. difficult pieces for himself to play. During a love affair in 1801--4 he took up the guitar, for which he composed 6 str. qts. with a guitar part, and other works. Returned to platform 1805 with sensational success. Dir. of mus. to Princess of Lucca 1805--9. Milan début 1813, Vienna 1828, Paris and London 1831. In Paris in 1833 commissioned va. conc. from Berlioz, the result being Harold in Italy, but he never played it. From 1834 he made few appearances: for some years he had been suffering from cancer of the larynx which killed him in 1840. He left a fortune and was generous to colleagues in need. Owned vns. by Stradivarius, Guarnerius, and Amati, also Stradivarius va. and db. His Mephistophelean appearance led to stories that his virtuosity stemmed from diabolical powers; he was a skilled showman and although his feats as a virtuoso are no longer regarded as unique or unapproachable, he pioneered the use of harmonics, tuned his instr. to obtain special effects, used several styles of bowing, and exploited staccato and pizzicato as never before. His intonation was unfailingly accurate. Works incl.:

vn. concs.: No. 1 in Eb (usually played in D) (?1817), No. 2 in B minor, with Rondo à la clochette (1826), No. 3 in E major (1826), No. 4 in D minor (1830), No. 5 in A minor (1830), and the so-called No. 6 in E minor (comp. c.1815) (and others lost).

In 1550 the Bishop became Pope Julius III and in 1551 summoned Palestrina to Rome as choirmaster of Cappella Giulia, a nursery for Sistine Choir. The following year Palestrina published his first bookof Masses. In 1555 a new Pope, Paul IV, dismissed Palestrina and two others from the Sistine Choir because they were married. Palestrina was appointedmaestro di cappella of St John Lateran in 1555 in succession to Lassus. For this church he wrote his Lamentations. He resigned in 1560 over dissatisfaction with the way the choirboys were fed, becoming choirmaster of S. Maria Maggiore in 1561. He pubd. his first bookof motets 2 years later. In 1567 he resigned to enter service of Cardinal Ippolito d'Este, having become dissatisfied with the papal reforms of church mus. which rendered 2 of his masses unliturgical because they contained words foreign to the mass. In addition, others of his masses incl. secular songs, such as L'Homme armé. The cardinal kept a mus. establishment at his palace in Tivoli (the Villa d'Este). In 1571 Palestrina became dir. of the Cappella Giulia. Over the next few years he lost both his sons and his wife through epidemics and decided to become a priest. But after a few weeks he changed his mind and married again, his new wife being the rich widow of a fur merchant. Palestrina formed a partnership with one of the men in the business and made a fortune which enabled him in the last 13 years of his life to publish 16 colls. of his mus. Palestrina's mus. is marked by flowing, smooth lines and a rich beauty of sound in the way vv. are blended. He had neither the range nor the inventiveness of Byrd and Lassus, but the skill with which his sacred worksare based on the secular madrigal gives his mus. special characteristics which are greatly admired. His works incl.:

Parrott, (Horace) Ian (b London, 1916). Eng. composer and teacher. Studied RCM. Lecturer, Birmingham Univ. 1947-50, prof. of mus., Univ. Coll., Aberystwyth, 1950-83. Author of books on orchestration and Elgar. Comp. operas (incl. The Black Ram, 1951-3), 3 syms., symphonic poem Alamein, pf. conc., cor anglais conc., ob. qt., pf. trio, choral works, etc. Parry, (Sir) (Charles) Hubert (Hastings) (b Bournemouth, 1848; d Rustington, Sussex, 1918). Eng. composer, teacher, and writer. Studied Oxford Univ. (co-founder of Mus. Club) with Sterndale Bennett and Macfarren. Entered business 1871 but 3 years later gave it up for mus. Studied pf. with E. Dannreuther, who introduced his pf. conc., 1880. His choral works, especially Blest Pair of Sirens (1887), est. him, with Stanford, in the forefront of British composers at a time when Brahms and Bach were the admired models. He wrote prolifically in several genres (even composing an unprod. opera, Guinevere 1885-6), and exerted a beneficial influence on Eng. mus. through his educational work. He joined staff of RCM 1883, becoming dir. 1894 until death. Prof. of mus., Oxford Univ. 1900-08. Knighted 1898, baronet 1903. His Songs of Farewell are masterpieces of a cappella writing and his settings of English poetry, in the sets known as the English Lyrics, are extremely felicitous. In 1916 he wrote the unison setting of Blake's 'Jerusalem' which has become a nat. song like Elgar's 'Land of Hope and Glory'. The scorn poured on Parry's choral works by Bernard Shaw put them into critical purdah for many years, but the best of them are re-emerging, to be regarded with delighted surprise, notably The Soul's Ransom and the Nativity Ode. His chamber music, too, amply rewards exploration. Wrote several books, among them Studies of the Great Composers (1886), The Evolution of the Art of Music (1896), Style in Musical Art (1911), J. S. Bach (1909). Prin. comps.:

Parry, John (b Bryn Cynan, c.1710; d Ruabon, 1782). Welsh harpist. Although blind, became most distinguished player of his time in Brit. From 1734 to death was in service of Williams Wynn family at Wynnstay, Ruabon. His playing impressed Handel, and the Prince of Wales (later George III) became his patron. After he had played at Cambridge 1757, the poet Thomas Gray was inspired to complete his ode The Bard. Composed for the harp and the guitar. In collab. with Evan Williams, another harpist, pubd. first coll. of Welsh melodies (1742), later adding two more coll. under his own name. These contributed to the popularity of the harp melody in the late 18th cent.

Parry, Joseph (b Merthyr Tydfil, 1841; d Penarth, 1903). Welsh composer. Studied RAM. Prof. of mus., Univ. Coll., Aberystwyth 1873--9, becoming lecturer in mus. at Univ. Coll. of S. Wales, Cardiff, 1888--1903. Wrote 5 operas, 3 oratorios, cantatas, and hymn-tunes, incl. the superb Aberystwyth, to which are usually sung the words 'Jesu, Lover of my Soul'. Tune appeared in Ail Lyfr Tonau ac Emynau, 1879.

Parry, Wilfrid (b Birmingham, 1908). Eng. pianist and accompanist. Studied TCL. BBC staff accompanist 1961. Member of several chamber ens.

Parsifal. Sacred fest. drama (Bühnenweihfestspiel) in 3 acts by Wagner to his own lib. His last opera, composed 1878--82, f.p. Bayreuth 1882, NY Met. 1903, CG 1914. (Concert perfs., London 1884, NY 1886.) Wagner wanted Parsifal to be perf. nowhere but at Bayreuth, and the Bayreuth Fest. had a copyright on the work until 31 Dec. 1913. Nevertheless this was infringed by the NY Met. and in Zürich in 1903 and by perfs. in Boston, Mass., and other Amer. cities 1904--5, in Amsterdam 1905, and in Buenos Aires and Rio 1913.

Parsley, Osbert (b 1511; d Norwich, 1585). Eng. composer and singer. Singer in Norwich Cath. choir for over 50 years, according to tablet there in his memory. Wrote church mus. for Eng. and Latin rites, incl. two 4-part morning services, Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, and anthem. Also wrote for viols.

Parsons, Geoffrey (Penwill) (b Sydney, N.S.W., 1929). Australian pianist and accompanist. Studied N.S.W. State Cons. Toured Australia with Essie Ackland 1948 and with Peter Dawson 1949. Went to London 1950 as accompanist to Dawson and settled there. World tours as accompanist to leading singers, e.g. Janet Baker, Nicolai Gedda, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, and Hans Hotter. Parsons, Robert (b Exeter, c.1530; ? d Newark, 1570). Eng. composer of church mus. and of pieces for viols. Richness of harmony and contrapuntal ingenuity placed him high among his contemporaries. Gentleman of Chapel Royal 1563. Drowned in River Trent. Part (Fr. Partie or voix; Ger. Part or Stimme; It. parte or voce). (1) The mus. from which a particular perf. or singer in an ens. works, e.g. bass part, ob. part. One speaks of 'score and parts', to denote the full score (containing all the parts) and the individual parts. (2)^Individual line of notes to be perf. by any instr. or v., or group of instrs. or vv., thus, Fugue in 4 parts, etc. (3)^A division of a large comp., e.g. Part I of The Dream of Gerontius. See also colla parte.

Pärt, Arvo (b Paide, 1935). Estonian composer. Worked for Estonian radio 1957--67. Studied at Tallinn Cons., graduating 1963. Early works influenced by Shostakovich, but later adopted strict serialism and eventually collages. Works incl.: Nekroloog, orch. (1960); Stride of the World, oratorio (1960); Syms. No. 1 (1964), No. 2 (1966), No. 3 (1971); Collage teemal BACH (1964); Pro et contra, vc., orch. (1966); Credo, pf., ch., orch. (1980); conc. for vn., vc., and chamber orch. (1980); Cantus in Memory of Benjamin Britten, str. and bell (1980); Wenn Bach bienen gezüchtet hätte (If Bach had kept bees), two versions, hpd. and elec. or hpd. and str. (1980); St John Passion, ten., bass, solo vv., ch., org., and instr. (1982).

Part Books (Ger. Stimmbücher). MS. or printed books of 15th and 16th cents. containing mus. for an individual v. in a polyphonic comp.

Partch, Harry (b Oakland, Calif., 1901; d San Diego, 1974). Amer. self-taught composer and inventor. Comp. several large works before he was 25 but destroyed them. Wandered over USA during depression as hobo. In 1943, while a lumberjack, he received Guggenheim award enabling him to develop 20 instrs. he had invented. He used system of intonation with 43 notes to octave; instrs. incl. the 'marimba eroica', 'chromelodeon', etc. Research assoc., Wisconsin Univ. 1944--7. Works incl. Windsong, Barstow, 2 Settings from Finnegans Wake, and And on the 7th Day Petals Fell in Petaluma.

Parthenia (Gk. 'Maidenhood'). Title of 1st book of kbd. mus. printed in Eng. 1611 containing 21 pieces by Byrd, Bull, and Gibbons---'Parthenia, or the Maidenhead of the first music that ever was printed for the virginals.' Reprinted 1613 and several other times in 17th cent. Reprints 1847, in facsimile by O. E. Deutsch, 1943, and edn. by Thurston Dart, 1961. A companion work, Parthenia inviolata (pun on 'Inviolated' and 'set for the viol') was pubd. shortly after Parthenia containing 20 anon. pieces for virginals and bass viol. Only known copy in NY Public Library.

Partials. Constituents of the notes of the harmonic series, the main (fundamental) note being the first partial and the remainder the upper partials.

Particell (Ger.). Short score.

Partie. See (1) Part; (2) Suite.

Partimento (It.). Division. Practice in 17th and 18th cents. of improvising melodies above a written bass. In Eng. viol-playing, 'divisions' on a ground were a form of partimento technique.

Partita (It.). Strict mus. meaning of this term is a variation, the total comp. being partite. But the ungrammatical custom of applying Partita to a composite work such as a suite has developed from the 6 Partitas in Bach's Klavierübung (1731). Bach's 3 suites for solo vn. are actually termed on the autograph score Partia. Partition (Fr.). Score.

Partito (It.). Divided.

Partitur (Ger.), Partitura (It.). Score.

Partos, Ödön (b Budapest, 1907; d Tel Aviv, 1977). Hung.-Israeli composer and violist. Studied Budapest Cons. with Hubay and Kodály. Worked in Berlin 1928--33, Budapest, 1933--6. (1946); Choral Fantasia on Yemenite Jewish Themes (1946); 3 va. concs. (1949, 1957, 1962); vn. conc. (1958); Arabesque, ob. and chamber orch. (1975); Improvisation, 12 harps (1960); Ballade, pf. qt. (1977); works for str. qt., and songs.

Partridge, Ian (b Wimbledon, 1938). Eng. ten. Studied RCM and GSM. Début Bexhill 1958. Lieder recitalist and specialist in Eng. songs. CG début 1969 (Les Troyens). Often acc. at pf. by his sister Jennifer (b New Malden, 1942).

Part-Song. Strictly any song written for several vocal parts, but in practice, a comp. for male, female, or mixed vv. (usually but not necessarily unacc.) which is not contrapuntal like the madrigal but has the melody in the highest part with accompanying harmonies in the other vv. Either through-composed (Durchkomponiert) or strophic (verse-repeating). Is a particularly Eng. genre, developing in popularity with growth of choral socs. in early 19th cent., so there are many examples by Pearsall, Barnby, Stanford, Elgar, Delius, Warlock, and many others. But examples exist by Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Brahms, etc.

Part-Writing (Ger. Stimmführung; Amer. voice-leading). The organization of a comp. so that each individual part is blended into a euphonious whole.

Pas (Fr.). (1) A step in dancing and ballet, e.g. Pas seul, solo dance, pas de deux, dance for 2, pas d'action, dramatic ballet scene. (2)^Not, as in pas trop vite, not too fast.[cm[xnPas d'acier, Le (Prokofiev). See Age of Steel, The.

Pasdeloup, Jules Étienne (b Paris, 1819; d Fontainebleau, 1887). Fr. cond. Studied Paris Cons., later joining staff and becoming cond. of students' orch., 1851. In 1861 founded Concerts Populaires and cond. many works by contemporary Fr. composers, also much Wagner. After his death concerts continued for a time under name Concerts Pasdeloup.

Pashley, Anne (b Skegness, 1937). Eng. sop. Studied GSM. Début with Handel Opera Soc. in Semele. Soloist with leading orchs. and guest singer at CG, ENO, Scottish Opera, WNO, Aldeburgh Fest. Also Olympic athlete. Pasodoble (Sp.). Double step. 20-cent. Sp. dance in quick 2/4 time. The Tango-pasodoble in Walton's Fa;Alcade is a parody (using 'I do like to be beside the seaside').

Pasquini, Bernardo (b Massa da Valdinievole, Tuscany, 1637; d Rome, 1710). It. composer, organist, and harpsichordist. Organist of S. Maria Maggiore, Rome, and influenced by mus. of his predecessor there, Palestrina. Played hpd. continuo in opera house orch. with Corelli as first violinist. Wrote operas and oratorios and dir. concerts for Queen Christina of Sweden.

Passacaglia. See Chaconne.

Passage. Section of a comp. which perhaps has no structural significance, e.g. a pizzicato passage, which may last only 2 bars. 'Passage-work' is often applied to brilliant display for the soloist.

Passamezzo, Pass'e mezzo (It.). Dance in quicker tempo. It. dance of 16th and 17th cents. similar to pavan but faster and less serious. Examples by Byrd and Philips are in Fitzwilliam Virginal Book.Passecaille (Fr.). Passacaglia. See Chaconne.

Passepied (Fr.; Eng. 'Paspie'). Pass-foot. Lively dance in  $\frac{3}{8}$  or  $\frac{6}{8}$  said to have originated among sailors of Basse-Bretagne and introduced to Paris in late 16th cent. by street dancers, becoming popular at courts of Louis XIV and Louis XV. Examples in Fr. operas of the period, e.g. by Campra. The term was incorrectly applied by Debussy to a 2-in-a-measure piece.

Passing-Notes. Harmonic term to describe note which forms a discord with the chord with which it is heard but is melodically placed between two non-discordant notes.

Passion Music. The practice of setting to mus. the Passion of Christ, for perf. during Holy Week, has 2 connected origins--the old mysteries (see Miracle Plays) and (a more direct and obvious source) a very ancient Holy Week practice of reading or reciting in church, in a more or less dramatic fashion, the story of the Passion of Christ. It is known to have existed in the 4th cent.; by the 8th its character was determined as follows: a priest recited, in Lat., the story of the Passion from one of the Gospels, in a speaking voice except for the words of Christ, which he gave out to a traditional plainsong. By the 12th cent. 3 of the clergy took part, a ten. as Narrator, a bass as Christ, and an alto as the Crowd (Turba). By the 15th cent. Passions of more musically elaborate character became common. The Reformation brought a further development. The Ger. (Lutheran) reformers, acting on their principle that the people should be able to follow the words of the service, adapted it to the Ger. language. In the 16th cent., unacc. polyphonic settings of the complete Lat. text of the Passion were based on a plainchant cantus firmus. Among many such settings were those of Obrecht, Daser, Ruffo, Lassus, Victoria, and Byrd. One of the earliest settings by an Eng. composer was that by Richard Davy. Outstanding examples of the Ger. type of Passion are the settings of Schütz (1585--1672). He adopted a type of recit. derived from the new It. style but which also had considerable affinity with the old plainsong. The 4-part chs. are acc. by str. The various characters are allotted to different vocal soloists and the works can be designated as 'oratorio Passions'. In the 17th cent. the 'Passion oratorio' developed, in which the biblical text was replaced by a metrical paraphrase, as in Keiser's Der blutige und sterbende Jesus (1704). But Bach, in his great St John and St Matthew Passions, combined both types of setting, making use of biblical text, paraphrases, chorales, arias, and imparting to the mus. a startlingly dramatic quality. In the 19th cent. oratorios on biblical subjects replaced the strict Passion settings, but Penderecki in the 20th cent. had remarkable success with his St Luke Passion (1963--6).

Passione, La. Nickname for Haydn's Sym. in F minor, No. 49 in Breitkopf edn., comp. 1768. Begins with adagio suggestive of Passion mus.

Pasta (orig. Negri), Giuditta (b Saronno, nr. Milan, 1797; d Blevio, nr. Lake Como, 1865). It. sop., among greatest of opera singers. Studied Milan. Début Brescia 1815, London 1817, both unsuccessful. Further study with Scappa was followed by successful début 1819 in Venice. Caused sensation in Paris, 1821--2, where the immense range of her v. and her dramatic gifts were matched by poignancy of expression, though she was an uneven artist. Sang regularly in London, Paris, and St Petersburg 1824--37. Created role of Amina in Bellini's La sonnambula, Milan 1831, and title-roles in Bellini's Norma, (Milan 1831, London 1833) and Beatrice di Tenda (Venice 1833) and in Donizetti's Anna Bolena, Milan 1830. Pasticcio (It.). Pie, pastry. (1) A dramatic entertainment with songs, ensembles, dances, and other items assembled from the works of several composers, thus giving the audience a medley of their favourite tunes. Popular in 18th cent., e.g. Thomyris (1707). (2) An opera in which each act is by a different composer, e.g. Muzio Scevola (1721) by Amadei, Bononcini, and Handel. (3) Instr. comp. containing different sections or items by different composers, e.g. Diabelli's Väterlandischer Künstlerverein (1823--4), containing variations by 50 composers; the Hexaméron (1837), and L'Éventail de Jeanne (1927).

Pastiche (Fr.). Imitation. Not the same as pasticcio, being a work deliberately written in the style of another period or manner, e.g. Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, Strauss's Ariadne auf Naxos, and Stravinsky's Pulcinella. Although pastiche has a meaning as 'medley', it is invariably applied musically in the sense outlined above. Pastoral, Pastorale. (1) Type of instr. or vocal comp., generally in  $\frac{6}{8}$  or  $\frac{12}{8}$ , which suggests rustic or bucolic subject, often by imitation of shepherd's pipe. A 20th-cent. use of the term is Bliss's Pastoral, Lie Strewn the White Flocks. (2) Stage piece dealing with legendary or pastoral subject. Began as a play but in Fr. pastorals were set to mus. as an early form of opéra-ballet and were at height of popularity in 17th and 18th cents. Handel's Acis and Galatea is an example.

Pastorale (Fr.). Pastoral.

Pastorale d'été (Summer Pastoral). Symphonic poem for small orch. by Honegger, comp. 1920. F.p. Paris 1921.

Pastoral Sonata. Publisher's name for Beethoven's Pf. Sonata No. 15 in D major, Op. 28, comp. 1801 (presumably because of rustic rhythm in finale).

Pastoral Symphony. (1) Sym. No. 6 in F major, Op. 68, by Beethoven, comp. 1807--8, f.p. Vienna 1808. A 'programme symphony' in which birdsong and a storm are represented. Each movement has a title, viz., 'Awakening of happy feelings on arriving in the country', 'By the brook', 'Joyous gathering of country folk---storm', 'Shepherd's song; happy and thankful feelings after the storm'. (2) 3rd Sym. by Vaughan Williams comp. 1916--21, rev.

1950--1, f.p. London 1922. Last movement has wordless solo for sop. (or cl.). (3) Short orch. movement in Handel's Messiah, depicting calm of first Christmas Eve.

Pastor Fido, Il (The Faithful Shepherd). Opera in 3 acts by Handel to lib. by Rossi based on Guarini's pastoral play (1585). Prod. London 1712, NY 1952. Also opera by Salieri (1789).

Pastourelle (Fr.). Light Fr. song of pastoral type, popular in 18th cent.

'Pathetic' Symphony. Subtitle, authorized by composer, of Tchaikovsky's Sym. No. 6 in B minor, Op. 74. After f.p. in St Petersburg 1893, Modest Tchaikovsky suggested title 'Tragic' but composer demurred, immediately agreeing to Pathetic. No reason in Eng. why Fr. title Symphonie Pathétique should be used. Note that Russ. word patetichesky means 'passionate' or 'emotional' rather than 'pathetic'.

Pathétique Sonata (Pathetic Sonata). Beethoven's Pf.Sonata No. 8 in C minor, Op. 13, comp. 1798--9 and entitled by him, in Fr., Grande sonate pathétique.

Patience, or Bunthorne's Bride. Operetta by Sullivan to lib. by Gilbert. Prod. London 1881, St Louis 1881, NY 1882. Satire on 'aesthetic' movement.

Patterson, Paul (b Chesterfield, 1947). Eng. composer. Entered RAM 1964 to study tb., then comp. with R. Stoker. Private study with Richard Rodney Bennett. Pavan (Fr. Pavane; It. Pavana; old forms incl. Pavin, Pavyn, Paven, etc.). The Pavan was a dance of It. orig., popular in the 16th and 17th cents., and as the name sometimes appears as Padovana it is assumed that its orig. home was Padua. It was in simple duple time, and of stately character. In Italy the Pavan gave way to the Passamezzo by the mid-16th cent., but was given a new lease of life by its treatment by Eng. composers, e.g. Byrd, Dowland, Bull, and Philips. It was usually paired with the Galliard and their assoc. was the orig. of the suite. Some 19th- and 20th-cent. composers have written works to which they gave the name Pavan, e.g. Fauré's Pavane, Ravel's Pavane pour une infante défunte, and the Pavan in Vaughan Williams's Job.

Riccardo Muti prin. cond. from 1981.

Philharmonia Orchestra. Eng. sym. orch. founded 1945 by Walter Legge primarily to make recordings for the Gramophone Co. Among those who cond. it on records and in the concert-hall were Karajan, Klemperer, Toscanini, Furtwängler, Strauss, Giulini, Cantelli, Dobrowen, etc. Became principally assoc. with Klemperer, who was made 'conductor for life'. In 1964, after Legge had attempted to disband it, orch. became self-governing body under title New Philharmonia, the 'New' being dropped in 1977. Maazel assoc. prin. cond. 1971--3; Riccardo Muti prin. cond. 1973--82; Giuseppe Sinopoli from 1984.

Philharmonic Society (of London). See Royal Philharmonic Society.

Philidor (real name Danican). Fr. family of musicians over several generations, *c.*1600--1800. Best-known was Fran;Alcois André (b Dreux, 1726; d London, 1795), famous as composer (pupil of Campra) and as chess-player. Visited London annually to play chess from 1745 and heard Handel's operas. Settled in Paris 1754, composing successful comic operas, e.g. Tom Jones and L'amant déguisé. His father, André (b Versailles, *c.*1647; d Dreux, 1730) was an oboist and composer. Compiled coll. of Fr. court mus. from reign of Henri III to end of 17th cent., some of which is in Versailles Municipal Library, and a large part, formerly at St Michael's College,Tenbury, is now in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.

Philippe, Isidor (b Budapest, 1863; d Paris, 1958). Hung.-born pianist and teacher (Fr. citizen). Lived in Paris from age3. Studied at Paris Cons. with Mathias and Saint-Saëns. Recitalist and soloist with orchs. London début 1890. Prof. of pf., Paris Cons., 1893--1934, with long list of illustrious pupils. Lived in NY 1941--55. Wrote books on pf. technique, comp. works for pf. and for orch., and arr. mus. by Bach, Massenet, and Mendelssohn for 2 pf.

Philippot, Michael Paul (b Verzy, 1925). Fr. composer. Studied Paris Cons. 1945--7 and privately with Leibowitz 1945--9. Sound engineer, Fr. radio and TV 1949--59. Dir., Groupe de Recherches Musicales 1959--61. Mus. dir., Fr. radio and TV 1964. Works incl. sonata, pf. trio, musique concrète on tape, etc.

Philips, Peter (b c.1561; d Brussels, 1628). Eng. composer and organist. Choirboy, St Paul's Cath., London, 1574. First comp., a keyboard pavan, 1580. Fled country 1582 because he was Roman Catholic. Settled in Antwerp 1590 as court organist, later organist of Chapel Royal, Brussels. Was arrested 1593 and accused of conspiracy to assassinate Elizabeth I, but was exonerated and released. Comp. motets, madrigals, masses, and psalms, all of high quality and interest.

Phillips, Montague (Fawcett) (b London, 1885; d Esher, 1969). Eng. composer and organist. Studied RAM. Org. and choirmaster, Esher church, for many years. Wrote sym., 2 pf. concs., and light opera The Rebel Maid (1921).

'Philosopher, The' (Der Philosoph). Nickname of Haydn's Sym. No. 22 in Eb (Hob. I:22) comp. 1764. Known by this title in Haydn's lifetime in reference to opening adagio. Haydn said he had once written a sym. in which God speaks to an unrepentant sinner: this could be the work. A 2nd version, omitting the adagio, was printed in Paris by Venier in 1773.

Phoebus and Pan (Eng. title for Der Streit zwischen Phoebus und Pan, 'The Strife between Phoebus and Pan'). Cantata by J. S. Bach (BWV 201), comp. ?1729, to lib. by Picander (based on Ovid) satirizing hostile mus. critic. Sometimes staged as opera.

Phoenix Mass. Choral work by Payne for mixed ch., 3 tpt., and 3 tb., comp. 1965--9 with 39 bars added to Agnus Dei in 1972.

Phoneuma. Very soft org. stop of Dulciana tone and Quintatön effect.

Phonograph. Same as gramophone and used in USA. The term was devised by Edison for his recording machine, the record or wax cylinder being called a phonogram.

Phrase. Short section of a comp. into which the mus., whether vocal or instr., seems naturally to fall. Sometimes this is 4 measures, but shorter and longer phrases occur. It is an inexact term: sometimes a phrase may be contained within one breath, and sometimes subdivisions may be marked. In notation, phrase-marks are the slurs placed over or under the notes as a hint of their proper punctuation in perf. (see Curved line, various uses of). The art of phrasing by a perf. is often instinctive and is one of the features by which a supreme artist may be distinguished from one of lesser inspiration, whether cond., singer, or instrumentalist.

Phrygian Mode. The 3rd of the ecclesiastical modes, represented by white keys of pf. beginning on E.

Piacevole (It.). Agreeable.

Piagnendo, piangente (It.). Weeping; piangevole, piangevolmente. Plaintive; plaintively.

Piano (It.). Soft, quiet. (1) Instruction to play softly (abbreviation p, or pp, pianissimo, very softly). Opposite of forte, loud. (2) Eng. term for kbd. instr. whose full name is pianoforte (It.), soft-loud. This instr. is, with regard to its str. and hammers, a descendant of the dulcimer, and, to its kbd., a descendant of the harpsichord and clavichord. The modern pf.

has an iron frame and is either grand (str. horizontal) or upright (str. vertical). It normally has 88 keys, with a standard compass of 7;FM octaves, but some models by Bösendorfer have a compass of 8 octaves. Although there are other claimants to the invention of the instrument, it is generally accepted that the earliest instr. of its type was made in Florence, c.1698--1700, by Bartolomeo Cristofori, who prod. what he called a gravicembalo col piano e forte, i.e. a 'harpsichord with loudness and softness': for the hpd.'s plucking of the str. he had substituted the blows of a series of hammers, and it was this that gave the players of his instr. their new power of control of degrees of force. The Cristofori pfs. had a range of 4 to 4;FD octaves. Cristofori's idea was taken up in Ger. by the org.-builder Gottfried Silbermann, who in 1726 made 2 pfs. which he submitted to Bach, whose opinion of them was unfavourable and perhaps led to the improvements which apparently were introduced. In 1747 Bach, on a visit to the court of Frederick the Great at Potsdam, played the Silbermann pfs. there. All pfs. up to this point were of the hpd. shape---rather like what we now call the grand pf., with the str. horizontal and in line with the relevant finger-keys. The first pf. in clavichord shape, known as the square pf., was made by Frederici of Gera, but he was closely followed by one of Silbermann's apprentices, Johannes Zumpe, who went to London and introduced there the popular rectangular form of the instr. Further impetus to the pf. was given by J. C. Bach, when he settled in London, and by Clementi. Developments in the 'action' of the instr. were made by Backers, John Broadwood, and Stodart. Broadwood made changes in the square pf. In Fr., Érard made the square, and later grand pfs., while the Austrian Andreas Stein found a way of giving extra lightness of touch to the grand. The first Amer.-built pfs. were by J. Behrent in Philadelphia, 1775. The Upright Pianoforte, in which the str. run perpendicularly, was developed by John Isaac Hawkins of Philadelphia (1800) and Robert Wornum, jun., of London (1811, perfected 1829): the existing model is largely founded on that of Wornum. From the middle of the 19th cent. it superseded the square form, but was itself almost ousted in the 20th cent. by the 'baby', i.e. small-sized, grand. Hawkins also introduced the iron frame. One advantage was the possibility of using str. at higher tension than the wooden frame allowed, so making possible the use of thicker wire, producing a fuller tone. The tension of a single str. today may be 180--200 lb., the varying stress of the different sizes of str. being more or less equally distributed by Overstringing, i.e. by one group of str. passing more or less diagonally over another: this principle as applied to the pf. dates from c.1835, but there had previously been occasional overstrung clavichords. 18th-cent. hpds. had more than 1 str. to each note and Cristofori's pf. had 2 throughout: the modern pf. has 1 string for a few of the very lowest notes, 2 for the middle register, and 3 for the highest (on account of the decrease of resonance with the shorter str.): the lowest str. are wrapped with a copper coil to increase their mass without too greatly decreasing their flexibility. The Sound-board of a pf. (lying behind the str. in an upright and below them in a grand) fulfils the same function as the body of a vn.: without it the tone of the instr. would be very faint and thin. The Sustaining Pedal, when depressed, removes the whole series of dampers from the str.: thus any note or chord played can be given some duration, even though the finger or fingers have been removed from the keys, and also the harmonics of the str. sounded are enriched by the sympathetic resonance of those derived from other freely-vibrating str., resulting in a fuller tone. (It is a mistake to call this pedal the 'Loud Pedal' as it is as much used in soft passages as in loud.) This pedal must of course normally be lifted at a change of harmony, as otherwise confusion will result. There is in most instr. manufactured in the USA and Canada a Sostenuto Pedal. It ingeniously enables the player to make (within limits) a selection as to the notes he wishes to be held over. It was introduced by the Steinway firm and perfected in 1874. The Soft Pedal may act in one of several ways: (a) In grands by moving the kbd. and set of hammers sideways, so as to leave unstruck 1 str. of each note (see Corda); (b) In uprights by moving the whole set of hammers nearer to the str., so that the force of their blows is diminished, or by interposing a piece of felt between hammer and str. (a crude method now little used). Experiments in the construction of the pf. have been frequent; these have included pfs. with double kbd.; pfs. with indefinitely prolonged sounds (by means of a revolving wheel or other imitation of the vn. bow, or of a current of air tending to keep the str. in vibration, or by some electrical device); pfs. with tuning-forks in place of str. (incapable of getting out of tune); combinations of the pf. principle with that of some other instr. (e.g. fl., organ, hpd., clavichord); quarter-tone pfs. (see Microtone); various applications of electricity, etc. See Keyboard for experimental kbds.; see prepared piano; see Aliquot and Duplex scaling. The pf. is, of course, principally used as a solo instr., or as the solo instr. in a conc. with orch., or in chamber mus. (pf. trio, pf. qt., etc.). But many composers in the 20th cent. have used it as an orch. instr., e.g. Stravinsky in Petrushka, Vaughan Williams in Sinfonia Antarctica, Bartók in Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta, and numerous other works. Stravinsky's Les Noces is scored for 4 pf. used as perc. instrs. Later composers, from Cage onwards, have conjured new sounds from the pf. by making adjustments to the str. (see prepared piano), having them plucked by hand, or used as resonators. Since its first appearance, the pf. has called forth executants of varying styles and techniques. C. P. E. Bach was among the first to develop the new methods of playing so different from those required for hpd. and clavichord, followed by Clementi. Absolute evenness of touch was his ideal, inculcated also in his pupil Cramer. The Viennese-made pf. was lighter, with less sonorous tone, than the heavier English type. Mozart's playing was attuned to the Viennese action. His most famous pupil was Hummel. But Beethoven used an Eng. pf., suitable to his energetic and dynamic playing. He was the first fully to profit by the opportunities afforded by the sustaining pedal. His example was followed by Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, and Mendelssohn, whose works would be unimaginable on a pedal-less instr. John Field developed the 'singing touch' of legato playing and his exploitation of the Nocturne influenced Chopin whose playing and comps. for the pf. opened up new possibilities of tone-colour. Liszt was the first of the virtuosi whose technique rivalled Paganini's on the vn., expanding it beyond all previous bounds, and pointing the way to the harmonic experiments of Debussy and Ravel and even to the percussive effects of Stravinsky and Bartók. Other great 19th-cent. executants were Rubinstein, Thalberg, and Bülow, while among the great composer-pianists born in the 19th cent. were Busoni, Rakhmaninov, and Bartók. The 20th cent. has been rich in superb virtuosi. One need name only Arthur Rubinstein, Arrau, Horowitz, and Richter as exemplars.

Pianoforte (It.). 'Soft-loud'. The piano.

Pianola. Patented name (by the Aeolian Corp.) for one of the group of pfs. known as 'player-pianos'. These instr. are fitted with a mechanism by which the keys are depressed not by the fingers but by air-pressure supplied through bellows and pedals or by electricity. The air-pressure is applied through perforations on a paper roll which unwinds and which are arranged so that a comp. is played. It is not necessary for the perforations to be restricted to the number of notes which can be played by 2 (or 4) hands. In some cases the rolls incorporate perforations made mechanically from a perf. by an eminent pianist or musician, the instr. then reproducing this perf. (hence the name reproducing piano). Historic rolls of this kind preserve, for example, the playing of their own mus. by Mahler and Debussy.

Piano Quartet. Group of 4 players---usually pianist, violinist, violist, and cellist---or work written for them to perform.

Piano Quintet. Group of 5 players---usually pianist, 2 violinists, violist, cellist---or work written for them, but one of the most famous works, Schubert's 'Trout' quintet, is for pf., vn., va., vc., and db.

Piano Score. Score in which the orch. parts and vocal parts (if any) are reduced to a pf. part. [cm] Piano Signs For 'Spreading' of Chords[ql[ol3] [Arpeggioed], i.e. harp-fashion)[qc[ol3] [dt6p6,6p6][bt] WRITTEN[qc[nt] PLAYED[qc[xm60] [xn[bn[ol57] Instead of attacking the notes of the chord simultaneously, play them from the bottom upwards, holding each as struck. (Occasionally in early mus. the notes are to be played from the top downwards and the question as to which is intended is sometimes a difficult one.) [xn[bn]^ Sometimes the wavy line is not continuous between the two staves, and then it is to be understood that the composer intends the arpeggio effect to go on in the two hands simultaneously. [ol48] [xn^It is to be noted that all spread chords should be so played as not to destroy the rhythm of the passage.

Piano Trio. Group of 3 players---pianist, violinist, cellist---or work written for them to perform.

Piatigorsky, Gregor (b Ekaterinoslav, 1903; d Los Angeles, 1976). Russ.-born cellist (Amer. citizen from 1942). Studied Moscow Cons. Prin. cellist Moscow opera orch. and then (1924) Berlin P.O. under Furtwängler until 1928. Became internationally known as soloist and chambermus. player. Amer. début 1929. Taught at Curtis Institute and Boston Univ. Dedicatee and first performer of Walton's vc. conc. (1957).

Piatti (It.). Cymbals.

Piatti, Alfredo (Carlo) (b Bergamo, 1822; d Crocetta di Mozzo, nr. Bergamo, 1901). It. cellist and composer. Studied with Zanetti and at Milan Cons. 1832--7 with Merighi. Début Milan 1837, Paris and London 1844. Annual visitor to London, being particularly assoc. with the Monday and Saturday Popular Chamber Concerts 1859--98. Lived in London from 1846. Piatti prize for cellists at RAM is in his memory. Wrote 2 vc. concs., 6 vc. sonatas, other chamber works, and ed. vc. sonatas by other composers.

Piave, Francesco Maria (b Murano, 1810; d Milan, 1876). It. poet and librettist. Wrote the libs. for 10 Verdi operas---Ernani, I due Foscari, Macbeth, Il corsaro, Stiffelio, Aroldo, Rigoletto, La traviata, Simon Boccanegra, and La forza del destino. Also wrote libs. for Balfe, Mercadante, and Ricci.

Pibroch (Gaelic piobaireachd). Type of Scot. Highland bagpipe mus. in the form of variations.

Picardie, Tierce de (Fr.). Picardy third. See Tierce de Picardie.

Piccaver, Alfred (b Long Sutton, Lincs., 1884; d Vienna, 1958). Eng. ten. Studied NY. Début Prague 1907, then further study in Milan and Prague. Leading ten. at Vienna Opera 1910--37, Chicago 1923--5, CG 1924. Noted for smooth legato and noble phrasing. Returned to London 1937--55, giving some lessons, but went back to Vienna as guest for re-opening of State Opera 1955 and remained to teach. Picchettato, picchiettato, picchiettando (It.). Knocked, knocking. In the playing of bowed instr., detaching the notes (See also Spiccato). Picchi, Giovanni (fl. early 17th cent.). It. organist and composer. Pubd. book of hpd. pieces (1620), canzoni with str. and wind, and other works.

Piccinini, Alessandro (b Bologna, 1566; d c.1638). It. composer and instrumentalist at courts of Modena and Ferrara. Wrote text-book on lute.

Piccinni, Niccolò (b Bari, 1728; d Passy, 1800). It. composer. Studied Naples 1742--54. First opera, Le donne dispettose was success in Naples, 1755. His most popular opera buffa, La cecchina, ossia La buona figliuola, 1760, based on Richardson's Pamela, was perf. throughout Europe. In 1776 moved to Paris to write Fr. operas at instigation of Marie Antoinette, who became his singing pupil. His first Fr. opera was Roland (1778). This was perf. in the midst of the celebrated Gluck-Piccinnifeud, engineered by the composers' supporters. The dir. of the Paris Opéra arranged for each to compose Iphigénie en Tauride. Gluck's version came first, 1779, and eclipsed Piccinni's of 1781. After Gluck left Paris, Sacchini became a rival. Piccinni became a teacher at the École Royale de Chant 1784, but returned to Naples on the outbreak of the Revolution. There he was suspected of political intrigue and lived for 4 years under virtual house arrest. Returned to Paris 1798 but his star had waned. His operas, no rivals to Gluck's, nevertheless have excellent qualities. They incl.

Il curioso del suo proprio danno(1756), La Cecchina (1760), L'Olimpiade (1761), Alessandro nelle Indie (1758, rev.1774), Didon (1783), Pénélope (1785), La serva onorata (1792).

Piccolo(from It. flauto piccolo, little flute; also known as octave flute, It. ottavino). Small fl. pitched octave higher than concert fl., used in orch. and military band. Famous picc. parts occur in Beethoven's Egmont ov. and in Sousa's march The Stars and Stripes Forever. Also organ stop, metal or wood, of 2' length and pitch.

Pick-Mangiagalli, Riccardo ([nmb Strakonice, 1882; d Milan, 1949). Bohemian-born composer of partly It. descent; naturalized It. Studied Milan Cons. Dir., Milan Cons. 1936--49. Wrote operas, symphonic poems, chamber mus., and songs.

Pictures at an Exhibition (Kartinki s vystavki). Pf. comp. by Mussorgsky, 1874, being mus. representation of 10 pictures at a memorial exhibition for Russ. artist Victor Hartmann, who died in 1873, with a 'promenade' as linking passage. Orch. versions by Ravel, Henry Wood, Stokowski, Ashkenazy, Elgar Howarth (brass and perc.), and others. The titles of the pieces are: The Gnome, The Old Castle, Tuileries, Bydlo (Polish farm cart), Unhatched chickens, Samuel Goldenberg and Shmuyle, Market-place at Limoges, Catacombs, Baba-yaga (The Hut on Fowl's Legs), The Great Gate of Kiev.

Pied en l'air (Fr.). Foot in the air. A particular motion in the Galliard.

Pieltain, Dieudonné Pascal (b Liège, 1754; d Liège, 1833). Belg. violinist and composer. At Paris Concert Spirituel 1778--83 and in London 1783--93. Wrote concs., sonatas, qts., etc.

Pieno, piena (It.). Full. Organo pieno, full organ; coro pieno, full choir (contrasted with passages for smaller ens.); a voce piena, with full v.

Pierné, (Henri Constant) Gabriel (b Metz, 1863; d Ploujean, Finistère, 1937). Fr. composer, organist, and cond. Studied Paris Cons. from age 8 (organ with Franck, comp. with Massenet). Organist, Ste-Clotilde, 1890--8. Ass. cond., Concerts Colonne 1903, becoming prin. cond. 1910--34. Works incl. ballet Cydalise et le Chèvre-pied (Cydalise and the Satyr), 1923, from which comes the 'Entry of the Little Fauns'; oratorio La Croisade des Enfants (The Children's Crusade), 1902, pf.. conc., incidental and chamber mus.

Pierrot Lunaire (Moonstruck Pierrot). Melodrama for female v., pf., fl., piccolo, cl., bass cl., vn., va., and vc., Op. 21, by Schoenberg, comp. 1912, f.p. Berlin 1912, London 1923. Cycle of '3 times 7' songs---in Sprechgesang---to poems by Albert Giraud trans. from Fr. into Ger. by O. E. Hartleben. The titles are: I, Mondestrunken, Colombine, Der Dandy, Eine blasse Wäscherin, Valse de Chopin, Madonna, Der kranke Mond. II, Die Nacht, Gebet an Pierrot, Raub, Rote Messe, Galgenlied, Enthauptung, Die Kreuze. III, Heimweh, Gemeinheit, Parodie, Der Mondfleck, Serenade, Heimfahrt, O alter Duft.

PierrotPlayers. Instr. ens. founded 1967 by Maxwell Davies and Harrison Birtwistle for perf. of contemporary mus., particularly their own. Title adopted because of frequent perf. of Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire. Re-organized 1970 as Fires of London.

Pierson (orig. Pearson), Henry Hugo (b Oxford, 1815; d Leipzig, 1873). Ger. composer and teacher of Eng. origin. Studied at Cambridge Univ. then in Ger. Prof. of mus., Edinburgh Univ., 1844, resigning after a few months to return to Ger. Wrote several operas, prod. Brno and Hamburg, oratorios, incl. Jerusalem (London 1852), music for Goethe's Faust, Part II (Hamburg 1854), part-song Ye Mariners of England, and other pieces. His songs are regarded as of considerable interest and originality

Piffaro, Piffero (It.). In 16th cent., generic term for any kind of pipe. Specifically a rustic wind instr. of the shawm family. When Handel wrote pifa above his 'Pastoral Symphony' in Messiah he was referring to the piffero.

Pijper, Willem (b Zeist, 1894; d Leidschendam, 1947). Dutch composer. Studied harmony and comp. with J. Wagenaar, 1911--16. Mus. critic in Utrecht 1918--23. Prof. of comp. Amsterdam Cons. 1925--30. Dir., Rotterdam Cons. 1930--47. Most prominent Dutch composer of his generation. Works incl. 3 syms. (1918, 1921, 1926); 6 Symphonic Epigrammata; pf. conc., vn. conc., vc. conc., 4 str. qts., and other chamber mus.

Pilarczyk, Helga (b Schöningen, Brunswick, 1925). Ger. sop. Studied Hamburg and Hanover. Début Brunswick 1951 as mez. Member of Hamburg Opera from 1953. Glyndebourne (Composer in Strauss's Ariadne auf Naxos) and CG 1958. Specialist in 20th-cent. roles such as Salome, Marie (Wozzeck), and Lulu.

Pilgrim's Progress, The. There have been several mus. settings based on the allegory by John Bunyan (Part I 1674--9, II 1684). The best-known are: (1) Opera (Morality) in 4 acts by Vaughan Williams to his own adaptation of Bunyan, with Christian's name altered to Pilgrim. Comp. between 1925 and 1951. Prod. CG 1951, Cambridge 1954. Act IV, Sc. 2 is The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains, which had been prod. as a separate 'pastoral episode' in London in 1922. Vaughan Williams also comp. incidental mus. (some of it later incorporated into the opera) for BBC prod. of The Pilgrim's Progress in 1943. His 5th Sym. (1938--43) uses themes from the opera, which at that time he did not expect to finish. (2) Oratorio for soloists, ch., and orch. by Bantock, 1928. (3) Oratorio by Robin Milford.

Pilkington, Francis (b c.1565; d Chester, 1638). Eng. composer. Chorister, Chester Cath. from 1602, later clergyman, and precentor of the cath. from 1623. Wrote songs with lute or viola da gamba (1605), 2 sets of madrigals (1614 and 1624), and religious part-songs. Contrib. 5-part madrigal When Oriana Walked to Take the Air to The Triumphs of Oriana.

Pincé (Fr.). Pinched. Pizzicato. Also formerly a type of mordent.

Pincherle, Marc (b Constantine, Algeria, 1888; d Paris, 1974). Fr. musicologist. Studied at Sorbonne. After 1918 taught history of vn. at École Normale de Musique, Paris. Editor-in-chief Monde musical 1925--7, Musique 1927--30. Specialist in Fr. and It. mus. of 17th and 18th cent. His 1948 book on Vivaldi was a pioneering study and was followed by another in 1955 (Eng. trans. 1957). Wrote 2 books on Corelli (1933, 1954), and books on Kreisler and Roussel.

Pineapple Poll. Ballet in 1 act and 3 scenes, lib. and choreog. by John Cranko to mus. by Sullivan arr. by Mackerras. Prod. SW 1951. Story taken from W. S. Gilbert's Bab Ballad 'The Bumboat Woman's Story'. Also concert suite.

Pines of Rome (Pini di Roma). One of 3 symphonic poems by Respighi about Rome. Comp. 1923--4 (f.p. Rome 1924, London 1925). Score incl. nightingale on a gramophone record. 4 sections are : Villa Borghese, A Catacomb, Janiculum, and Appian Way.

Pini, Anthony (b Buenos Aires, 1902). Eng. cellist. Prin. cellist LPO 1932--9, RPO 1947--63, CG 1964. Soloist with leading orchs. Prof of vc. RCM. Member of several quartets and chamber ensembles.

Pini-Corsi, Antonio (b Zara, 1858; d Milan, 1918). It. bar. Début Cremona 1878. Chosen by Verdi to create role of Ford in Falstaff, Milan 1893. Sang at CG 1894--6, 1902--3; NY Met. 1899--1914. Created roles of Schaunard in Puccini's La Bohème (Turin, 1896) and of Happy in La fanciulla del West (NY, 1910). Pinkham, Daniel (b Lynn, Mass., 1923). Amer.

composer, harpsichordist, organist., and cond. Studied comp. at Harvard with Piston, later with Boulanger, Copland, and Honegger. Has held various teaching posts. Works incl. 2 syms., pf. conc., vn. conc., chamber opera The Garden of Artemis, arr. (with additions) of The Beggar's Opera (1956), Wedding Cantata, Christmas Cantata, Requiem, organ conc. (1970), Signs of the Zodiac for orch., etc. Pinnock, Trevor (David) (b Canterbury, 1946). Eng. harpsichordist. Studied RCM 1964--7. Début as soloist London 1971. Played with Galliard Harpsichord Trio 1966--72, English Concert from 1973.

Pinto, George Frederic (Saunders) (b Lambeth, 1785; d Camden Town, 1806). Eng. violinist, composer, and pianist. Wrote 5 pf. sonatas and 3 vn. sonatas. The pf. sonatas, written when he was 16, have been ed. by N. Temperley and revived (1979) by John McCabe, who has shown them to be works of extraordinary merit, which could easily be mistaken for mature Schubert. Pinza, Ezio (b Rome, 1892; d Stamford, Conn., 1957). It. bass. Studied Bologna. Début Soncino, 1914. After army service, made Rome début 1920 as King Mark in Tristan. Sang at Scala, Milan, 1921--4, NY Met. 1926--48, CG 1930--9. Repertory of nearly 100 roles. A great Don Giovanni. His noble voice and fine looks were matched by dramatic ability. Pitch. The location of a sound in the tonal scale, depending on the speed of vibrations from the source of the sound, fast ones producing a high pitch and slow ones a low. The rate of vibration per second is the note's 'frequency'. By int. agreement of 1939, renewed and extended in 1960, the present-day standard of 'concert-pitch' to which instr. are tuned is that in which the A directly above middle C has 440 (double) vibrations per second (440 Hz), which makes middle C 261.6 Hz. This replaced the standard of 435 (diapason normal) fixed in Paris in 1859 and confirmed in Vienna in 1885. Before then, a variety of pitches existed. In Eng. in the 16th cent., domestic kbd. pitch was about 3 semitones lower than today's pitch and the church mus. pitch over 2 semitones higher. Between 1700 and 1850, the note A varied between 415 and 429. Pitch can now be measured electronically, but still the most common way is by a tuning-fork. See A.

Pitchpipe. Small wooden pipe of square section, about 18 in. in length, with whistle mouthpiece, used in 18th and 19th cents. Leather-covered wooden stopper can be inserted to shorten pipe and thus raise the pitch. On the stem of the stopper the various notes were marked. Principally used in churches that had neither organ nor band of musicians.

Plagal Cadence. Cadence with subdominant preceding the tonic, normally both in root position. Known also as 'Amen cadence', because it was used for the Amen of hymns in the 15th and 16th cents. Use revived by Hindemith.

Plainchant. Same as Plainsong.

Plainsong. The large body of traditional ritual melody of the Western Christian Church, in its final form called Gregorian chant. Comprised single line of vocal melody, properly (but not always nowadays) unacc. in free rhythm, not divided into bar-lengths. Has own system of notation, employing stave of 4 lines instead of 5. The word is a trans. of Cantus planus--in contra-distinction to Cantus figuratus (florid song, implying a counterpoint added to the traditional melody) or Cantus mensuratus (measured song, implying the regularity of rhythm assoc. with harmonic mus.). The Eastern (or 'Greek') branch of the Christian Church and the Jewish Synagogue have similar bodies of melodic ritual song, but the term Plainsong, as ordinarily used, does not incl. them. Plainsong rhythm is the free rhythm of speech; it is a prose rhythm, which of course arises from the unmetered character of the words to be recited--psalms, prayers, and the like. In character, plainsong falls into two essentially distinct groups--the responsorial (developed from recitation of psalms round a 'dominant'), and antiphonal (developed as pure melody). Plainsong developed during the earliest centuries of Christianity, influenced possibly by the mus. of the Jewish synagogue and certainly by the Gr. modal system (see Modes). A major reform was instituted in the 6th cent. at, it is said, the request of Pope Gregory. Further reform was attempted at the end of the 16th cent., but the results were disastrous. Palestrina was charged with the work of revising the plainsong of the Gradual, Antiphonal, and Psalter, but died almost immediately after accepting the commission. Felice Anerio and Soriano undertook the work, and their edn. was pubd. by the Medicean Press in 2 vols., 1614--15. This Medicean Edition, as it is called, with its addition and suppression of melismata, its altered melodies, and its new ones, became the basis for many cheaper performing edns. In the 18th cent. there was a fashion for introducing grace notes and passing notes into the plainsong (called in Fr. Machicotage). In the 19th cent. there was another cry for reform and the famous Ratisbon (Regensburg) edns. appeared--unfortunately based on the Medicean Edition. Years of controversy followed, for the Benedictine monks of Solesmes, in Fr., had long been at work in the most scientific spirit, photographing and collating innumerable manuscripts, in all the libraries of Europe. They pubd. their Gradual in 1883 and their Antiphonal in 1891. The Ratisbon edn. had had papal privileges conferred upon it, but in 1903 these expired and in the same year Pius X was chosen Pope and he at once issued his famous Motu Proprio on church mus., laying down, among other things, the importance of plainsong and the necessity of taking it from early and pure sources. Among the reforms of the Solesmes monks (who, temporarily driven from France by anti-clerical legislation in 1901, carried on their work for some years in Eng.) was the introduction of a lighter and more rhythmic manner of perf.

Polo. Andalusian folk-song (and dance) in moderate ;s3:8 with syncopations and vocal coloraturas on words such as 'Ole' and 'Ay'. Example comp. by M. García in his opera El criado fingido was quoted by Bizet in prelude to Act IV of Carmen. No. 7 of Falla's 7 Spanish Popular Songs is a polo. Polonaise (Fr.), Polonäse (Ger.), Polacca (It.). A nat. Polish dance, in simple triple time and of moderate speed; it should, perhaps, more properly be described as a stately ceremonial procession rather than a dance, and probably originated among the aristocracy in 16th cent. Certain rhythms are characteristic, such as the frequent division of the first beat of the measure with accentuation of its 2nd half, the ending of phrases on the 3rd beat of the measure, etc. Many composers, incl. Bach, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, and Schubert have written polonaises; Chopin's 13 examples, in which he found an outlet for his patriotic feeling, are outstanding.

Polonia. (1) Concert-ov. by Wagner, comp. 1836. F.p. Palermo 1881, London 1905. (2) Symphonic prelude for orch., Op. 76, by Elgar, f.p. 1915. (3) Suite for orch. by Panufnik, comp. and f.p. 1959. Polonia means Poland.

Poule, La (The Hen). Nickname for Haydn's Sym. in G. minor, No. 83 in Breitkopf edn., comp. 1785. A 19th-cent. accretion, purporting to describe 'clucking' 2nd subject of 1st movement.

Poulenc, Francis (b Paris, 1899; d Paris, 1963). Fr. composer and pianist. Taught pf. by his mother and began composing at age of 7. At 15 studied with Ricardo Viñes, who encouraged his ambition to compose and introduced him to Satie, Casella, Auric, and others. In 1917 his Rapsodie nègre brought his name to notorious prominence in Paris as one of a number of composers---Les Nouveaux Jeunes---encouraged by Satie and Cocteau. Even so, his technical knowledge was still scanty and in 1920 he studied harmony for 3 years with Koechlin, but never studied counterpoint nor orchestration. His knowledge of form was instinctive. In 1920, a mus. critic, Henri Collet, selected 6 of Les Nouveaux Jeunes and called them Les Six, Poulenc being among them. They gave concerts together, one of their articles of faith being to draw inspiration from 'Parisian folklore' i.e. street musicians, mus.-halls, circus bands. This milieu is faithfully reflected in Poulenc's settings of Cocteau's Cocardes. These caught the ear of Stravinsky who recommended Poulenc to Diaghilev, the result being the ballet Les Biches (1923), in which he expressed brittle 20s sophistication, a faithful understanding of the jazz idiom, and (in the adagietto) the romantic lyricism that was increasingly to dominate his work. Perhaps his finest achievements are contained in his many songs for v. and pf., particularly those written after 1935 when he began to acc. the great Fr. bar. Pierre Bernac. His settings of Apollinaire and of his friend Paul Eluard are particularly good, covering a wide emotional range. He comp. 3 operas, the biggest being Les Dialogues des Carmélites (1953--6), based on events of the Fr. Revolution, and his religious works have a tuneful ecstatic joy such as one finds elsewhere only in Haydn. Of his instr. works, the organ conc. (1938) is highly original in its treatment of the solo instr. His mus., eclectic yet strongly personal in style, is essentially diatonic and melodious, embroidered with 20th-cent. dissonances. It has wit, elegance, depth of feeling, and a bitternessweetness which derives from the mixture in his personality of gaiety and melancholy. Prin. works:

Programme Music. Instr. mus. which tells a story, illustrates literary ideas, or evokes pictorial scenes. Though the term originated with Liszt, illustrative mus. has existed for as long as mus. itself. Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony is a well-nigh perfect example of mus. which is both illustrative and satisfying purely as mus. In the 19th cent., composers such as Berlioz, Liszt, Tchaikovsky, and R. Strauss lent the full resources of the sym. orch. to this form of mus. art in works such as the Symphonie fantastique, Romeo and Juliet, and Don Quixote. The precept, once widely propagated, that 'absolute mus.' was, ipso facto, superior to 'programme mus.' is now, happily, outdated.

Progression. The motion of one note to another note or one chord to another chord, in logical progression.

Progressive Tonality. Beginning a symphonic movement in one key and ending it in another, as in certain works of Nielsen and Mahler.

Prohaska, Felix (b Vienna, 1912). Austrian cond. Studied in Vienna. Taught at Graz Cons., 1936--9. Cond. of opera in Duisburg 1939--41, Strasbourg 1941--3, Prague 1943--5. Cond. and teacher, Vienna, 1946--55; chief cond. Frankfurt Opera 1955--61; dir., Hochschule für Musik, Hanover, from 1961.

Prohaska, Jaro (b Vienna, 1891; d Munich, 1965). Austrian bass-bar. Studied Vienna. Member of Vienna Boys' Choir 1898--1906. Opera début Lübeck 1922. Nuremberg Opera 1925--31, Berlin State Opera 1931--52, Bayreuth Fest. 1933--44. Famous interpreter of Wagnerian roles of Sachs, Wotan, and Amfortas. Retired 1959. Dir., opera school of West Berlin Musikhochschule 1952--9, having taught there from 1947. Hermann Prey among his pupils. Prokofiev, Sergey (Sergeyevich) (b Sontsovka, 1891; d Moscow, 1953). Russ. composer and pianist. Was taught pf. at age 3 by his mother, who encouraged him to compose (he wrote an opera at age 9). Studied with Glière 1902. Entered St Petersburg Cons. 1904, studying harmony and counterpoint with Lyadov and orch. with Rimsky-Korsakov. Later studied pf. with Anna Essipova and cond. with Tcherepnin. Comp. and pubd. several works while student, incl. 2 pf. sonatas and first pf. conc. Visiting London in 1914 he met Diaghilev, who commissioned a ballet from him (the war upset this plan and the mus. survives as the Scythian Suite, Ala and Lolly). In 1917 he comp. his first sym., the Classical, a superb 20th-cent. reincarnation of Haydn. After its f.p. in Petrograd in 1918 he left Russia for USA, appearing in NY as solo pianist in his own works. His opera Love for Three Oranges was commissioned by Chicago Opera, perf. 1921. From 1920 he made his home in Paris, writing 3 ballets for Diaghilev, and having several of his works perf. at the orch. concerts cond. Koussevitzky, another Russ. exile. Never fully at home in the W., Prokofiev returned to Russia in 1933, choosing an inopportune moment when the doctrine of 'socialist realism' in the arts had just been propounded. He found an outlet for his particular gifts in film mus.---brilliant scores for Lieutenant Kijé and Alexander Nevsky---and ballet (Romeo and Juliet and, later, Cinderella). In 1941 he began work on his most ambitious opera, War and Peace, and in 1944 wrote his richest and most heroic sym., the 5th. In spite of its success, he was among those in 1948 condemned for 'formalism' and was compelled to 'confess' his shortcomings in an open letter to the Union of Soviet Composers. Though regarded as impossibly dissonant and avant-garde in his youth, Prokofiev can now be seen as in the direct line of Russ. comps., embodying the bold and colourful strokes of 19th-cent. nationalists into a 20th-cent. style strongly marked by its brittle wit and capacity for pungent dramatic characterization.^ Like Walton and Poulenc, he was fundamentally aromantic melodist and his style is formed like theirs from a reconciliation of the two strains in his personality, the tough, astringent modernist and the lyrical traditionalist. He was successful in a wide range of works: War and Peace is a great opera on the largest scale, the syms. and concs. are fine mus., at least 3 of his ballets are masterpieces, the pf. sonatas are crucial to the 20th-cent. pf. repertory; and in Peter and the Wolf he created the most enduring, touching, and instructive of young persons' guides to the orch. Prin. works:

operas: Maddalena, Op. 13 (1911, rev. 1913, completed in pf. score but only Scene 1 orch. Scenes 2--4 orch. Prolation. (1) Division in medieval mensural notation of the whole-note (semibreve) into 3 smaller time-units (major prolation) or 2 (minor). (2) Work for orch. by Maxwell Davies, 1959.

Promenade Concerts. Literally, concerts at which the audience can walk about, but in modern usage concerts at which a section of the audience stands. First Eng. promenade concerts were held in London 1838 under title 'Promenade Concerts à la Musard' (Musard was the leader). Later concerts on similar lines were promoted by Jullien, Balfé, Mellon, and others. In 1895 Robert Newman began new series at Queen's Hall, cond. Henry Wood. These still continue. They have been sponsored by BBC since 1927, since when majority of concerts have been given by BBC S.O. After Wood died in 1944, Malcolm Sargent became prin. cond. in 1948, but after his death in 1967 no single cond. dominated. The 'Proms', held in the Royal Albert Hall and other venues for 8 weeks from mid-July each year are in effect an enormous mus. fest., embracing semi-staged opera perfs. and chamber mus. Several orchs. take part, each concert is broadcast, and several are televised. The Last Night has become a traditional feature of Brit. life, especially the 2nd half in which the audience enthusiastically join in the perfs. of Elgar's Land of Hope and Glory, Parry's Jerusalem, and Wood's Fantasia on British Sea-Songs. Various other orchs., e.g. the Hallé, CBSO, and SNO, give their own series of promenade concerts.

Prometheus. Symphonic poem by Liszt. Orig. comp. (and orch. by Raff) 1850 as prelude to a setting of chs. from Herder's Prometheus Unbound. Re-scored by Liszt 1855.

Prometheus, Die Geschöpfe des (The Creatures of Prometheus). Ballet by Beethoven, Op. 43, comp. 1800--1 (ov., introduction, and 16 nos.), f.p. Vienna 1801, choreog. Salvatore Viganò. Beethoven used 2 themes from the finale of the ballet in other works, viz. 1. A theme in G major appears as No. 11 of the 12 Kontretänze for orch., WoO 14. 2. A theme in Eb major is used as No. 7 of the 12 Kontretänze, WoO 14; as the theme of the Piano Variations (Eroica) Op. 35; and as the main theme of the finale of Symphony No. 3 (Eroica) Op. 55.

Prometheus, the Poem of Fire (Prometei, Poema Ogyna). Symphonic poem in F# by Skryabin, Op. 60, for orch. with pf., optional ch., and 'kbd. of light' (projecting colours on to screen). Comp. 1908--10, f.p. Moscow 1911, London 1913, NY 1914 (this perf. used 'kbd. of light').

Prometheus Unbound, Scenes from Shelley's. Work by Hubert Parry for soloists, ch., and orch. to text by Shelley. F.p. Gloucester 1880.

Prophète, Le (The Prophet). Opera in 5 acts by Meyerbeer to lib. by Scribe. Prod. Paris and London 1849, New Orleans 1850.

Proportion. Conception in medieval mus. theory of relationship between vibration nos. of notes and also between their time-signatures in mensural notation expressed by fractions.

Proportionate (proportional) Notation. In 20th-cent. mus. a graphic method of indicating durations, i.e. instead of traditional notation, the horizontal spacing of symbols represents the intended length of durations.

Proporz, Proportz (Ger.). Same as Nachtanz.

Prosa, Prose. In the Christian church service, the earliest sequences (types of hymn sung to special melodies) were in prose, and this term is sometimes still used instead of sequence. Proses Lyriques (Lyrics in prose). 4 songs for v. and pf. by Debussy to his own texts. Comp. 1892--3. Titles are: De Rêve (Of a dream), De Grève (About the Shore), De Fleurs (About flowers), De Soir (About evening).

Protest Song. Term which gained currency (first in USA) in 1960s for song which voiced feelings of protest about some social injustice, real or imagined, or about some int. event which aroused strong emotions, e.g. Amer. part in Vietnam war. Among the prin. singers of the genre were Bob Dylan and Joan Baez.

Prout, Ebenezer (b Oundle, 1835; d London, 1909). Eng. composer, organist, theorist, and teacher. Largely self-taught. Organist in Islington 1861--73; pf. teacher Crystal Palace Sch. of Art 1861--85. Taught theory RAM from 1879 and at GSM from 1884. Prof. of mus. Dublin Univ. 1894--1909. Comp. large no. of works in many forms, ed. Handel's Messiah, but best known for his mus. textbooks.

Provenzale, Francesco (b Naples, c.1626; d Naples, 1704). It composer and teacher. Wrote first opera, Il Ciro, for Naples 1653. For its Venice prod. a year later, Cavalli wrote additional mus. Became choirmaster to City of Naples in 1665 and was teacher at a Naples Cons. from 1663--75, these posts leading to a diminution of his operatic activities. Head of mus. staff at Cons. of S. Maria della Pietà dei Turchini, 1675--1701. Forerunner of Neapolitan sch. of operatic and vocal composers.

Prozess, Der (The Trial). Opera by Einem, Op. 14, to lib. by Blacher and H. von Cramer after novel by Kafka (1925). Prod. Salzburg 1953.

Prozession (Procession). Comp. by Stockhausen, 1967, for tam-tam, va., electronium, pf., 2 microphones and controls, 2 filters: 6 players. The players are instructed to play 'events' from other Stockhausen works, i.e. Mikrophonie I, Gesang der Jünglinge, Kontakte, Momente, Telemusik, Solo, and Klavierstücke I--XI.

Prussian Quartets (Mozart). See King of Prussia Quartets.

Pryor, Gwenneth (Ruth) (b Sydney, N.S.W., 1941). Australian pianist. Studied N.S.W. State Cons. of Mus. London début 1965. Soloist in concs. of Malcolm Williamson.

Ps. Short for Ger. Posaunen, i.e. tbs.

Psalm. Hymn acc. by harp or other str. instrs. But by the term is generally understood the Old Testament Book of Psalms. In Christian church services these are sung antiphonally to various chants. Verse paraphrases of the psalms are known as metrical psalms. There are countless settings of individual psalms by composers from Bach to Britten (and by earlier and later composers).

Psalmody. Study of the psalms or of the tunes used for metrical psalms.

Psalmus Hungaricus. Work for ten., ch., org., and orch. by Kodály, Op. 15, based on text of Psalm 55 in paraphrase of 16th-cent. Hung. poet Mihály Végh. Commissioned for 50th anniv. of union of Buda and Pest. F.p. Budapest 1923, Zürich 1926, Cambridge 1927.

Psalter. A collection of Eng. verse paraphrases of the psalms, intended to be sung. Miles Coverdale pubd. a coll. in 1539. The Sternhold and Hopkins coll. appeared in 1549 and was completed by 1564. Other famous psalters were those by John Day, Este, Ravenscroft, Playford, and Tate and Brady.

Psaltery. Medieval str. instr., played by plucking with a plectrum or the fingers, trapeze-shaped, and usually strung horizontally over a sound-board. Had sweet, pure tone. Can be played with bow. Tavener scores for 4 bowed psalteries in Toward the Son (1982).

Psaume (Fr.). Psalm.

Puccini, Giacomo (b Lucca, 1858; d Brussels, 1924). It. composer. 5th of a line of It. church musicians. Organist at local church. Entered Milan Cons. 1880, studying comp. with Bazzini and Ponchielli. Showed bias towards symphonic works, but Ponchielli sensed his pupil's operatic potentiality and persuaded him to enter Sonzogno 1-act opera competition with Le Villi. Rejected by the jury, the work was admired by Boito and prod. Milan, 1884. It was heard by Verdi's publisher, Ricordi, who commissioned an opera from Puccini. Edgar, when it appeared in 1889, was a failure, but Ricordi's faith was justified in 1893 by Manon Lescaut, in which the mature Puccini is already evident in the ardent and profuse melodic mastery which distinguishes the work. Strangely, Puccini's next opera, La Bohème, prod. Turin 1896, was at first less successful than Manon, but it soon became what it remains, probably the most popular and generally beloved opera ever written, a masterpiece of characterization, sentiment, and craftsmanship. Power of characterization also marked his next opera, Tosca, based on a Sardou play. Madama Butterfly was his most successful psychological character-study and requires exceptional vocal and histrionic skill from the sop. who sings the heroine. The work was a failure at its Milan première, but Puccini re-cast it in 3 acts for Brescia 3 months later, where it was acclaimed as a triumph and has since almost rivalled Bohème in popularity. Butterfly was set in Japan and was based on a play by Belasco, who was author of the Amer. melodrama The Girl of the Golden West which became Puccini's next opera (La fanciulla del West). This was prod. at the NY Met. in 1910 but has never attained a popularity equal to its predecessors although on closer acquaintance the mus. is revealed as of very high quality. Similar re-assessment is due to La rondine (Monte Carlo 1917). Nothing illustrates Puccini's instinctive theatrical skill more remarkably than the success with which he achieved the difficult feat of combining 3 contrasting 1-act operas in Il trittico (Triptych): a thriller in Il tabarro, a sentimental tragedy in Suor Angelica, and a comedy in Gianni Schicchi. For his next opera Puccini selected a lib. inspired by Gozzi's play Turandot. But he died of cancer before he could complete the duet which was planned as the climax of the work. It was completed skilfully by Alfano and the opera has held its place despite this anti-climax because of the superb mus. earlier in the opera and because the part of the cruel Princess Turandot is a glorious gift to dramatic sophs. Puccini lacks the nobility of Verdi, but few opera composers can rival him in dramatic flair and skill. He is sentimental but it is a sentimentality to which millions are glad to respond. His sense of characterization was highly developed and his genius for orchestration enabled him with a few notes to hold an audience in the palm of his hand. Most of his operas contain a heroine in whom there are elements of the 'little girl', and there is a streak of sadistic cruelty which also marred the personality of the man himself. He continued to develop as an artist and to respond to contemporary influences, from Debussy to Schoenberg. Prin. works:

operas: Le Villi (The Wilis) (first, one-act, version, 1883; 2-act version, 1884); Edgar (4-act version, 1884--8; 3-act version 1892, rev. 1901, 1905); Manon Lescaut (1890--2); La Bohème (1894--5); Tosca (1898--9); Madama Butterfly (2-act version, 1901--3; 3-act version, 1904; further cuts and rev., 1906); La fanciulla del West (1908--10); La rondine (The Swallow) (1914--16); Il trittico (Il tabarro, Suor Angelica, Gianni Schicchi) (1913--18); Turandot (1920--6, last scene completed by Alfano).

Punto, Giovanni (Stic^;, Jan Václav or Stich, Johann Wenzel) (b Zehus^;ice, 1746; d Prague, 1803). Bohemian horn-player and violinist. Studied in Prague, Munich, and Dresden (under Hampel). Assumed It. name 1766 and in 1768 began European travels, visiting Eng. in 1770 and 1777. At Mainz court 1769--74. Met Mozart in Paris 1778. Worked in Paris 1782--7 and 1789--99. When he visited Vienna in 1800, Beethoven wrote his hn. sonata, Op. 17, for him. Acclaimed as virtuoso of highest order. Wrote 11 hn. concs. (pubd. c.1787--c.1806), 24 hn. qts., 20 hn. trios, 56 hn. duos, other chamber works, and a book of hn. exercises (1795).

Purcell, Daniel (b London, c.1660; d London, 1717). Eng. organist and composer, brother of the great Henry Purcell. Organist, Magdalen Coll., Oxford, 1688--95, St Andrew's, Holborn, 1713--17. In 1695 succeeded his brother as composer of incidental mus. for plays. Prolific writer of other works.

Purcell, Edward (Cockram) (really Edward Purcell Cockram) (d 1932). Eng. composer best known for song Passing by.

Purcell, Henry (b London, 1659; d London, 1695). Eng. composer and organist. Son of Thomas Purcell, one of the King's musicians. Boy chorister of Chapel Royal. Studied with Humfrey and Blow. In 1674 he was appointed tuner of Westminster Abbey org. and at 18, in 1677, he succeeded Matthew Locke as 'composer to the King's violins' (a str. band of 24 players). He succeeded Blow as organist of Westminster Abbey in 1679. In the following year he pubd. the superb Fantasias for strs., written for his private enjoyment and not for the royal band. From 1680 Purcell began to compose the long series of 'welcome odes' and other official choral pieces, his music by far transcending the doggerel of the words. In that year, too, he comp. the first of the incidental mus. he wrote for the London th., for plays by Dryden, Congreve, Shadwell, Brady, Behn, etc. In 1682 he became one of the 3 organists of the Chapel Royal and in 1683 pubd. his sonatas in 3 parts (2 vn., and bass, with organ or hpd.), in the preface to which he admitted that he had attempted a 'just imitation of the most fam'd Italian masters'. In 1685 his anthem My Heart is Inditing was comp. for the coronation of James II and 4 years later he was involved in the coronation of William III. In 1689 his only opera, Dido and Aeneas, was perf. at Josias Priest's boarding-school for girls at Chelsea. In the last few years of his life, Purcell was increasingly prolific, composing some of his greatest church mus. such as the Te Deum and Jubilate in D. In 1695, for Queen Mary's funeral, he comp. an anthem (Thou knowest, Lord, the Secrets of our Hearts), 4 canzonas for brass, and 2 elegies, which are among his most masterly works and were used for his own funeral later the same year. Purcell's position as among the greatest of Eng. composers was acknowledged in his lifetime, but it was not until the bicentenary of his death that this judgment came to be accepted by later generations. The work of the Purcell Soc. and of composers such as Holst and Vaughan Williams helped to rehabilitate him, and Benjamin Britten of a later generation paid him the compliment of imitation and also restored many of his works to the concert-hall, aided by the 20th-cent. revival of interest in perf. the mus. of Purcell's time in authentic style. Purcell's brilliance of invention, his sense of drama, and the 'common touch' which endeared him to his contemporaries (both musicians and non-musicians) give his mus. freshness and immediacy. In Dido and Aeneas, he comp. the first great Eng. opera and set a new standard of sensitivity to words and word-rhythms in addition to displaying rare depths of emotion. Yet it is in the instrumental works that the real genius of Henry Purcell dwells. Prin. works:

opera: Dido and Aeneas (1689).

semi-operas: The Prophetess, or The History of Dioclesian (1690); King Arthur, or The British Worthy (1691); The Fairy Queen (1692); The Indian Queen (1695); The Tempest, or The Enchanted Island (?1695. See Weldon, John).

Quint. Org. stop sounding a note a 5th higher than key depressed. When on the pedal it is a 10'; FN' stop designed to be used in conjunction with 16' stop, producing effect of 32' stop. Quintadena and quintatön are types of org. stop which sound not only the note of the key depressed but also the note a 12th higher. Also the 4th partial tone of a bell when it is tuned a 5th above the strike note.

Quinte (Fr.). (1) Interval of a 5th. (2) Obsolete Fr. name for va. (orig. ten. viol with 5 str., pitched 5th lower than vn.). Quintet (Fr. quintette, quintuor; Ger. Quintett; It. quintetto). Comp. for 5 instr. or vv., or the singers or players who perform such comps. In vocal music usually 2 sop., alto, ten., and bass (there are many 5-part madrigals). A str. quintet is usually 2 vns., 2 va., and vc., but sometimes (as in most of quintets by Boccherini and in those by Schubert and Vaughan Williams) for 2 vns., va., and 2 vc. A pf. quintet is usually for pf., 2 vns., va., vc., but note that Schubert's 'Trout' Quintet is for pf., vn., va., vc., db. There are also cl. quintets, ob. quintets, etc. The customary wind quintet is for fl., ob., hn., cl., bn., but Elgar's wind quintets are for 2 fl., ob., cl., bn. There are also operatic quintets, the most famous occurring in Act 3 of Wagner's Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg.

Quintfagott (Ger.). Bn. pitched 5th lower than normal.

Quintole (quintuplet). Group of 5 notes, or notes and rests, of equal time-value, written to be played in the time of 4 or 3. See Irregular rhythmic groupings.

Quintuplet. See Quintole.

Quintuple Time. When there are 5 beats to a measure, with prin. accents on 1st, and 3rd or 4th beats according to whether the 5 are a compound of 2 : 4 and 3 : 4 or of 3 : 4 and 2 : 4. Famous examples are in Chopin's pf. sonata in C minor, Op. 4, Wagner's Tristan und Isolde, Act III, Sc. 2, and Tchaikovsky's 6th Sym. (2nd movement).

Quodlibet (Lat.). What pleases. Light-hearted comp. comprising several popular tunes or fragments of tunes ingeniously put together, e.g. finale of Bach's Goldberg Variations, where 2 popular melodies of the day, Ich bin so lang nicht bei dir g'west (I've been away from you so long) and Kraut und Rüben (Cabbage and turnips), are combined within the harmonic outline of the theme.

Beat. (1) Unit of measurement of rhythmic pulse of mus. (i.e. waltz has 3 beats to the measure), as indicated in time signature. In [zs] 4:4 time each quarter-note (crotchet) is one beat, but in more complicated signatures much depends on the tempo selected. E.g. in [zs] 1:[zs] 82 time there are 12 beats to a measure if taken very slowly, or else one for each dotted crotchet.

Railway Music. Many comps. have reflected interest in railways and railway engines. Perhaps the earliest is Berlioz's Le chant des chemins de fer, 1846, which exists in 2 versions: as No. 3 of his 6 Feuillets d'album, Op. 19, for v. and pf., and for v. and orch. The cantata version was written for the opening of the Fr. Northern Railway and was perf. at Lille on 14 June, 1846. The text was by Jules Janin. Other works worthy of note are J. Strauss's Excursion Train Polka, Honegger's Pacific 231, A. Butterworth's Trains in the Distance, Lumbye's Copenhagen Steam Railway Galop, and Villa-Lobos's Little Train of the Caipira. Britten's song Midnight on the Great Western, from Winter Words, Op. 52, is also memorable. The first piece of musique concrète by Schaeffer in 1948 was an assemblage of railway noises called Étude aux chemins de fer. There are also Vivian Ellis's light orch. piece Coronation Scot, commemorating the L.M.S. 1937 'crack' engine, and the delightful Amer. song Chattanooga Choo-Choo by Gordon and Warren. Possibly the film mus. by Britten for Night Mail should also count as railway mus.

Rakhmaninov, Sergey (Vasilyevich) (b Semyonovo, Starorussky, 1873; d Beverly Hills, Calif., 1943). Russ. composer, pianist, and cond. Entered St Petersburg Cons. 1882; studied pf. with Nikolay Zverev in Moscow, 1885, and began to compose in 1886. Entered Ziloti's pf. class at Moscow Cons. 1888, also studying counterpoint with Taneyev and harmony with Arensky. In 1890 he began to compose his first pf. conc., completing it a year later. In the summer of 1892 he wrote the Prelude in C# minor which became his most celebrated comp. His first opera Aleko was staged at the Bolshoy, Moscow, in 1893 and praised by Tchaikovsky. It was a success, unlike his first Sym. which received a disastrous perf. under Glazunov in St Petersburg in 1897. Rakhmaninov withdrew the work, which was never again played in his lifetime. In 1897--8 he became 2nd cond. of the Moscow Private Russian Opera Co., forming a lifelong friendship with the co.'s then unknown bass Chaliapin. His first professional visit abroad was to London in 1899, where he played 'the' Prelude and cond. his orch. fantasy The Rock. At this time he lost faith in his power of comp., but was helped by hypnosis treatment from Dr Nikolay Dahl, also an amateur musician, who had many talks on mus. with his patient. A few months later Rakhmaninov began his 2nd pf. conc., which was a great success at its f.p. and has remained immensely and rightly popular. Thenceforward Rakhmaninov comp. fluently. He worked simultaneously on 2 operas, The Miserly Knight and Francesca da Rimini, both of which he cond. at the Bolshoy where he was cond. 1904--6. Worried by political unrest in Russia, he moved to Dresden in 1906, beginning work on a 2nd Sym., the f.p. of which he cond. on a visit to St Petersburg in 1908.

His first visit to USA followed in 1909, where he was soloist in the f.p. of his 3rd pf. conc. in NY. He returned to live in Russia, conducting several Moscow Phil. concerts in the 1912-13 season and completing his choral sym. The Bells. In 1917 he left Russia for ever and began a new career as int. concert pianist, making America his base. This reduced the time he had for comp. and it was not until 1926 that he completed the 4th pf. conc. he had begun in 1914. The work was played 1927 but was not, and never has been since, a success. After he signed a letter in 1931 attacking the Soviet régime his mus. was banned in Russia until 1933. In 1934 he comp. one of his finest works, the Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini, which was followed in 1936 by the 3rd Sym. In 1938 he was in London to play at Henry Wood's jubilee concert and gave his last London recital in Mar. 1939. He comp. the Symphonic Dances for orch. in 1940. Despite failing health he embarked on an arduous Amer. tour in the winter of 1942--3, giving the proceeds to war relief. After playing in Knoxville, Tennessee, on 15 Feb. he became seriously ill and died on 28 Mar. Rakhmaninov was one of the greatest of pianists, as is proved by his recordings not only of his own concs. but of other composers' mus., incl. sonatas with the violinist Kreisler. The vigour and attention to detail of his cond. are also preserved on records. But it is as a composer that his name will live longest. He was the last of the colourful Russian masters of the late 19th cent., with their characteristic gift for long and broad melodies imbued with a resigned melancholy which is never long absent. His operas have failed to hold the stage, mainly because of defects in their libs., but recordings have enabled their splendid mus. to be appreciated. Three of the 4 pf. concs. are an ineradicable part of the romantic repertory, and the syms., though long overshadowed by the pf. works, have gained esteem and popularity. The songs are at last being recognized as among Russia's best. In his later years his style grew subtler, as can be heard in the Corelli Variations for pf., the Paganini Rhapsody, the last set of songs, and the Symphonic Dances. But his masterpiece is The Bells, in which all his powers are fused and unified. Prin. works:

operas: Aleko (1892); The Miserly Knight (Skupoy rytsar) Op. 24 (1903--5); Francesca da Rimini, Op. 25 (1900, 1904--5); Monna Vanna (1907, one act in pf. score).

Rákóczi March. Hung. march-tune dating from c.1809 by unknown composer (possibly János Bihari, gipsy violinist) and named in honour of Prince Francis Rákóczi, leader of the Hung. revolt against Austria, 1703--11. Liszt played it at recitals in Hungary, where its patriotic assoc. brought it into high popularity. Berlioz arr. it as Marche hongroise, 1846, and added it to his Scenes from Faust when he remodelled it as La Damnation de Faust. Also occurs in Johann Strauss's Zigeunerbaron.

Rameau, Jean-Philippe (b Dijon, 1683; d Paris, 1764). Fr. composer, harpsichordist, and organist. Self-taught in harmony and counterpoint. Visited It. 1701. Organist, Clermont-Ferrand 1702--5, Paris 1705--8, Dijon 1709--14, Lyons 1714--15, and then Clermont-Ferrand again, where he worked on his important Traité de l'harmonie, pubd. in Paris 1722, in which he set out the then novel doctrines of inversions of chords and principles of chord-progression. This was followed by other textbooks on harmony between 1726 and 1752, and by his dissertation on methods of acc. for hpd. and org. (1732). He taught the hpd. in Paris and wrote many works for the instr. In 1730 he came under the patronage of Le Riche de la Pouplinière. In 1733, at the age of 50, his first opera, Hippolyte et Aricie, met with no success, but he persevered and wrote over 20 operas and opera-ballets, incl. Castor et Pollux and Les Indes galantes. These works, though controversial because of their novel use of colourful orchestration, bold harmonies, and use of recit., est. Rameau as Lully's successor in the field of Fr. opera. His champions opposed those of Pergolesi in the Querelle des Bouffons. In 1745 he was appointed chamber mus. composer to the King. Prin. works:

Rasiermesserkwartett (Razor Quartet). Nickname of Haydn's Str. Qt. in F minor, Op. 55, No. 2 (Hob. III:61). The story is that Haydn exclaimed in 1787 when shaving 'I'd give my best quartet for a new razor', and was taken at his word by a visitor, the London mus.-publisher Bland. This qt. was Haydn's side of the bargain.

Raskin, Judith (b NY, 1928; d NY, 1985). Amer. sop. Studied Juilliard Sch. Opera début NBC 1957 as Susanna, NY Met. 1962. Glyndebourne 1963 (Pamina in Die Zauberflöte). Sang with NY City Opera and other Amer. cos. Also concert soloist.

Mozart wrote Exsultate, jubilate for him. Settled in Eng. 1774. Wrote 5 operas for London and 5 for Munich, also chamber mus. and songs. Became singing teacher in London and Bath, pupils incl. Braham, Storace, Kelly, and Elizabeth Billington. Haydn was his guest in 1794.

Ravel, Maurice (Joseph) (b Ciboure, 1875; d Paris, 1937). Fr. composer and pianist. Born in Basque region but spent childhood in Paris. Entered Paris Cons. 1889, studying pf. with Bériot and comp. with Fauré, and remaining for 16 years. By 1895 he had already developed a personal style of comp., but his unconventional harmonies offended academic ears in spite of the classical basis of his work. He competed for the Prix de Rome in 1901, 1902, 1903, and 1905. At the last attempt he was eliminated in the preliminary test. The ensuing outcry led to the resignation of Dubois as dir. of the Cons. He had already written several works now acknowledged as masterpieces, incl. the str. qt., Shéhérazade, and the Miroirs for pf. Though a brilliant orchestrator, several of his works were first written for pf. His outstanding achievement in orch. writing is the ballet Daphnis et Chloé, comp. for Diaghilev and f.p. in 1912. In 1911 his comic 1-act opera L'Heure espagnole had not been a success, but was later welcomed for the brilliant piece it is. After service in the 1914--18 war, Ravel captured the savage flavour of the end of an era in his La Valse. Fragile health in the last 17 years of his life reduced the no. of his comps. but not the quality. To the late years belong his fascinating opera, to a lib. by Colette, L'Enfant et les sortilèges, 2 pf. concs., his popular Boléro (originally a ballet score), chamber works, and the Don Quixote songs. He occasionally cond. his own works, but held no official posts and had very few pupils, though one of them (for 3 months) was Vaughan Williams. Ravel is conveniently classified with Debussy, but their dissimilarities are more striking and significant. He had more respect for classical forms than Debussy and was nearer to the ethos of Saint-Saëns than to that of Massenet. Satie, Chabrier, Strauss, Mussorgsky, the orientalism learned from the 1889 int. Exposition, and jazz were influences on him. Dance rhythms frequently occur in his works. His harmonies, often 'impressionist' in technique, extended the range of tonality by the exploitation of unusual chords and by the use of bitonality. His melodies sometimes have a modal tendency. Repetition, sequences, and variation are preferred to regular development. The charge that he was a miniaturist in his choice of forms can be sustained, but there is nothing small about the invention. That artificiality which led Stravinsky to call him 'a Swiss clock-maker' can also be perceived, but perhaps this is part of the price he paid for the exceptional clarity of his thought and of his scoring. He was one of the great innovators in writing for the pf. Prin. works:

Real. Term used in certain special senses as opposite to tonal, e.g. in fugue real answer is when the answer exactly reproduces the subject (except for a 5th displaced), the fugue being a real fugue. In sequence, if the intervals within a sequence are unaltered, the result is called a real sequence.

Realism. Musically this term is applied to (1) operas where the plot or characters are said to be 'true to life' (verismo) as distinct from remote. (2) The attitude required by Soviet bureaucracy from Russian composers, meaning that their mus. should be optimistic, easily comprehended, and 'of the people'.

Realize. To give full artistic life to mus. left by the composer in a sparse condition, e.g. to fill out the continuo bass line of a 17th- or 18th-cent. comp., to write in ornamentation, to interpret vague directions as to the manner of perf. Thus one speaks of Britten's 'realizations' of Purcell, etc., rather than his 'arrangements', and of Leppard's 'realizations' of Venetian operas compared with 'editions' by Harnoncourt, Glover, etc.

Reaney, Gilbert (b Sheffield, 1924). Eng. musicologist. Studied Sheffield Univ. 1942--3, 1946--52, later at Sorbonne. Taught at Reading and Birmingham Univs. before becoming assoc. prof. (1960) and prof. (1963) at U.C.L.A. Authority on medieval and Renaissance mus. and theory, particularly on Machaut.

Rebec (ribible, rubible). One of the first bowed str. instr., which probably originated in Moslem countries (as rebab or rabab) and was introduced to Europe in 8th cent.

ad. It had rounded back carved out of the solid wood, with flat soundboard added. After 15th cent., no. of str. varied from 1 to 5. In Renaissance there were several sizes and pitches of rebec, e.g. sop., ten., and bass. The ten. and bass were probably played gamba-wise, held between knees. Smaller versions were known as ribecchino (It.) or rubechette (Fr.).

Rebel, Fran;alcois (b Paris, 1701; d Paris, 1775). Fr. composer and violinist, son of Jean-Féry Rebel. Member of Paris Opéra orch. at 13. Music for 18 stage works in collab. with Francoeur 1726--60. Joint cond. Paris Opéra 1733--44, later becoming manager. Superintendent of mus. to Louis XV. Wrote cantatas, etc.

Rebel, Jean-Féry (b Paris, 1666; d Paris, 1747). Fr. composer and violinist. Pupil of Lully. One of the `24 violons du Roi' from 1705. Chamber-composer to king, 1726. Violinist and cond., Paris Opéra. Wrote sonatas and pieces forsolo vn.

Rebikov, Vladimir (Ivanovich) (b Krasnoyarsk, Siberia, 1866; d Yalta, 1920). Russ. composer. Studied Moscow Cons. and Berlin. Early works suggest influence of Tchaikovsky, but soon exploited whole-tone scale, new harmonies, and novel forms, e.g. in his pf. pieces, Mélomimiques, in which mus. and mime are combined. Wrote operas (incl. The Christmas Tree, 1902) and `psychological dramas', orch. works, and many pf. pieces, incl. Rythmodéclamations.

Recapitulation. That section of a comp. in sonata form and its variants in which the themes, or some of them, presented in the exposition are repeated, more or less in their orig. form.

Re cervo, Il (Henze). See König Hirsch.

Rechants, Cinq. 5 pieces by Messiaen for 12-v. ch., one of 3 Messiaen works inspired by Tristan and Isolde legend (the others being Harawi and Turangalîla). Comp. 1949. F.p. Bordeaux 1950.

Récit (Fr.). (1) Short for Recitative. ^(2, not abbreviation). Swell Org.

Recital. Term denoting a mus. perf. by soloists or duettists, e.g. an organ recital, song recital (by 1 or 2 singers), pf. recital, sonata recital. Orig. referred only to singers, but was applied c.1840 to Liszt's concert perfs.

Recitative (It. recitativo). Form of declamatory speech-like singing used especially in opera or oratorio and free in rhythm. Serves for dialogue or narrative (as a means of advancing the plot), whereas the subsequent aria is often static or reflective. In 17th- and 18th-cent. opera, especially opera seria, the distinction between recit. and aria was clear, but with Mozart's much more expressive and inventive use of recitative (as in Don Giovanni), the convention began to break up. Types of recit. are: recitativo accompagnato or stromentato (It., acc. or instr. recit.), introduced c.1663, in which the v. is acc. by instr.; recitativo secco (It., dry recit.), in which the notes and metre of the singing followed the verbal accents, accompanied only by occasional hpd. chords, perhaps with a vc. or other instr. taking the bass line.

Recorder (Fr. flûte à bec; Ger. Blockflöte; It. flauto diretto; Sp. flauta de pico). Woodwind instr. of ancient lineage, made without reed. Forerunner of the fl., but end-blown through a whistle-mouthpiece. In medieval times, the recorder was known under the Lat. name fistula, hence `fipple-flute'. It had 7 finger-holes in front and a thumb-hole behind, and a beak-shaped mouthpiece. The antiquity of the instr. is hard to determine because its playing position is so like that of similar instr. (other whistle types), that contemporary illustrations are of little help. But it has been est. as being in existence in the 12th cent., although the word `recorder' first appeared in a document in 1388. A recorder tutor was pub. in Venice, 1535. By the 15th cent. there were several sizes of recorder. Praetorius lists 8, i.e. great bass, quint bass, bass, ten., alto, 2 sop., sopranino. Thus, recorder consorts were a common feature of Renaissance mus. life. The instr. has been widely revived in the 20th cent. both as an easy instr. for children and as part of the revival in performing early mus. on authentic instr. Some modern composers have written for it e.g. Britten, Arnold Cooke, and Rubbra. The most common size today is the descant (sop.), but there are also sopranino, treble (alto), ten., and bass.

Recte et Retro (Lat.). In the right way and backwards. Another name for the canon cancrizans in which the theme of a canon is perf. normally in counterpoint with itself perf. backwards.

Redowa. Bohemian dance usually in quick ;s3:4 time. It resembles the Polish dance, the Mazurka. See Rejdovac^;ka.

Reed. Sound-producing agent (of thin cane, plastic, or metal) of various mouth-blown wind instr., such as ob. and harmonica, certain org. pipes, etc. A reed which vibrates against an air slot is a Beating Reed; one which vibrates through such a slot (i.e. from one side to the other) is a Free Reed. Reeds may be either single, as in cl. family, or double (in the latter the two halves of the mouthpiece itself being pieces of reed vibrating against each other, see Oboe). On an org., the reed stop controls pipes which have reeds.

Reed-Cap Instruments. From the late 15th cent. some woodwind instr. were made with a reed-cap which kept the reed from direct contact with the player's lips. The player blew through a slit in the top of the capto activate the reed. Most reed-cap instr. cannot overblow and have a restricted compass.

Reed-Organ. Name for kbd. instr. using free-beating reeds and no pipe, as the harmonium and the American org. Also for accordion and harmonica. See also Regal.

Intendant, Hamburg Opera 1945--56, making it leading Ger. co. of its day and staged such 20th cent. operas as Peter Grimes, Wozzeck, Lulu, and The Rake's Progress. Artistic counsellor and head of prod., Glyndebourne 1959--67. Guest producer CG, NY Met., and other leading opera houses.

Rè Pastore, Il (The Shepherd King). Dramma per musica in 2 acts (K208) by Mozart to lib. by Metastasio. Prod. Salzburg 1775, London 1954. Lib. also used by Hasse, Gluck, and several others.

Repeat Marks (for passages). Or instead of the '1' there may be used the expression '1[fy175][cf10]ma[fy75,1] Volta', or 'Prima Volta', or '1st Time'. Instead of the '2' there may be used the expression '2[fy175][cf10]da[fy75,1] Volta', or 'Seconda Volta', or '2nd Time'. When a return to the opening of the piece, or of some section of it, is indicated but only a part is to be repeated and then the piece brought to an end, the word Fine (end) shows where to stop. For instance, a Minuet is often followed by another Minuet called Trio, after which the first Minuet is to be repeated and then an end to be made. In this case the word 'Fine' is placed at the end of the first Minuet to indicate that this is the place to conclude when performing the repetition. Repeat Marks (fornotes). [In2] (a) (b) (c) (d) There is a 'catch' in (c) and (d), the convention not being quite logical. In (c) (3 examples are given) the time-value to be filled is that of one of the notes shown (in this case half-note); in (d) the time-value to be filled is that of both of the notes shown (in this case eighth notes). Note. If Tremolo (or Trem.) is added to any of the above or similar signs the notes concerned should be repeated very rapidly and without any attention to the exact number of repetitions attained during the time-value available.

Répétiteur (Fr.; It. maestro collaboratore). Rehearser. Member of mus. staff of opera house who coaches singers in their roles and also sometimes acts as chorusmaster, and prompter in perfs. Word is generally used in Eng., otherwise 'coach'. Many distinguished operaconds. have learned their craft as rédépteurs. 'Repet' is orch. players' term for the inside 1st vn. next to the leader.

Répétition (Fr.). Repetition, i.e. Rehearsal. The répétition générale is final dress rehearsal.

Repiano. See Ripieno.

Reports, rapports (from Fr. rapporter, to carry back). In 17th-cent. mus. parlance, 'report' was equivalent of 'imitation'. It meant the re-introduction, by one v. or part, of a melodic phrase just heard from another. In the Scottish Psalter of 1635 some tunes are [gcheaded 'Heere are some Psalms in Reports'. These are subjected to motet or anthem-like treatment.

Reprise (Fr.). Repeat. In comp., a return to the first section after an intervening and contrasting section. In the works of Rameau, Couperin, etc., the term means a short refrain at the end of a movement and intended to be repeated.

Reproducing Piano. See Pianola.

Requiem. The R. C. Mass for the Dead (Lat. Missa pro defunctis) beginning 'Requiem aeternam' (Rest eternal). Text follows that of normal Mass but with Gloria and Credo omitted and Dies Irae added. There are many mus. settings, from the traditional plainsong to elaborate versions more suitable for concert perf. than for liturgical use, e.g. those by Berlioz and Verdi. Other notable settings are by Palestrina, Mozart (incomplete), Fauré, and Dvořák. A typical disposition of the text in these large settings is: 1. Requiem aeternam; Kyrie eleison; 2. Dies Irae (Day of Wrath) divided into Tuba mirum (Hark, the trumpet), Liber scriptus (A book is written), Quid sum miser (How wretched am I), Rex tremenda (King of glory), Recordare (Remember), Ingemisco (Sadly groaning), Confutatis (From the accursed), Lacrimosa (Lamentation); 3. Domine Jesu Christe (Lord Jesus Christ); 4. Sanctus (Holy); 5. Agnus Dei (Lamb of God); 6. Lux aeterna (Eternal light); 7. Libera me (Deliver me). This is Verdi's scheme: there are several variations of it. Not all Requiem settings follow the Lat. text. Brahms's Ein Deutsches Requiem uses texts from the Ger. Bible. Delius's Requiem is a setting of a text by H. Simon and was described as 'pagan'. Hindemith's setting of Whitman's poem 'When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd' is of the character of a Requiem. Britten's War Requiem uses the Lat. Mass interspersed with poems by Wilfred Owen. Geoffrey Burgon's Requiem also uses several sources. The term is occasionally used in other contexts as in Britten's Sinfonia da Requiem for orch.

Rescue opera. Type of opera, or opéra comique, popular in Fr. after the Revolution, in which the hero or heroine is saved from some dire fate by human heroism. The most famous rescue opera is Beethoven's Fidelio (1805), based on a real-life incident previously used as libretto by Gaveaux in 1798 (Léonore, ou l'amour conjugal). Resnik, Regina (b NY, 1922). Amer. mez. Studied NY with Rosalie Miller. Concert début as sop. Brooklyn Acad. of Mus. 1942, opera début 1942 NY (Lady Macbeth). NY City Opera 1944, joined Met. 1944. Guest appearances San Francisco, Chicago, and Bayreuth (Sieglinde 1953). Changed to mez., 1955. CG début 1957 (Carmen). Interpreter of Amneris, Carmen, and Klytemnestra. Début as opera dir., Hamburg 1971 (Carmen).

Resolution. The satisfactory following of a discordant chord (or of the discordant note in such a chord) with a concord or less acute discord.

Resoluto, risoluto (It.). Resolute.

Resonance. (1) Sympathetic vibration of bodies capable of producing sounds as soon as a pitch similar to that of the body or one of its overtones is heard. (2) The rebound of vibration-waves from a solid structure such as walls of a hall or church. (3) Transmission of vibrations from the str. of a str. instr. to a sounding-board.

Respighi, Ottorino (b Bologna, 1879; d Rome, 1936). It. composer, cond., str.-player, pianist, and teacher. Studied vn. and comp. in Bologna, 1891--1901. Went to St Petersburg 1900 as first va. in opera orch. and from 1901 studied with Rimsky-Korsakov, then in Berlin with Bruch, 1902. From 1903 to 1908 pursued career as violinist and violist and was pianist at Berlin singing-sch. 1908--9. Prof. of comp. at Liceo di S. Cecilia, Rome, 1913; dir. 1923--5. His mus., though based on classical forms, was influenced by the brighter colours of Rimsky-Korsakov and Strauss, and his symphonic poems are notable for their brilliant and luscious scoring. In his operas he reacted against Puccinian 'realism', but they are more impressive orchestrally than vocally. Some of his most tender and exquisite work is to be found in his shorter vocal pieces. Prin. works:

operas: Re Enzo (1905); Semirama (1910); Belfagor (1921--2); La campana sommersa (The Sunken Bell) (1923--7); Maria Egiziaca (1929--32); La Fiamma (1930--3); Lucrezia (1935).

orch: Notturno (1905); Sinfonia drammatica (1913--14); Fountains of Rome (Fontane di Roma) (1914--16); Old Airs and Dances for Lute, transcr. for orch., 1st series (1917), 2nd series (1924); Pines of Rome (Pini di Roma) (1923--4); Rossiniana (from Rossini pf. pieces) (1925); Vetrare di Chiesa (Church Windows), 4 symphonic impressions (1925); Trittico Botticelliano (1927); The Birds (Gli uccelli) (1927); Feste Romane (Roman Festivals) (1928).

concertos etc.: Pf. conc. (1902); Concerto in the Old Style, vn. (1908); Concerto Gregoriano, vn. (1921); Adagio con variazioni, vc. (1920); conc. for ob., hn., vn., db., pf., and str. (1933).

voice and orch: Aretusa, mez. and orch. (1911); La primavera, soloists, ch., and orch. (1918--9); Il Tramonto, v. and str. qt. (1914); Deità silvane, sop. and pf. (1917), high v. and

transcriptions: Monteverdi: Orfeo, (1935); Lamento d'Arianna, (1908); Marcello: Didone, cantata, (1935); Rossini: Soirées musicales for ballet La Boutique fantasque, (1919); J. S. Bach: Prelude and Fugue in D, for orch. (1930); 3 Organ Chorals, for orch. (1931); Passacaglia in C minor, for orch. (1934); Vitali: Chaconne, for vn., str., org. (1909).

Responses. In Anglican church, the replies of the choir (or congregation) to the versicles of the priest. Usually in plainsong. Tallis, Byrd, Gibbons, etc. wrote superb harmonized versions.

Responsorio. Type of motet in which a soloist and the choir sing responsively---in Eng. a variety of 'Solo Anthem'.

Rest. (1) Musical silence. (2) Notation of absence of sound in performer's part for a length of time corresponding to a given number of beats or measures, e.g. 4 measures' rest or an 8th-note rest. Notation of rests is as shown: [ol51] [xn^The [xf;Yf]rf rest hangs down; the [xf;Yg]rf rest remains on the surface. (Imagine the rest of greater value is the heavier.) The [xf;Ya]rf rest ([xf;Ym]rf) turns to the right (Mnemonic: cRotchet---Right; or quarter Note---Right); the [xf;Yb]rf rest ([xf;Yn]rf) turns to the left. In addition to the above there is the Double-note rest, occupying the whole space between two lines---_^. Also, the Whole-note rest is used as a whole-measure rest, irrespective of the actual time-value of the measure. [bn^A silence of several measures is often indicated thus (or in some similar way): [ol27] [xn^Rests can be dotted and doubly dotted, as notes are, and with the same effect: this, however, is less commonly done. See also Note values.

Restez (Fr.). Remain, i.e. linger on a note rather than hurry off it; in str. mus., remain in the same position for the duration of a passage.

Resultant Bass.. Org. stop; same as Quint.

Resultant Tone. When 2 loud notes are heard together they produce a 3rd sound, the resultant tone, corresponding to the difference between the 2 vibration nos.: this (low in pitch) is called a 'difference tone'. They also produce a 4th sound, high and faint, corresponding to the sum of the 2 vibration numbers. This is a 'summation tone'.

Resurrection Symphony. Sub-title of Mahler's Sym. No 2 in C minor (1888--94, rev. 1910) because finale is setting for sop. and alto soloists, ch., and orch. of the 'Resurrection' (Aufersteh'n) chorale by Klopstock (1724--1803).

Retablo de Maese Pedro, El (Falla). See Master Peter's Puppet Show.

Retardando (It.). Same as Ritardando.

Retardation. In harmony, the same as suspension, but with the discord resolved by rising a degree.

Retenant; retenu (Fr.). Holding back; held back (immediately, like ritenuto, not gradually, like rallentando). [xm[xm0]

[ts1][fy65][bm2][cc27,3,8,8][dt5,p6g,5,p6g,5,p6g,5,p6g,5][fy75,1][ih1n][bt;Yw means return to ;Yw or, if that does not occur, to the beginning of the piece. [ntD.C. or Da Capo, literally 'From the head', i.e. return to the beginning. [ntD.S. or Dal Segno, i.e. from the sign, meaning the return to the mark:[cp10][cb2]S[cb0][cp8]:. [ntA.S. (rare) or Al Segno, i.e. to the sign. Usually the expression is D.C. al Segno e poi la Coda, i.e. 'From the beginning to the sign and then the Coda'. [ntBis means perform the passage twice.

[xm4] To avoid needless writing or engraving (especially in orchestral mus.) the repetition of a short passage is often indicated as below: [bn[ol36] or[qc[ol16] [xn^Sometimes when a section is marked to be repeated it ends in a way suitable for the return to the beginning, and, having been repeated, ends in a way suitable to proceed to the next section (or to close the whole composition if nothing more follows). Rethberg (orig. Sättler), Elisabeth (orig. Lisbeth) (b Schwarzenburg, 1894; d NY, 1976). Ger.-born sop. (later Amer. citizen). Studied Dresden Cons. (pf., later turned to singing). Début Dresden 1915 in Zigeunerbaron. Début NY Met. 1922, staying with co. until 1942, CG 1925, 1934--9. Created title-role in Strauss's Die ägyptische Helena, Dresden 1928. A notable Aida, Marschallin, Elsa, and Sieglinde. Many concert appearances. Retired 1942.

Réti, Rudolph (b U; Akzice, Serbia, 1885; d Montclair, NJ, 1957). Serbian-born musicologist, pianist, and composer. Studied Vienna Cons. One of founders of I.S.C.M., Salzburg, 1922. Settled in USA 1938. Wrote opera, orch. mus., and other pieces, but best known for books The Thematic Process in Music (NY, 1951) and Tonality, Atonality, Pantonality (NY, 1958). Gave f.p. of Schoenberg's 3 Piano Pieces, Op. 11, in 1911.

Return of Lemminkäinen (Sibelius). See Lemminkäinen Legends.

Reubke, Julius (b Hausneindorf, 1834; d Pillnitz, 1858). Ger. pianist and composer, son of org.-builder Adolf Reubke (1805--75). Pupil of Liszt. Wrote org. sonata on Psalm 94, pf. sonata, and pf. solos.

Reusner, Esajas (b Löwenberg, Silesia, 1636; d Cölln-Spree, 1679). Ger. lutenist and composer. Court lutenist in various Ger. towns. Wrote dance suites and many songs.

Reutter, Hermann (b Stuttgart, 1900). Ger. composer and pianist. Studied privately 1907--20, Munich Acad. of Mus. 1920--3. Began career as pf. accompanist to Sigrid Onegin and Karl Erb. Taught comp. Stuttgart 1932--6, dir., Berlin Hochschule 1936--45, prof. of comp. Stuttgart Acad. 1952--6, dir. 1956--66, prof. of mus., Munich Acad. from 1966. Prolific composer, especially of Lieder (over 200), in which expressive vocal line is supported by elaborate pf. part. Friend of Hindemith. Comp. several operas, incl. Saul (1928, rev. 1947), Der verlorene Sohn (The Prodigal Son) (1929), Doktor Johannes Faust (1935, rev. 1955), Odysseus (1942), Don Juan und Faust (1950), The Bridge of San Luis Rey (1953), The Death of Empedocles (1965); ballets; sym. for str. (1960); choral works, incl. Pandora (text by Goethe); 4 pf. concs.; and instr. works.

Reveille (from Fr. réveil, wakening). The military signal beginning the day (in the Brit. army pronounced 'revelly' or 'revally').

Revelation and Fall. Work for sop. and 16 instr. by Maxwell Davies to text from Georg Trakl's Offenbarung und Untergang. Comp. 1965. F.p. London 1968 (Mary Thomas, mez.) cond. composer.

Revenge, The Choral ballad, setting of Tennyson's poem, by Stanford, Op. 24, f.p. Leeds Fest. 1886.

'Revolutionary' Study. Nickname for Chopin's pf. Étude in C minor, Op. 10, No. 12 (1831), supposedly because it expressed his patriotic fury on hearing that Warsaw had been captured by the Russians; however, the story is unsupported by evidence.

Revue. Form of entertainment comprising a series of scenes, without a plot, and sketches, dances, songs, and ballet. Evolved in Fr. in early 19th cent. as purveyor of satire, later becoming more spectacular and including tableaux vivants. In 20th cent. became more sophisticated, with personalites like Mistinguett (1873--1956), Maurice Chevalier (1888--1971), and Josephine Baker (1906--75), whose erotic dancing in a 1925 revue caused a scandal. In Brit., revue did not really take root until early in 20th cent. The producer and impresario C. B. Cochran imported Fr. artists, notably Alice Delysia. His revues, with those of André Charlot, dominated the London stage in the 1920s. Noël Coward and Ivor Novello wrote songs for Charlot and Cochran, and Coward later wrote his own revues (e.g. Tonight at 8.30). Brit. revue stars incl. Gertrude Lawrence, Beatrice Lillie, Jessie Matthews, Jack Buchanan, and Leslie Henson. Berners comp. his ballet Luna Park for Cochran's 1930 revue and Walton his The First Shoot for Cochran's Follow the Sun (1935--6). 'Intimate' revues by Herbert and Eleanor Farjeon brought fame to Hermione Baddeley and Hermione Gingold. Later developments of revue were the shows which featured Michael Flanders and Donald Swann (At the Drop of a Hat, etc.) and the wittily satirical Beyond the Fringe (1961). In the USA, revue developed from vaudeville. Its most successful form was in the Follies produced by Florenz Ziegfeld annually from 1907 until the mid-1920s.

Revueltas, Silvestre (b Santiago Papasquiaro, 1899; d Mexico City, 1940). Mexican composer and violinist. Studied in Mexico then at Chicago Mus. Coll. 1918--20 and 1922--4. Free-lance violinist and cond. until 1928 when Chávez appointed him assoc. cond. of Mexico S.O., a post he held until 1935. Taught vn. and chamber mus. at Mexico Nat. Cons. Went to Sp. for Civil War. Picturesque and colourful comps., influenced by but not directly quoting Mexican folk-mus. Used atonalism from 1930. Works incl. Esquinas (1930), Colorines (1932), Janitzio (1933), Sensemayá (1938) symphonic poems; 8 x Radio, chamber orch. (1933); Planos, 'geometric dance', chamber orch. (1934); Homenaje a García-Lorca, chamber orch. (1935--6); 3 str. qts., songs, and film mus.

Reyer, Ernest (orig. Rey, Louis Etienne) (b Marseilles, 1823; d Le Levandou, 1909). Fr. composer and critic. Studied in Marseilles and continued to compose while civil servant in Algiers. Went to Paris 1848, taking up mus. as career. His early operas were praised by Berlioz and his 2-act Érostrate was perf. at Baden-Baden at same time as Béatrice et Bénédict (1862). Planned opera on Nibelungen legends, but postponed project because of work as critic. Championed Berlioz, Wagner, Bizet, Franck, etc. Eventually the Nibelung opera appeared, Sigurd (Brussels and CG 1884, Paris 1885). This was followed by Salammbo, based on Flaubert's novel (Brussels 1890, Paris 1892, NY Met. 1901). Also wrote choral works and songs.

Reynish, Timothy (John) (b Axbridge, 1938). Eng. cond. and hn.-player. Studied Cambridge Univ. and privately with Aubrey Brain and Sir Adrian Boult. Prin. hn. with Northern Sinfonia, SW, and CBSO, 1959--71. Guest cond. leading Brit. orchs. 3rd prize Mitropoulos competition, NY, 1971. On staff RNCM.

Reynolds, Anna (b Canterbury, ?1931). Eng. mez. Studied RAM. Opera début at Parma 1960. Has sung at La Scala, Milan, Bayreuth (1970--6), NY Met., CG, etc., and in concert works. Glyndebourne 1962 (Geneviève in Pelléas).

Reznicek, Emil Nikolaus von (b Vienna, 1860; d Berlin, 1945). Austrian composer and cond. Studied Leipzig Cons. Cond. of various military bands and th. orchs. Court cond. Mannheim 1896--9. Settled in Berlin 1902, founding series of orch. concerts and teaching at Klindworth-Scharwenka Cons. from 1906. Mus. dir. Warsaw Phil. and Imperial Opera 1907--9. Returned to Berlin. Taught at Hochschule from 1920. Visited London 1907 and cond. f.p. of Harnham Down by Vaughan Williams. Wrote several operas incl. Donna Diana (1894, rev. 1908, 1933) and Till Eulenspiegel (1902), requiem, 4 syms., and other orch. works, 3 str. qts., pf. pieces.

rf, rfz. = Rinforzando, R.H. Right Hand.

Rhapsody. Strictly, from the ancient Gr. usage, the recitation of parts of an epic poem. In mus. the term has come to mean a comp. in one continuous movement, often based on popular, nat., or folk melodies. Thus Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies, Stanford's Irish Rhapsodies, Vaughan Williams's Norfolk Rhapsody. Delius's Brigg Fair, variations on an Eng. folk-song, is subtitled An English Rhapsody, and Rakhmaninov's variations on a caprice by Paganini are called Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini. Brahms used the term for works for solo pf. and for his Alto Rhapsody, a setting for v., male ch., and orch. of verses by Goethe. Gershwin used the term for his Rhapsody in Blue and Chabrier's Espana is a Sp. rhapsody.

Rhapsody in Blue. Work for pf. and orch. by Gershwin, among first to combine jazz with symphonic procedures. Orch. by Grofé. F.p. NY 12 Feb. 1924, Gershwin (pf.) and Paul Whiteman's Orch.

Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini. Work for pf. and orch. by Rakhmaninov, Op. 43, comp. and f.p. 1934 (Baltimore), f.p. in Eng., Manchester 1935. Contains 24 variations on Paganini's violin Caprice No. 2 in A minor.

Rheinberger, Josef (Gabriel) (b Vaduz, Liechtenstein, 1839; d Munich, 1901). Ger. organist, pianist, cond., and composer. Organist at Vaduz church at age 7. Studied Munich Cons. Taught at Munich Cons. 1859--65 and 1867--1901. Organist, St Michael's, Munich, 1860--6, choral cond. in Munich and coach at court opera. Prolific composer of operas, syms., chamber mus., and choral works but remembered almost exclusively through his elaborate and challenging organ comps. which incl. 2 concs., 20 sonatas, 22 trios, 12 Meditations, 24 fuguettes, and 36 solo pieces.

Rheingold, Das (The Rhine Gold). Prol. in 1 act by Wagner, to his own lib., to his tetralogy Der Ring des Nibelungen. Comp. 1853--4. Prod. separately Munich 1869, London 1882, NY Met. 1889; first prod. as part of The Ring, Bayreuth 1876. 'Rhenish' Symphony. Name given to Schumann's Sym. No. 3 in Eb major (No. 4 in order of comp.), comp. 1850, f.p. 1851. The 4th of its 5 movements was inspired by the installation of a cardinal at Cologne on the Rhine.

Rhosymedre (Lovely). Hymn-tune by J. D. Edwards (1805--85), on which Vaughan Williams based the 2nd of his 3 Preludes for org., founded on Welsh hymn-tunes, 1920.

Rhythm (in the full sense of the word) covers everything pertaining to the time aspect of mus. as distinct from the aspect of pitch, i.e. it incl. the effects of beats, accents, measures, grouping of notes into beats, grouping of beats into measures, grouping of measures into phrases, etc. When all these factors are judiciously treated by the performer (with due regularity yet with artistic purpose---an effect of forward movement---and not mere machine-like accuracy) we feel and say that the performer possesses 'a sense of rhythm'. There may be 'free' or 'strict' rhythm. The human ear seems to demand the perceptible presence of a unit of time (the beat); even in the 'Free Rhythm' of Plainsong or of Recitative this can be felt, though in such mus. the grouping into measures is not present. Apart from such mus. as that just mentioned it will be found that the beats fall into regular groups of 2s or 3s, or of combinations of these (as a group of 4 made up of 2; Pl2, or a group of 6 made up of 3; Pl3). Such groups or combinations of groups are indicated in our notation by the drawing of bar-lines at regular intervals, so dividing the mus. into measures (or 'bars'). The measures, in their turn, can be felt to build up into larger groups, or phrases (4 measures to a phrase being a very common but not invariable combination; cf. Phrase). It is chiefly accent that defines these groupings, e.g. taking the larger groupings, a 4-measure phrase is normally accentuated something like this: [ol30] and if the beats are in any part of the music subdivided into what we may call shorter beat-units sub-accentuations are felt, as [ol24]. Where the measures have 3 beats an accented note is followed by 2 unaccented: [ol24] and similarly in a 3-measure phrase the first measure will be more heavily accentuated than the 2 following measures [ol30]. It will be seen, then, that what we may call the official beat-unit of a composition is a convention, there being often present smaller units and always present larger units, both of which may be considered beats. Another example of Free Rhythm may be seen in much of the choralmus. of the polyphonic period (madrigals, motets, etc.): these may be said (in literary terms) to be in 'prose rhythm', as opposed to the 'verse rhythm' of most tunes for marching and dancing. Just as the traditional conception of tonality dissolved at the beginning of the 20th cent., so the organization of rhythm became more elaborate, irregular, and surprising. It can be divided into 2 categories (1) Metrical, with irregular groups of short units, (2) Non-metrical, where there is no perceptible unit of measurement and no 'traditional' tempo. Metrical rhythms predominated at the start of the century, but the different uses possible are illustrated by the contrast between Schoenberg's works c.1908--15, where constantly changing tempi and freer use of changing time signatures make the rhythmic structure highly complex, and Stravinsky's of the same period, where there are similar constant changes of time signature but the irregularities are much more clearly defined. Syncopation has also invaded all types of mus. Although syncopated rhythm can be found in the earliest music, in the 20th cent. it has stemmed mainly from jazz. Non-metrical rhythm can be discerned in Wagner and its possibilities were outlined by Busoni, who wrote of the tense silence between movements being in itself mus. and more 'elastic' than sound. Messiaen in the late 1930s developed 'ametrical' rhythm and described in a treatise (1944) that the techniques he used were 'augmented or diminished rhythms', 'retrograde' rhythms, and 'polyrhythm'. Since 1940 composers such as Babbitt, Boulez, and Messiaen have developed these tendencies, though some find the results 'static' rather than conveying the sense of impetus which is the function of rhythm. Further revolutionary attitudes to rhythm have developed since the 1950s, with the increasing use of indeterminacy. Composers such as Cage, Stockhausen, Carter, and Xenakis have written works which leave the choice of duration and tempo to the performer. With the introduction of elec. and scientific techniques into comp., there seems no limit to the expansion and intricacy of rhythmic procedures in mus.

Rhythmicon. Kbd.perc. instr. using photo-electric cell and developed by Theremin and the Amer. composer Cowell in 1931 in order to demonstrate the combination of complex rhythms. Cowell wrote his Rhythmicana for it.

Ribile or Rubible. The rebec.

Ricci, Federico (b Naples, 1809; d Conegliano, 1877). It. composer. Studied Naples Cons. under Bellini and Zingarelli. Comp. 19 operas, some in collab. with his brother Luigi Ricci. Ambition to be sailor; entered Corps of Naval Cadets 1856 in St Petersburg, where he had pf. lessons and attended opera and concerts. Nationalist works of Glinka deeply impressed him and he met and was influenced by Balakirev. Wrote part of a sym., though ignorant of names of chords and of rules of part-writing. Away at sea 1862--5. Completed sym. 1865, first of importance by Russ. composer. In 1865--8 wrote Sadko and Antar, both later rev. In 1869 was entrusted with completion of Dargomyzhsky's opera The Stone Guest and in 1872 completed his own opera The Maid of Pskov. In 1871, while still a naval lieutenant and still unlearned in harmony and counterpoint, was appointed prof. of practical comp. and instrumentation, St Petersburg Cons. Taught himself in secret. Inspector of Naval Bands, 1873--84. For several years as part of his self-education prod. 'academic' comps. incl. str. qt., pf. quintet, pf. fugues, etc. His editing of 100 Russian Folk-Songs, 1876--7, led him to a new, more attractive phase in his own works, incl. the operas May Night and Snegurochka (The Snow Maiden). From 1874--81 was dir. of the Free School of Mus. After 1882 much occupied with administration, cond., and rev. and orchestration of Khovanshchina and other works by Mussorgsky. When Borodin died in 1887, completion and orch. of Prince Igor was undertaken by Rimsky-Korsakov and his pupil Glazunov. He interrupted this to write 2 of his most colourful works, the Spanish Caprice and Sheherazade. Thereafter, influenced by the first Russ. perfs. in 1888--9 of Wagner's Ring, devoted himself to opera. For a time, neurasthenic illness robbed him of the will to work, but he resumed creative work in the 1890s and in 1896 made his version of Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov which, though it is now partly discredited, preserved this opera until scholars restored the composer's orig. In 1905, having shown sympathy with revolutionary students, was temporarily removed from his professorship at St Petersburg Cons. and a 2-month ban imposed on perf. of his works. This clash with authority is reflected in his last and satirical opera, The Golden Cockerel, which was banned by the govt. and not prod. until after his death. In 1906, rev. Boris Godunov, and in 1907 cond. in Paris at Diaghilev's concerts of Russ. mus. Less talented than his colleagues in the nationalist school, Rimsky-Korsakov excelled them all in the art of clear and colourful orchestration, and to us today his mus. seems to epitomize the brilliance and pageantry of Tsarist Russia. Lately the splendour of his operas has been re-discovered. His influence on his most distinguished pupil, Stravinsky, can be discerned above all in The Firebird. Wrote textbooks on harmony and orchestration, also autobiography. Prin. comps.:

Roman Carnival, The (Berlioz). See Carnaval Romain, Le.

Romance (It. Romanza, Ger. Romanze). Title with no strict formal application---composers use it as they fancy, vocally or instrumentally. Generally it implies a specially personal or tender quality. Mozart called the slow movement of his pf. conc. No. 20 in D minor (K466) a 'Romance'. Schumann wrote Drei Romanzen. Vaughan Williams used the term several times: his The Lark Ascending for vn. and orch. is a 'Romance' (1914), he wrote a Romance for harmonica, str., and pf. (1951), and the slow movement of the 5th Sym. (1943) is entitled Romanza. Elgar wrote a Romance for bn. and the 13th 'Enigma' var. is Romanza.

Romanesca (It.), Romanesque (Fr.). (1) Probably a kind of galliard danced in the Romagna. (2) A certain melody much used in the 17th cent. as a ground bass. (3) A type of song (e.g. by Monteverdi).

Romanian Rhapsodies. 2 works for orch., No. 1 in A and No. 2 in D, by Enescu, Op. 11. Romantic(ism). Term used to describe literature, written mainly in the 2 decades 1830--1850, and applied to mus. written in the period c.1830 to c.1900. It is a vague term, for there are 'romantic' elements in all mus. of all ages. However, the composers generally classified as Romantic are of the period of Weber, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, Liszt, Berlioz, Wagner, etc., in whose mus. emotional and picturesque expression appeared to be more important than formal or structural considerations. Thus Romanticism became the antithesis of Classicism. In literature the works of Byron, Scott, Wordsworth, Goethe, Hugo, Gautier, and Balzac were the heart of the Romantic movement and composers such as Berlioz and Liszt were particularly influenced by Byron and Scott. The supernatural element in Romantic literature is reflected musically in works such as Weber's Der Freischütz, and the Witches' Sabbath movement of Berlioz's Symphonie fantastique. However, Chopin, an essentially Romantic composer, was not influenced by literary models; and many movements in works by 'Classical' composers such as Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and others, have Romantic leanings. As in so many branches of mus., distinctions between one category and another are blurred, thus nationalism, impressionism, and post-romanticism all impinge upon Romanticism.

'Romantic' Symphony. (1) Bruckner's sub-title for his Sym. No. 4 in Eb major (1874, rev. 1878, 1879--80, 1881, 1886). (2) Sub-title of Sym. No. 2 by Howard Hanson (1930).

Rossini, GioachinoAntonio (b Pesaro, 1792; d Paris, 1868). It. composer, son of town trumpeter and a singer. As child, apprenticed to blacksmith, sang in churches, and played hpd. in ths. Entered Bologna Acad. 1806 and while a student wrote opera Demetrio e Polibio. In 1810 Venetian impresario commissioned him to write comic opera (La cambiale di matrimonia), and in 1812 his La pietra del paragone was produced at the Scala, Milan. 2 operas prod. in Venice, 1813, est. his reputation outside It.--Tancredi, an opera seria, and L'Italiana in Algeri, an opera buffa. In 1814 was engaged as mus. dir. of both Neapolitan opera houses and for San Carlo wrote Elisabetta, Regina d'Inghilterra, in which he replaced recitativo secco with recits. acc. by str. Other operas for Naples were Otello and Il barbiere di Siviglia, a failure at first but soon to be hailed as an outstanding opera buffa. These were followed by La Cenerentola, La gazza ladra, and Mosè in Egitto. In 1822 married sop. Isabella Colbran, who had created several of his sop. roles, incl. in 1823 Semiramide, the last opera of his It. cycle. In 1822 Rossini visited Vienna, where he met Beethoven; this was followed by a trip to London. In 1824 settled in Paris as dir. of the Théâtre Italien, and wrote 3 operas for Paris, incl. Guillaume Tell (1829). Appointed composer to King Charles X in 1825 and after success of Tell was commissioned by Govt. to write 5 operas in 10 years. But the 1830 revolution dethroned Charles, and the new govt. set aside the commissions. Rossini left Paris for Italy in 1836 and for the next 19 years composed only three religious works and some occasional pieces. The likely reason is his prolonged neurasthenic ill-health which followed the intensive work on Guillaume Tell. In Bologna became hon. pres. of the Liceo Musicale and reformed its teaching methods, but left the town in 1848. In 1855 he and his 2nd wife settled in Paris where, for the remaining 13 years of his life, Rossini was the centre of artistic and intellectual life. He also began to compose again, the Petite Messe solennelle in 1863 and the 150-odd piano pieces, songs, and ensembles which he called Péchés de vieillesse (Sins of Old Age) (1857--68). Many of these were first perf. at the Rossinis' 'Samedi Soirs'. He was buried in Paris (at his funeral Beethoven's Funeral March from Op. 26 was played by an ens. of instr. invented by Adolphe Sax and many of the greatest singers of the day were soloists, incl. Patti and Nilsson). In 1887 he was reinterred in Florence. Rossini's comic operas have perpetuated his name. Their wit, speed, and grace, their bubbling fun and entirely appropriate orchestration, are perennially fresh. Several of them were written within the space of a fortnight: although there is nothing slipshod about them, the impression of spontaneity remains. Nevertheless his serious works, Guillaume Tell, Tancredi, and Semiramide, contain superb mus., and although Otello has yielded to Verdi's masterpiece, it is still worth hearing. His 2 late religiousworks are masterpieces, and the sparkling str. sonatas (str. qts.) of his youth testify to his grounding in the classics of Haydn and Mozart. Prin. works:

Mus. dir. and composer for Korda films 1936--42. Emigrated to USA 1940. Comp. for M.G.M. 1948--62. Taught at Univ. of S. Calif., 1945--65. Influenced by folk mus. His film mus. is rich and the essence of 'Hollywood'; his other works combine dissonance and strong rhythms. Prin. comps. are Concerto for Strings, pf. conc., vn.conc., vc. conc., str. qt., Sinfonia Concertante for vn., vc., and orch., pf. quintet, str. trio, pf. sonata, motet The Vanities of Life, etc. Film scores incl. Knight Without Armour (1937), The Thief of Bagdad (1940), The Jungle Book (1942), Double Indemnity (1944), The Lost Weekend (1945), Spellbound (1945), Double Life (1948), and Ben Hur (1959).

Rubato, or Tempo rubato (It.). Robbed time. A feature of perf. in which strict time is for a while disregarded---what is 'robbed' from some note or notes being 'paid back' later. When this is done with genuine artistry and instinctive mus. sensibility, the effect is to impart an admirable sense of freedom and spontaneity. Done badly, rubato merely becomes mechanical. The question of rubato in Chopin is particularly contentious, since its use in his mus. may be dangerously open to abuse. Accounts of his playing (and of Mozart's) suggest that he kept the left-hand in strict time, and added rubato with the right.

Rubbra, Edmund (b Northampton, 1901). Eng. composer and pianist. Worked at 14 as railway clerk. Private comp. lessons from Cyril Scott. Studied at Reading Univ. 1920--1, comp. with Holst, pf. with E. Howard-Jones, at RCM 1921--5, comp. with Holst and Morris. Taught, wrote mus. criticism, and comp. mus for a travelling th. group. Recognition came with perf. of first Sym. (1935--7). Lecturer in mus., Oxford Univ. 1947--68, prof. of comp., GSM from 1961. Served in army 1941--5 and was ordered to form pf. trio with which he gave concerts to Servicemen and women throughout Brit. and, later, Ger. C.B.E. 1960. Contrib. to several works of reference, reviewer, etc. His prolific output covers all forms except for the th., and he is in the mould of Holst and Vaughan Williams, although folk-song as such plays no part in his work. His use of modal harmony and his large amount of religious mus. are in a particularly Eng. tradition, and his syms. have a mus. substance and spiritual grandeur which have still not been fully appreciated. Prin. works:

orch: Syms.: No. 1, Op. 44 (1935--7), No. 2, Op. 45 (1938, rev. 1951), No. 3, Op. 49 (1939), No. 4, Op. 53 (1941), No. 5, Op. 63 (1947--8), No. 6, Op. 80 (1954), No. 7, Op. 88 (1957), No. 8 (Hommage à Teilhard de Chardin), Op. 132 (1966--8), No. 9 (Sinfonia Sacra, 'the Resurrection') for sop., cont., bar., ch., and orch., Op. 140 (1971--2), No. 10 (Chamber sym.), Op. 145 (1974), No. 11, Op. 153 (1978--9); Festival Overture, Op. 62; Improvisations on Virginal Pieces by Giles Farnaby, Op. 50; Ov., Resurgam, Op. 149; pf. conc., Op. 85 (1956); va. conc., Op. 75 (1952); vn. conc., Op. 103 (1959); Improvisation, vn. and orch., Op. 89; Sinfonia Concertante, pf. and orch., Op. 38; Soliloquy, vc. and small orch., Op. 57; orchestrations of Brahms's Variations on a Theme of Handel and of Rachmaninov's Prelude in G minor.

Rubens, Paul (Alfred) (b London, 1875; d Falmouth, 1917). Eng. composer. Studied law at Oxford Univ. Wrote some nos. for Floradora (1899) and then devoted himself entirely to comp. of light operas, e.g. Miss Hook of Holland (1907), The Balkan Princess (1910), Tonight's the Night (1915), etc.

Rubible. The rebec.

Rubini, Giovanni-Battista (b Romano, 1794; d Romano, 1854). It. ten. Studied Bergamo. Début Pavia 1814. Sang in Naples 1815--31 and had sensational success in Paris 1825--6 in Rossini operas. Divided time between Paris and London 1831--43. Toured with Liszt 1843. Retired, immensely rich, 1845. Especially notable for his singing of Donizetti and Bellini, where his gift for broad cantabile and an exceptionally high range excelled. His tremolo, apparently remarkable, was imitated by lesser artists and reduced to vocal 'sob' which disfigures much It. singing.

Rubinstein, Anton (Grigorevich) (b Vekhvatinets, 1829; d Peterhof, 1894). Russ. pianist and composer. Taught by his mother, then by Villoing. Début Moscow 1839, European tour 1840--3. Studied comp., Berlin 1844--6. Returned to Russia 1848, then went to Ger. 1854 with many of his own comps. Settled in St Petersburg 1858 as court pianist and cond. One of greatest pianists of his day and a prolific composer, whose work had insufficient individuality to survive, in spite of memorable perfs. He considered that Russ. composers should imitate Western models. Remembered for his Melody in F for pf. Other works incl. 20 operas (incl. The Demon, 1871), 6 syms., incl. the 'Ocean', 5 pf. concs., vn. conc., 2 vc. concs., 10 str. qts., and much other chamber mus., also pf. pieces and songs.

Rubinstein, Arthur (Artur) (b ;Ulód;aaz, 1887; d Geneva, 1982). Polish-born pianist (Amer. citizen 1946). Child prodigy, giving recital in Warsaw at age 5. Studied there with Rozycki, then taken by sister to Berlin to play for Joachim, who, with 3 others, paid for his mus. training in Berlin (pf., comp., and theory). Played Mozart conc. cond. Joachim, Berlin 1900. Began extensive overseas tours. First visited USA 1906 (Philadelphia and NY). London début 1912. Settled in Paris but was in London 1914 and, speaking 8 languages fluently, became wartime interpreter. Gave recitals for charity with violinist Ysayé. Had great success in Spain 1916, becoming noted exponent of Falla's mus. Played frequently in USA 1919--27 but did not gain full success there until 1937. Settled in Hollywood 1939. Among greatest pianists of 20th cent., a master in the classics, in Chopin, and in 20th-cent. repertory. Played with almost undiminished power and skill up to his 90th birthday. Last London recital 30 April, 1976. Hon. K.B.E. 1977.

Rubinstein, Nikolay (Grigorevich) (b Moscow, 1835; d Paris, 1881). Russ. pianist and composer, brother of Anton Rubinstein. Studied in Berlin 1844--6. Trio in A minor was composed in his memory.

Ruckers. Antwerp firm of hpd. and virginals makers between 1579 and 1667, the founder being Hans Ruckers (c.1550--1598). Over 100 Ruckers instr. still exist. The aim of the hpds. made between 1580 and 1650 was to offer the player some contrast of tone or register. The single-manual instr. had a short-octave compass of 4 octaves from C and had 2 sets of str., respectively 8' and 4'. Ruckers also made 2-manual hpds., probably as transposing device to help accompanists. Hans Ruckers was helped and succeeded by his sons Jan (1578--1643) and Andries (1579--c.1645). Ruddigore, or The Witch's Curse. Operetta by Sullivan to lib. by Gilbert. Prod. London and NY 1887.

Gave pf. recital in Paris 1846. Entered Paris Cons. 1848, studying org. with Benoist and comp. with Halévy. Organist, Eglise Ste-Merry, Paris, 1853--7, Madeleine 1857--76. In 1852 met and became friends with Liszt, by whom he was much influenced. Wrote his first syms. c.[cf1]

[1848 and 1850 (unpubd.) and became pf. prof. at École Niedermeyer 1861--5 (his pupils incl. Fauré and Messager). Wrote first opera 1864--5 and began work on Samson et Dalila in 1868. In 1871 was co-founder of Société Nationale de Musique, formed to encourage development of Fr. instr. sch. To this end wrote a series of excellent symphonic poems. By this time was in demand as solo pianist and organist, and was soloist at the f.p. of his 5 pf. concs. between 1865 and 1896. First visit to Eng., 1871, to play Albert Hall org. Liszt prod. Samson et Dalila at Weimar 1877, Parisian impresarios regarding the biblical subject as too serious (not prod. at the Opéra until 1892). His best sym., No. 3 in C minor (the 'Organ') was ded. to Liszt's memory and f.p. in London, 1886. In later life Saint-Saëns travelled widely and stayed often in Algeria, some of his later works reflecting local colour. Visited USA in 1915. Last visited Eng. 1913 to conduct The Promised Land at Gloucester Fest. Wrote coronation march for Edward VII in 1902. Saint-Saëns's output was prolific and extended for most of his 86 years. Elegance of form and line, beautiful harmonies and chords were more important to him than emotional feeling or technical adventure, and his mus. has therefore been condemned for its superficiality and facility. Nevertheless these every qualities, to which may be added graceful melodic invention, have ensured the survival of a large amount of his work. It is not insignificant that he was admired by Ravel, another emotionally undemonstrative composer. His best features are to be found in Samson et Dalila, the 3rd Sym., and the pf. concs. Hon. C.V.O. 1902. Prin. comps.:

Satie, Erik (Eric Alfred Leslie) (b Honfleur, 1866; d Paris, 1925). Fr. composer and pianist, son of Fr. father and Scottish mother. Moved to Paris 1878. Studied Paris Cons. 1879--86 with little success. Worked as pianist in 1888 at Montmartre cabaret. In same year wrote his Gymnopédies for pf. Met Debussy in 1890. In 1891 joined Catholic Rosicrucian sect and comp. several works for it. Shortly afterwards seemed almost to have retired from comp., writing fewer than 10 works in 12 years. In 1905 entered Schola Cantorum as pupil of d'Indy and Roussel, leaving in 1908. From about 1910 became something of a cult among young composers attracted by the eccentric, humorous titles of some of his works, e.g. Trois Morceaux en forme de poire (Three Pear-shaped Pieces). Strongly influenced group of young composers known as Les Six. Meeting with Cocteau in 1915 led to Diaghilev ballet Parade (1917), in which jazz rhythms are used and the instrumentation incl. typewriter, steamship whistle, and siren. Later, was assoc. with Surrealists and Dadaists. Satie's importance lay in directing a new generation of Fr. composers away from Wagner-influenced impressionism towards a leaner, more epigrammatic style. His harmony is often characterized by unresolved chords, which may have influenced Debussy (or he may have learned the device from Debussy---nobody knows). Melody is simple, sometimes slightly archaic, and scoring economical, with few tutti passages. Socrate is the most ambitious of his works, most of which are comparatively short, the majority being for solo pf. He anticipated many later avant-garde trends; e.g. in Gnossiennes (1890) there are no bar-lines and the score contains verbal instructions bearing little relation to the mus. But beware---behind the clown's mask is a serious composer. Prin. comps.:

stage: Le Fils des étoiles, incidental mus. (1891, prelude re-orch. Ravel 1913); Genéviève de Brabant, marionette opera (1899); Le Piège de Méduse, lyric comedy (1913); Parade, ballet (1917); Mercure, ballet (1924); Relâche, ballet (1924).

Saxhorn. Type of brass wind instr. of wide semiconical bore, using cup mouthpiece and played with valves, invented by A. Sax c.1845. There are 7 varieties (deep bass to high treble), i.e. 2 sop., alto, ten., Bb bass, Eb bass, and BBb bass (BB signifies wider bore). They are transposing instrs.: those used in Brit. brass bands are the Eb ten. (ten. hn.) and Bb bar. (bar. hn.), both closely related to the flügelhorn. Nomenclature for the group is somewhat confused, e.g. in the 4 higher instrs.: [el2] [cl0][xf^(b)^[sv1,1s] [cl8][rf^(a) [ol0][ip1v] Soprano saxhorn in Eb (or F), also called sop. saxhorn or (mistakenly) sop. flügelhorn, or flügelhorn piccolo. Little different from Eb cornet. (b)^[li] Sopr. saxhorn in Bb (or C), also called alto saxhorn or (mistakenly) alto flügelhorn. Little different from Bb cornet. (c) [ol0][ip1v] Alto saxhorn in Eb (or F), also called saxhorn, or ten. saxhorn, or ten. hn., or alto, or althorn in Eb (or F). (d)^[li] Ten. in Bb (or C), also called bar., or bar. saxhorn, or althorn in Bb. [el2] The 3 lower saxhorns are whole-tube instrs., the 4 higher are half-tube instrs. The 3 lower instrs. are classified with tubas, e.g. [el2]^(e) [ol0][ip1v] Bass saxhorn in Bb (or C), almost identical with euphonium. (f) [ol0][ip1v] Bass saxhorn in Eb (or F), almost identical with Eb bass tuba, otherwise Eb bombardon. (g) [ol0][ip1v] Double-bass saxhorn in Bb (or C), almost identical with Bb bass tuba but with complete range at bottom. [el2] These are not always used as transposing instr.: sometimes the bass clef is used, sometimes the treble clef showing the notes an octave higher than if the bass clef had been used. In each case, middle C represents the octave of the fundamental note. Saxophone. Family of wind instrs. invented by A. Sax c.1840, having metal body. Played with a single beating reed, like cl., but conical in bore, like ob. Complete family is of 8 sizes, alternately in Eb and Bb, i.e. soprano in Eb, sop. in Bb, alto in Eb, ten. in Bb, bar. in Eb, bass in Bb, contrabass in Eb, subcontrabass in Bb. All are transposing instr., written in the treble clef, the most commonly used being the alto and ten. The sax.'s tone is extremely flexible and variable, blending well with either woodwind or brass, capable of a fl.-like softness, str.-like richness, and metallic stridency. It is a standard feature of jazz big bands, where a section of saxs. takes the place of a sym. orch.'s str. section (e.g. in Glenn Miller's and Tommy Dorsey's bands). But it has also been effectively used in symphonic mus. Berlioz, Meyerbeer, Bizet, Massenet, Saint-Saëns, and others all scored for the sax. Strauss used 4 saxs. in Symphonia Domestica (though he intended saxhorns), and he would have been preceded by Elgar, whose desire for 4 in Caractacus was thwarted only by economic considerations. Debussy, Ibert, Milhaud, Villa-Lobos, and Eric Coates have written conc.-like works for sax. and orch. Vaughan Williams uses it brilliantly in Job, and in his 6th and 9th Syms., and innumerable other 20th-cent. composers have called upon it. The idea that it is mainly a jazz instr. and so not quite decent in symphonic mus. is therefore as inaccurate as it is snobbish.

Sax(o)tromba. Sax's modification of the saxhorn c.1850 with a more cylindrical bore somewhere between tb. and saxhorn. Seldom used.

Scala di seta, La (The Silken Ladder). Opera in 1 act by Rossini to lib. by Rossi after Planard. Prod. Venice 1812, London 1954.

Scala Enigmatica (Lat.). Enigmatic scale. Term applied to arbitrary scale used by Verdi in his Ave Maria (1897), the first of his Quattro pezzi sacri. Scale, which sounds like whole-tone scale, is C-Db-E-F#-G#-A#-B-C.

Scala, La. See La Scala.

Scale (from It. scala, 'staircase', 'ladder'; Ger. Tonleiter; Fr. gamme). A series of single notes progressing up or down stepwise. Thus, a series of notes within an octave used as the basis of comp. Scales are arbitrary, and the no. in use throughout the world is incalculable. For the older European scales, used in the Church's plainsong and in folk song, see Modes. Two of these ancient Modes remained in use by composers, when the other 10 were almost abandoned, and these are our Major and Minor Scales--the latter, however, subject to some variations in its 6th and 7th notes. Taking C as the keynote these scales (which have provided the chief material of music from about ad 1600 to 1900) run as follows: [el3][cp7,7][ih1n]Major Scale (Semitones 3--4 and 7--8-- the two halves thus being alike). [ol24] [el3]Minor Scale---`Harmonic' Form (Semitones 2--3, 5--6, 7--8; there is the interval of the Augmented Second, 6--7). [ol24] Minor Scale---`Melodic' Form (Semitones 2--3, 7--8 ascending; 6--5, 3--2 descending; this avoids the interval of the augmented 2nd while allowing the Leading Note to retain its function of

diatonic scales, as distinct from a scale using nothing but semitones, which is the chromatic scale, for which 2 different notations are employed: [el3][cp7,7][ih1n]Chromatic Scale (in `melodic' notation---sharps upwards, flats downwards; this notation economizes accidentals), [ol26] [ol26] [el4]Chromatic Scale (in `harmonic' notation). [ol26] [ol26] [el4][cp8,8]^This scale when begun on other notes is `harmonically' notated according to the same principles; for instance, beginning on D it reads: [ol24] [el4][cp7,7][ih1n]The scheme is: the notes of the major scale, plus those of the harmonic minor scale, plus the minor 2nd and augmented 4th. [el2][cp8,8]^A scale comprising the same notes as the Chromatic Scale is the

dodecaphonic scale, in which the 12 notes are considered to be all of equal status and are so treated, whereas the Chromatic Scale beginning on any particular note is considered to comprise the Diatonic Scale of that note `coloured' (this is the literal meaning of `chromatic') by the addition of the extra semitones. Scales with smaller intervals than the semitone have been introduced. See Microtone. ^The

whole-tone scale is free of semitones and thus allows of only 2 different series, each with 6 notes: [el3][cp7,7]The Whole-tone Scale.[qc[ol40] [el3][cp8,8]^An extremely widespread scale is the 5-note or pentatonic scale (common in Scottish, Chinese, and other music): [el3][bn[cp7,7]The Pentatonic Scale (commonest order of the intervals). [ol26] [xn[el4][cp8,8]^The Scottish Highland Bagpipe is tuned to a scale that cannot be represented in orthodox notation. It is roughly that of the white notes of the piano with the C and F about a quarter of a tone sharp.

Scalero, Rosario (b Moncalieri, Turin, 1870; d Settimo Vittone, Turin, 1954). It. violinist, composer, and teacher of vn. and of comp. Pupil of Sivori in Genoa and Wilhelmj in London. Taught in Fr. and It. before going to USA in 1919. Head of vn. class, Mannes Sch., NY, 1919--28, Curtis Institute from 1928. Pupils incl. Barber, Menotti, and L. Foss. Wrote vn. conc., chamber mus., songs, etc.

Scapino. Comedy ov. by Walton, comp. 1940 to commission from Chicago S.O. who gave f.p. in Apr. 1941, cond. Frederick Stock. F. Eng. p. London, Nov. 1941. Rev. 1950. Scarbo (Ravel). See Gaspard de la nuit.

Scarlatti, Alessandro (b Palermo, 1660; d Naples, 1725). It. composer, specially important in development of opera and considered founder of so-called Neapolitan sch. Taken to Rome 1672, said to have studied with Carissimi, and wrote first opera there 1679. Engaged by Queen Christina of Sweden, then living in Rome, as cond., 1680--4, for her private th. Court cond., Naples, 1684--1702. Alternated between Rome and Naples for rest of life, in various court and church appointments. Contribution to opera was liberation of dramatic expression. Est. the da capo aria, first in Teodora (1692), the opera in which orch. ritornello is supposedly used for the first time. The so-called `It. ov.' was introduced in 1696 in a revival of Dal male il bene. In 1685, in L'Olimpia vendicata, occurs the first recorded instance of acc. recit. His greatest opera is reckoned to be Mitridate Eupatore (1707), comp. for Prince Ferdinando de' Medici. In his late Rome years, the general enthusiasm for opera, stimulated by Scarlatti, overcame all ecclesiastical objections. His 115 operas incl. only one comic opera, Il trionfo dell' onore (Naples 1718). About 70 survive, wholly or in part, of which revivals show superb craftsmanship and lofty invention. He also wrote some 20 oratorios, 10 masses, several settings of Stabat Mater, etc., over 40 motets, over 600 solo cantatas with basso continuo and 60 with other instr., some 30 chamber cantatas for 2 vv., 28 serenatas, several madrigals, 12 chamber concs., various sonatas, and hpd. pieces, incl. variations on La Folia. Father of Domenico Scarlatti.

Scarlatti, (Giuseppe) Domenico (b Naples, 1685; d Madrid, 1757). It. composer and harpsichordist, son of A. Scarlatti. Thought to have been pupil of his father and after 1708 of Pasquini and Gasparini in Venice, where he met Handel. In 1709, according to one biographer, Handel's patron, Cardinal Ottoboni, arranged a hpd.-playing contest between Handel and Scarlatti which was a tie, Handel being adjudged a better organist. Maestro di cappella to Queen of Poland, composing operas for her private th. in Rome. Mus. dir., St Peter's, Rome 1715--19. Court harpsichordist to King of Portugal and teacher of Princess Maria Barbara in Lisbon 1719--28; returned to Italy on leave 1725--9; accompanied Maria Barbara to Spain on her marriage to the Sp. Crown Prince in 1729. Stayed in Madrid for rest of his life. Domenico did for kbd.-playing what his father did for opera, by imparting to it a hitherto unsuspected freedom of style. Introduced many new technical devices (rapid repetitions, crossed hands, double-note passages, etc.) and the 550 single-movement sonatas he wrote in Sp. are exercises (esercizi) as well as innovative comps. foreshadowing sonata form. Also comp. 14 operas, masses, Stabat Mater for 10 vv., Salve Regina, cantatas, at least 12 concerti grossi, 17 sinfonias, and org. fugues. His works have been catalogued by R. Kirkpatrick, superseding the Longo catalogue begun in 1906.

Scarlatti, Giuseppe (b Naples, c.1718; d Vienna, 1777). It. composer, nephew of D. Scarlatti. Comp. 30 operas for Turin, Venice, Lucca, Naples, Florence, and Rome, then moved to Vienna where his subsequent operas incl. La clemenza di Tito (1757).

Scat Singing. Jazz term meaning the interpolation of nonsense words and syllables and other vocal effects, introduced in 1920s by Cab Calloway and Louis Armstrong.

Scemando (It.). Diminishing, in vol. of tone. Same as diminuendo.

Scena (It.). Scene. Prin. meaning of this term is an elaborate concert aria for v. and orch. in several sections, like the cantatas of Haydn, A. Scarlatti, etc. Examples are Beethoven's Ah! perfido, Bliss's The Enchantress, Barber's Andromache's Farewell, and Britten's Phaedra. Other meanings are (1) a scene, subdivision of an act in opera; (2) solo operatic movement, less formal than an aria e.g. Leonore's Abscheulicher! in Beethoven's Fidelio.

Scenes and Arias. Setting of medieval love-letters for sop., mez., cont., and orch. by Maw, comp. 1962, rev. 1966. F.p. London, 1962, cond. N.Del Mar.

Scènes pittoresques (Picturesque Scenes). Orch. work by Massenet, comp. 1874.

Schack (orig. ;akZák), Benedikt (b Mirotice, 1758; d Munich, 1826). Bohem. ten., composer, flautist, and cond. Court cond., then joined Schikaneder's co. 1786 as ten., singing with it in Salzburg, Vienna, Graz, and Munich until 1805. Created role of Tamino in Mozart's Die Zauberflöte, 1791, playing the fl. himself. Said to be one of group who sang parts of Mozart's Requiem to composer on his death-bed. Wrote several operas and church mus.

Schaeffer, Boguslaw (Julian) (b Lwów, 1929). Polish composer, mainly self-taught, and pianist. Studied Kraków State Coll. of Mus. 1949–53, where he has taught since 1963. First comp. 1946 in neo-classical style but with atonal leanings. Wrote atonal chamber mus. 1946–8. First composer in E. Europe to use 12-note system for orch. work (Nocturne, 1953). In 1955 discovered note-less composing of mus., e.g. in Study in Diagram for pf. (1955–6) only intervals, directions of linear motion, and articulations are used. In 1958 wrote Tertium datur with geometrical constructions written in graphical notation. Since 1959 his orch. scores have all been for unusual combinations of instr. Has written several jazz comps. since 1962 and elec. pieces since 1964. Many of his works inspired by paintings and literature. Uses 'synectic' method of comp., i.e. performers themselves decide what they understand by special signs and graphics. Has written books on new mus. (1958, 1969), Sounds and Signs (1969), and Introduction to Composition (1976, Eng. trans.). Prin. works:

Scherz (Ger.). Fun, joke. Scherzend, Scherhaft, jocular. Scherzando, scherzante, scherzevole, scherzevolmente (It., from scherzare, 'to joke'). Jokingly, playfully (superlative scherzantissimo).

Scherzetto, scherzino (It.). A short scherzo.

Scherzi, Gli (Haydn). See Russian Quartets.

Scherzi musicali (Musical Jokes). 2 sets of madrigal-like songs, influenced by Fr. style, by Monteverdi. First set (1607) for 3 vv. contains 15 songs, the 2nd (1632) for 1 or 2 vv. with basso continuo contains 10.

Scherzo (It., plural scherzi). Jest, joke. Name for a movement in orch. mus., but the term was first applied in 17th cent. to vocal mus., e.g. Monteverdi's Scherzi musicali. Generally it is the 3rd (or 2nd) movement of a sym. or str. qt., etc., the liveliest movement, usually but not necessarily the most light-hearted. It is the successor to the 18th-cent. Minuet and Trio, which was developed almost to scherzo pitch by Haydn. A movement in S. Storace's 2nd pf. quintet (1784) is a scherzo. Beethoven was the real creator of the scherzo (as early as the Op. 1 pf. trios), investing the movement with a rough, almost savage humour, with marked rhythm, generally in ;s3:;i4 time. The contrasting section is known as the Trio, but not all scherzos have trios. Chopin called 4 of his pf. works Scherzo, but they are marked more by vigour and intensity than by anything in the nature of a jest.

Scherzoso; scherzosamente (It.). Playful; playfully, i.e. like a scherzo.

Schoenberg (orig. Schönberg), Arnold (b Vienna, 1874; d Los Angeles, 1951). Austrian-born composer, cond., and teacher (Amer. citizen from 1941). One of most influential figures in history of mus. Learned vn. and vc. as boy. Mainly self-taught in theory, but had lessons in counterpoint from Zemlinsky, 1894. Began composing when youth; str. qt. and songs perf. 1897. Earned living scoring other composers' operettas and in 1901 became cond. of Wolzogen's Überbrettel (satirical cabaret; Wolzogen was librettist of R. Strauss's Feuersnot). In 1899 comp. Verklärte Nacht and in 1900 began work on Gurrelieder, both being in romantic post-Wagnerian style. On strength of Part I of Gurrelieder, obtained teaching post and scholarship at SternCons., Berlin, on recommendation of Strauss. While there comp. tone-poem Pelleas und Melisande. Returned to Vienna in 1903. At rehearsal of his chamber mus. by Rosé Qt., met Mahler. Among his students at this time were men who became lifelong disciples---Webern, Berg, Wellesz, Erwin Stein. In Schoenberg's comps. of 1903--7, chromatic harmony was explored to its limits and tonal structures became ever more elusive until, in 1909, he arrived at atonality with the 3 Pieces for pf., Op. 11, and the song-cycle Das Buch der hängenden Gärten. Perfs. of these works met with vehement hostility, and with equally vehement acclaim from his supporters. In 1911 he pubd. his masterly book Harmonielehre. At this time, also painted in striking 'expressionist' style. In 1912 comp. Pierrot Lunaire for actress Albertine Zehme, a work for reciter (in Sprechstimme) and chamber ens. Its Vienna perf. was the occasion of further hostility, but the f.p. there of the early-style Gurrelieder was a success. The 5 Orchestral Pieces were first played complete in London, 1912. In 1918 founded in Vienna a Soc. for Private Mus. Perfs. from which critics were excluded, no programme was announced in advance, and applause was forbidden. Wrote little between 1913 and 1921, and when next completed works appeared in 1923---the 5 Piano Pieces, Op. 23 and the Serenade, Op. 24---they introduced to the world the 'method of comp. with 12 notes', which was Schoenberg's technique for organizing atonal mus. Suite for pf., Op. 25, was first work wholly in 12-note method. Side-by-side with this revolutionary procedure, Schoenberg also returned to a strict use of traditional forms. In 1925 was invited to Berlin to teach comp. at the Prussian Acad. of Arts, remaining until 1933 when dismissed by Nazis and left Ger. Reconverted to Judaism in Paris in 1933, and emigrated to USA. Settled in Los Angeles and taught at Univ. of Calif. 1936--44. At this time announced his preference for spelling of his name Schoenberg instead of Schönberg. In the next 18 years comp. inconsistently in 12-note or tonal styles, dismayed his followers but not himself, for he said that all composers had varied their styles to suit their creative needs and purposes. Also rev. earlier works, wrote several religious pieces, and returned to two major undertakings he had abandoned in Europe, the oratorio Die Jakobsleiter, which remained unfinished, and the opera Moses und Aron, of which only two of the 3 acts were completed and which, when prod. after his death, was revealed as a deeply moving experience, although he wrote only a few bars for Act 3 in 1951. Schoenberg's mus., full of melodic and lyrical interest, is also extremely complex, taking every element (rhythm, texture, form) to its furthest limit and making heavy demands on the listener. But more and more listeners find the effort worth making. His greatness lies not only in his own mus. but in his artistic courage and in his powerful and continuing influence on 20th-cent. mus. He is likely to remain always a controversial, revered, and revolutionary musician. He was also a talented painter. Prin. works:

Dresden 1823--47, Paris 1830--32, London 1832, 1833, 1837. Wagner was so overwhelmed by her singing that he vowed to dedicate his life to creating a new kind of opera. She created 3 Wagner roles: Adriano in Rienzi (1842), Senta in Der fliegende Holländer (1843), and Venus in Tannhäuser (1845). Retired 1847. Schumann's song Ich grolle nicht was dedicated to her. Also sang in Rossini, Bellini, and Gluck. Though her vocal technique was apparently flawed, her dramatic powers made her interpretations unforgettable.

Schubart, Christian Friedrich Daniel (b Sontheim, 1739; d Stuttgart, 1791). Swabian organist, composer, and poet. Court opera dir., Stuttgart, from 1787. Spent 10 years in prison 1777--87, ostensibly for insulting a duke's mistress but probably for 'free-thinking' writings. Works incl. operetta, cantatas, and songs. Schubert, Franz (Seraph Peter) (b Vienna, 1797; d Vienna, 1828). Austrian composer. Son of impoverished school-master, who was his first teacher. In 1808 admitted as boy sop. to imperial chapel, living in the Konvikt. Played vn. in sch. orch., for which he wrote his First Sym. (1813). Became pupil of Salieri for theory, 1812. Left Konvikt when v. broke 1813, and worked as ass. schoolmaster to father, but continued to compose prolifically. Frequently attended opera in Vienna and wrote his first opera, Des Teufels Lustschloss in 1814, the first of many stage works, none of which was successful. On 19 October 1814 set Goethe's poem Gretchen am Spinnrade, his first masterpiece and the song that, it is inaccurately but understandably said, gave birth to the Lied. This released a flood of inspiration. In 1815 Schubert comp. 144 songs, incl. 8 in one day in Oct. In addition, comp. a sym., 2 Masses, and other works. Altogether wrote over 600 songs, of which about 200 are different settings of poems he had already set--he set some poems (particularly those by Goethe and Schiller) up to 6 times. In 1817 he abandoned teaching and lived in Vienna with one or other of his friends, among whom the poet Mayrhofer was the closest. They talked, drank, discussed the questions of the day, and made mus. in coffee-houses and at their homes. Schubert also met at this time the bar. Michael Vogl, one of the outstanding opera singers of the day, who became the foremost interpreter of his songs, often acc. by the composer. Apart from church mus., the first public concert of Schubert's mus. was in March 1818, at which were perf. (on 2 pf.) the ovs. he had written in imitation of Rossini, whose operas were all the rage in Vienna from 1816. In 1818 spent summer as teacher to the 2 daughters of Count Johann Esterházy at summer estate at Zseliz, where he heard Slav and gipsy folk-mus. On return to Vienna, Schubert lived with Mayrhofer and Hültenbrenner, latter acting as factotum, assembling Schubert's MSS. His Singspiel, Die Zwillingsbrüder, received 6 perfs. in Vienna in June 1820, with Vogl singing the roles of the twin brothers; and in Aug. his incidental mus. for Die Zauberharfe was used at the Theater an der Wien. Other works comp. in this period were the 'Trout' Quintet, written at Steyr, Upper Austria, during holiday in 1819 with Vogl, the oratorio Lazarus, setting of Psalm 23, Wanderer Fantasy, and the Quartettsatz. In 1821 Diabelli pubd. song Erlkönig, the first mus. by Schubert to appear in print. Others followed. In 1820--1, the Schubert circle of friends changed as some members left Vienna. Among new associates were painters Leopold Kupelweiser and Moriz von Schwind, and musician Franz Lachner. In 1821 sketched his 7th Sym., in E major, but left it unorch. (several musicians have 'completed' it, among them J. F. Barnett, 1884, Felix Weingartner, 1935, and Brian Newbould, 1977). The following year, comp. an 8th Sym. in B minor, but completed only 2 movements in full and 130 bars of a scherzo. However, the 'Unfinished' Sym. is a complete work of art in itself as it stands. Schubert heard Weber conduct Der Freischütz and Euryanthe in Vienna and himself wrote several stage works between 1821 and 1823, the operas Alfonso und Estrella and Der häusliche Krieg, and incidental mus. for Rosamunde, Fürstin von Cypern, a play by Helmina von Chézy (librettist of Euryanthe) which ran for 2 perfs. Ill-health began to trouble Schubert in 1823; while in hospital that year comp. some of the songs of the song-cycle Die schöne Müllerin. At Zseliz in 1824 with the Esterházy family, wrote A minor str. qt. and Grand Duo for pf. duet. In the summer of 1825, joined Vogl for a 5-month tour of Austria, composing all the time. At Gmunden and Gastein said to have comp. a sym. of which no trace has been found, but modern scholarship tends to take the view that this is the 'Great' C major Sym. (No. 9), usually ascribed to 1828 but now thought to date from 1825. Scholarship is equally divided over what personal contact there was between Schubert and Beethoven, but incontrovertibly Schubert was a torchbearer at Beethoven's funeral in 1827 and had earlier visited him on his deathbed. The last 2 years of Schubert's short life are fully documented in Schubert: The Final Years by John Reed (1972). To them belong the song-cycle Winterreise, the Eb pf. trio, Moments musicaux and 3 pf. sonatas, many songs, and Str. Quintet in C major. All Schubert's mus., even the happiest, has a tinge of sadness; the works of his last years, when illness increasingly afflicted him, are at an extreme of poignancy. In Mar. 1828 gave a public concert of his works in Vienna. It made a profit for him, but none of the city's mus. critics attended. Died on 19 Nov. 1828 and was buried near to Beethoven at Währing. Both composers were later exhumed and reburied in the Central Cemetery of Vienna. Many of the works by Schubert which we hold most dear were not perf. until several years after his death. As a composer of songs he has no equal in fertility of melodic invention, but all his work is so graced with melody of the most seraphic kind that there was at one time a tendency to regard him as an 'undisciplined' composer for whom form meant little. How wrong a judgement this was can be realized simply by studying the great chamber works and late pf. sonatas alone. He ranks among the very greatest of composers in all forms except opera, and concs. (of which he wrote none), and the listener has a lifetime of discoveries among his vast output. His works were catalogued by O. E. Deutsch and are now given Deutsch (D) nos. Prin. comps.:

Schulmeister, Der (The Schoolmaster). Nickname for Haydn's Sym. No. 55 in Eb (Hob. I: 55) comp. 1774. Dotted figure in slow movement suggests admonishing finger of schoolmaster, and scholars believe Haydn authorized title.

Schuman, William (Howard) (b NY, 1910). Amer. composer and administrator. As youth composed jazz arrs. and studied at sch. of commerce. Abandoned this for serious mus. studies with Max Parsin and Charles Haubiel and at Juilliard Summer Sch. In 1933 enrolled for teacher's course at Columbia Univ., attended Salzburg Mozarteum summer course 1935 where he began workon First Sym. This he submitted for advice to Roy Harris, who gave him private lessons. His 2nd Sym. was eventually played in Boston under Koussevitzky, who became his champion. Henceforward composed prolifically, and became prof. at Sarah Lawrence Coll., Larchmont. In 1945 became president of Juilliard Sch., holding this post until 1961; president of Lincoln Center for Performing Arts, 1961--9. His syms. are a major feature of Amer. mus. His mus. has a firm melodic basis, largein gesture and conception, with strong contrapuntal element and motor rhythms, some derived from jazz. He has comp. in most forms, incl. ballets for Antony Tudor and Martha Graham, and been much honoured by Amer. institutions. Prin. works:

Schumann, Clara (Josephine) (née Wieck) (b Leipzig, 1819; d Frankfurt, 1896). Ger. pianist and composer, wife of Robert Schumann. Daughter and pupil of F. Wieck. Début aged 9. Toured Ger. 1831 and elsewhere in Europe from 1832. Overcame fierce parental opposition to marriage to Schumann 1840, becoming his foremost interpreter. Toured Russia 1844. First visit to Eng. 1856, often thereafter to 1888. Lived in Berlin 1856--63. Head of pf.faculty, Hoch Cons., Frankfurt, 1878--92. Championed Brahms in his youth and remained lifelong friend. Last public perf. 1891. Comp. pf. conc. (in A minor), pf. trio, many pf. pieces, several songs, and cadenzas for concs. by Mozart and Beethoven. Had distinguished pupils. Was renowned for the breadth and integrity of her playing.

Schumann, Elisabeth (b Merseburg, 1888; d NY, 1952). Ger.-born sop. (Amer. citizen from 1944). Studied Berlin, Dresden, and Hamburg. Opera début Hamburg 1909, remaining member of co. until 1919. NYMet. 1914--15, début as Sophie in Der Rosenkavalier, one of her most famous and effective roles. Vienna Opera 1919--37;CG 1924--31. Toured USA 1921 in recitals with R. Strauss as accompanist. One of best-loved and most admired singers of her day, notable interpreter of Strauss Lieder and of such Mozart soubrette roles as Susanna, Zerlina, Despina, Blonde. Also memorable Adèle in Fledermaus. Left Austria 1938 and settled in USA, teaching for a brief spell at Curtis Institute.

Schumann, Robert (Alexander) (b Zwickau, 1810; d Endenich, 1856). Ger. composer, pianist, cond., and critic. Studied law at Leipzig and Heidelberg Univs., but main interests were mus. and Romantic literature, e.g. Jean-Paul Richter. In 1828 met Clara Wieck, to whose father Friedrich he went for pf. lessons in 1829, lodging with him and beginning to compose. In 1832 permanently injured hand by device he had invented to keep 4th finger immobile while practising. Was already contributing mus. criticism to Ger. papers and in 1831 called attention to Chopin's genius. Depressed by mus. situation in Ger., founded 'David Club' in 1834 to fight artistic philistines, and periodical Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, which he ed. for 10 years. In writings and comps., gave himself dual personality: Florestan for his impetuous self and Eusebius for his contemplative side. In 1838 visited Vienna and discovered MS. of Schubert's 'Great' C major sym., which he sent to Mendelssohn. Married Clara Wieck 1840 after long opposition from her father, this being followed by outpouring of songs and song-cycles. In 1841 concentrated on syms., in 1842 on chamber mus., and in 1843 choral works. Taught comp. at Leipzig Cons. Toured Russia with Clara, 1844. On return had severe attack of depression. Moved to Dresden in search of quiet, living there until 1850. In 1846 Clara gave f.p. of his pf. conc. and Mendelssohn cond. f.p. of 2nd Sym. In 1850 moved to Düsseldorf in hope of earning more by conducting, but was not a success. Met 20-year-old Brahms in 1853, acclaiming him in article 'New Paths'. The next year his mental health failed and he threw himself into Rhine, but was saved and taken to private asylum where he lived another 2 years. Schumann was one of the greatest composers for pf., enriching its literature with a series of poetic works in which classical structure and Romantic expression are combined. His vocal and chamber mus. is of comparable quality, with the freshness, vitality, and lyricism which also characterize the orch. works. His orchestration is sometimes criticised for its thickness and lack of fluency, and various attempts have been made to 'improve' the scoring, e.g. by Mahler, but the present-day tendency is to prefer the spontaneity of Schumann's own. His songs, particularly his song-cycles, are among the glories of Lieder. His works contain many musical quotations and allusions and a number of his themes have been shown to be musical cryptograms. Prin. comps.:

Abnormal tuning of a str. instr. in order to obtain special chordal effects and changes of tonal quality. Prevalent in vn. mus. (e.g. of Heinrich Biber), of 17th and 18th cents., possibly originating with lute. Paganini and Bériot in 19th cent. tuned G string of vn. up a tone to increase vol. and to make certain passages easier. In andante movement of Schumann's Pf. Qt., the C string of the vc. is tuned down to Bb to increase the compass. Mahler in the scherzo of his 4th sym. has a solo vn. tuned up a tone to represent the 'dance of death'. Other 20th cent. examples of Scordatura occur in Kodály's sonata for unacc. vc., Stravinsky's Firebird, and Bartók's Contrasts (finale).

Score. A mus.-copy which shows in ordered form the parts allotted to the various performers, as distinct from 'parts' which show only that of one performer. Thus to speak of score and parts means a comprehensive copy, used by the cond., and separate copies for individual instrs. and singers. A full score shows all the parts separately displayed. A vocal score gives all the v. parts of a choral work or opera with the orch. parts reduced to a pf. part. Short score is a stage in comp. where the composer may write out his mus. giving indications (but not full details) of scoring and harmonization. Mahler's 10th Sym. was left mainly in short score. Piano score is a reduction to a pf. part of all the parts of a work. A Miniature, study, or pocket score is a full score issued in a handy size for study or for following a work at a concert. Conds. who know a work very well (and have good eyesight) sometimes use a miniature score.

Scoring. (1) The art and process of orchestrating a comp. (2) Taking the separate parts of a work and assembling them in a score, e.g. where only the parts have been preserved.

Scorrendo, scorrevole (It.). Scouring. (1) Gliding from note to note, i.e. glissando. (2) In a flowing style.

Scotch Snap (Catch). A rhythmic figuration in which a dotted note is preceded by a note of shorter value. It is a feature of the Strathspey and is found in some Scottish songs. It seems to be not earlier than 18th-cent., and of unknown origin. Occurs in the mus. of composers, e.g. Rossini, who have never been within hailing distance of Scotland.

Scotch Symphony. Mendelssohn's Sym. No. 3 in A minor, Op. 56, begun 1830 and completed 1842. Inspired by visit to Holyrood, Edinburgh, and ded. to Queen Victoria. F.p. Leipzig, March 1842, f. Eng. p. London, June 1842.

Richter in Liverpool and Manchester 1900, and First Sym. perf. in Darmstadt same year. Pf. quintet perf. London 1901 and 2nd Sym. (later rev. as 3 Symphonic Dances) cond. Wood 1903. Through terms of publisher's contract, wrote many short pf. pieces in impressionist style which earned him title of 'English Debussy' and reputation as miniaturist. Other works incl. vn. sonata (1908--10), notable for constant changes of time-signature, La Belle Dame sans merci for ch. and orch. (1915--16), opera The Alchemist (prod. Essen 1925), 2 other operas, sym. The Muses, (1939), 2 pf. concs. (1913--14, 1958), 3 vn. concs. (1927, 1935), 2-vn. conc., vc. conc., The Ballad of Fair Helen of Kirkconnel, for bar. and orch., 4 str. qts., 3 pf. sonatas, and 2 str. trios. Also wrote poetry and philosophical and medical books. Taught Rubbra comp.

Scott, Marion (Margaret)(b London, 1877; d London, 1953). Eng. writer on mus. Studied RCM 1896--1904 (vn., pf., comp., etc.). Formed str. qt. Founded Soc. of Women Musicians, 1911. During years at Met. was heard frequently as Scarpia, Sharpless, Falstaff, Iago, and Rigoletto. Fine actor in addition to having v. of rare beauty but not of unusual power. For 4 years, 1919--23, managed and financed touring opera co.

Scottish Chamber Orchestra. Chamber orch. with headquarters in Queen's Hall, Edinburgh, and serving all Scotland. Founded 1974 with Roderick Brydon as art. dir. R. Leppard prin. guest cond. from 1978. Played for Scottish Opera, when appropriate, up to 1979. Has toured abroad, appearing at Aix-en-Provence 1978, 1980, 1981.

Scottish Fantasy. Fantasia on Scottish Folk Tunes for vn. and orch. by Bruch, comp. 1879--80, f.p. Hamburg 1880 (Sarasate). In 4 movements, last being an Allegro guerriero (warlike). Scottish tune featured in each movement: Auld Rob Morris, The Dusty Miller, I'm a doun for lack of Johnnie, and Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled.

Scottish National Orchestra. Prin. prof. sym. orch. of Scotland, based in Glasgow and giving regular series of concerts in Glasgow, Edinburgh, and other Scottish towns. Formed 1891 as Scottish Orch., with George Henschel as cond. 1891--95. His successors were Willem Kes (1895--8), Max Bruch (1898--1900), Frederic Cowen (1900--10), Emil Mlynarski (1910--16), Landon Ronald (1916--20), Julius Harrison (1920--3). From 1923 to 1933 there was no regular cond. except in 1926 when Václav Talich was in charge. Barbirolli was cond. 1933--6, followed by Szell 1936--9, W. Braithwaite 1940--6, and Walter Süsskind 1946--52. Reorganized 1950 as Scottish Nat. Orch., with players on annual contracts and much enlarged schedule. Karl Rankl became cond. 1952--7, Hans Swarowsky 1957--9, Alexander Gibson 1959--84, and Neeme Järvi from 1984. During Gibson's régime the orch. increased its repertory, gave many f.ps., toured abroad, and played in the pit for Scottish Opera. Stockhausen's Gruppen, and several works by Henze received first Brit. perfs. from Gibson and SNO, and Scottish composers received particular encouragement. Schoenberg's vn. conc. had first Brit. public perf. in 1960.

Scottish Opera. Opera co. based in Glasgow but giving seasons in Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and elsewhere in Scotland, also paying regular visits to Eng. provinces. Has played in London, at Edinburgh Fest., and made several tours abroad. Founded 1962 by Alexander Gibson, first season being of 2 operas, Madama Butterfly and Pelléas et Mélisande, in King's Th., Glasgow. With Peter Hemmings as administrator from 1963, co. began to build a reputation for striking productions, with excellent sets and lighting; singers were mainly Brit. but with several int. artists who worked with the co. for long spells, e.g. Helga Dernesch. Contemporary works were perf., notably of Britten, and operas were commissioned from Scottish composers, e.g. Wilson's Confessions of a Justified Sinner. In 1969, Berlioz's Les Troyens was perf., with Janet Baker as Dido, and in 1966, with Die Walküre, the co. began to build a Ring cycle, culminating in 1971 in Glasgow with the first Brit. perf. of the Ring outside London for about 40 years. In 1975 the co. moved into the re-equipped and re-furnished Th. Royal, Glasgow, as its permanent headquarters, setting the seal on the finest and most important operatic development in Britain since the foundation of Glyndebourne. In 1976 Hemmings was appointed dir. of Australian Opera and was succeeded by Peter Ebert, former chief prod. of Scottish Opera. He resigned in 1980. His successor was John Cox, appointed in 1982. In addition to the SNO, orchs. playing regularly for the co. were the BBC Scottish S.O., the Scottish Chamber Orch., and the Scottish Philharmonia, but in 1980 the company formed its own orch. With Edinburgh Fest. and expanded life of SNO, Scottish Opera is a remarkable example of the flowering of Scottish mus. life since 1945, especially under the aegis of Sir Alexander Gibson. Scotto, Renata [fy75,1] (b Savona, 1933). It. sop. Studied Milan. Opera débüt Milan 1953. Member of Scala Co. since 1953. London débüt (Stoll) 1957. Semiminima (It.). The quarter-note or crotchet.

Semi-opera. Term denoting type of Eng. Restoration drama in which there were extensive mus. episodes, similar to masques, perf. only by subsidiary characters. Form was developed by Betterton with The Tempest, 1674, an adaptation of Shakespeare's play with mus. by Humfrey, Locke, and others. Another example was King Arthur, text by Dryden (1684) and mus. by Purcell (1691). Purcell was also involved in Dioclesian (1690), The Fairy Queen (1692, rev. 1693), and The Indian Queen (1695). Only King Arthur was specifically devised as a semi-opera, the others being Betterton versions of earlier plays. Daniel Purcell, John Eccles, and D'Urfey also wrote semi-operas, but early in the 18th cent. the form was superseded by It. opera.

Semi-Perfect Cadence. Perfect cadence with 3rd or 5th of tonic in highest part.[cmSemicadence ([xf;yc[rf]. The 16th-note, i.e. ;F1;E1;E6 the time-value of the whole-note or semibreve.

Also subject of about 40 other operas, incl. those by Porpora, Vivaldi, Hasse, Gluck, Galuppi, Paisiello, Salieri, Meyerbeer, and Respighi. With exception of Respighi's, all were settings of text by Metastasio.

Semitone. Half a tone. Smallest interval in European mus. On pf., interval between any note and the next, up or down. There are three types of semitone: diatonic (same as a minor 2nd); chromatic (difference between major 2nd and minor 2nd); and enharmonic (doubly diminished 3rd). Diatonic semitone has ratio of 16/15, and two chromatic semitone intervals are recognized ('lesser semitone' of 25/24 and 'greater semitone' of 135/128). These intervals occur between values of chromatic-scale notes conventionally accepted as 'just' or 'perfect'.

Semkow, Jerzy (b Radomsko, Poland, 1928). Polish cond. Studied Kraków and Leningrad Cons. (1951--3). Ass. cond. Leningrad P.O. 1954--6; cond. Bolshoy Opera and Ballet, 1956--8; prin. cond. Septuor. See Septet.

Septuplet. Group of 7 notes of equal time-values written where a group of 4 or 6 notes is suggested by time-signature. See Irregular rhythmic groupings.

Sequence. (1) In mus. construction, the more or less exact repetition of a passage at a higher or lower level of pitch. If the repetition is of only the melody it is called a

melodic sequence; if it is of a series of chords it is a

harmonic sequence. If the intervals between the notes of the melody are to some extent altered (a major interval becoming a minor one and so forth, as is practically inevitable if the key is unchanged) it is called a

tonal sequence; if there is no variation in the intervals (usually achieved by altering not merely the pitch of the notes but also the key) it is called a real sequence. If there are several repetitions, some of them Tonal and some Real, the result is a mixed sequence. A Harmonic Real Sequence is sometimes called Rosalia (some authorities, however, require as an additional qualification for this description a rise of one degree of the scale at each repetition). (2) In ecclesiastical use the term Sequence is applied to a type of hymn which began as one of the many forms of interpolation in the original liturgy of the Western Christian Church. As the traditional plainsong did not provide for such interpolations, special melodies were composed. In the Church's service Sequences follow (whence the name) the Gradual and Alleluia. The earliest Sequences were in prose, not, as later, in rhymed verse, and the term 'Prose' is still sometimes used instead of 'Sequence'. The following are examples of the Sequence: Dies Irae (now a part of the Requiem), Veni Sancte Spiritus, Lauda Sion, and Stabat Mater dolorosa. ^(3) The It. composer Berio uses the title Sequence (Sequenza) for a series of works for solo instr. and v.

Sequencer. Elec. device enabling a succession of several sounds (together with modifications in each) to be pre-set.

Sequenza (Sequence). Title given by Berio to series of short aleatory virtuoso works for solo instr. e.g. harp, vn., tb., pf., ob., fl., va., perc., and female v. Nos. II, VI, and VII were later arr. with orch. and called Chemins I, II, and IV respectively.

Evening music. Properly, open-air evening mus. (opposite of aubade) such as song by lover outside beloved's window (as by Don Giovanni in Mozart's opera), but a term extended to other meanings. The instr. serenade was developed towards the end of 18th cent. as type of work similar to cassation and divertimento, particularly by Mozart (e.g. his Eine kleine Nachtmusik). It was scored for small ens. and sometimes for wind instr. alone, and written in several movements (midway between sym. and suite). Beethovens's serenades were chamber works. Other fine examples are those by Brahms, Dvořák, Tchaikovsky, Elgar, and Strauss. In Ger., Nachtmusik implies the instr. form and Ständchen the vocal.

Serenade for Tenor, Horn, and Strings. Song-cycle by Britten, Op. 31, being prol. and epilogue (for unacc. hn.) enclosing 6 settings of poems on theme of evening by Cotton, Tennyson, Blake, Anon. (Lyke-Wake Dirge), Jonson, and Keats. F.p. London 1943 (Pears, D. Brain, cond. W. Goehr).

Serenade to Music. Setting by Vaughan Williams for 16 solo vv. (4 sop., 4 cont., 4 ten., 4 bass) and orch. of passage from Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice, comp. for Sir Henry Wood's golden jubilee as a cond., London, Oct. 1938. Orig. singers were Stiles Allen, Isobel Baillie, Elsie Suddaby, Eva Turner, Margaret Balfour, Muriel Brunskill, Astra Desmond, Mary Jarred, Parry Jones, Heddle Nash, Frank Titterton, Walter Widdop, Norman Allin, Robert Easton, Roy Henderson, and Harold Williams. Also arr. for 4 soloists and orch., for ch. and orch., or for orch. (1940).

Serenata (It.). Serenade. (1) Instr. serenade, as Mozart's Serenata Notturna (1776, K239). (2) 18th-cent. term for dramatic cantatas which might also be called 'semi-operas', such as Handel's Acis and Galatea. In 16th cent. meant a satirical polyphonic comp. of the villanelle type. Term first appeared in print in 1560 as the title of one of Alessandro Stiggio's 6-part madrigals.

Serenata Notturna (Nocturnal Serenade). Title of Mozart's Serenade No. 6 in D (K239) for 2 small orchs., comp. 1776.

Seria (It.). Serious; e.g. opera seria, serious (or tragic) opera---as distinct from opera buffa, comic opera.)

Serialism, Serial Technique, Serial Music. Terms applied to the 20th-cent. revolution in comp. whereby traditional melodic, harmonic, rhythmic, and tonal rules and conventions were replaced. Serial mus. is that in which a structural 'series' of notes governs the total development of the comp. It originated in Schoenberg's atonality, leading to his system of composing with 12 notes (1923). This system is based on use of a series of intervals (note-row) involving in turn all 12 notes of the chromatic scale in any order selected by the composer. In its strictest application, no note should be repeated until the other 11 have appeared and the order of the series remains unaltered throughout the work, with certain permitted modifications. Schoenberg later broke his own rules and other modifications were introduced by Berg and Webern. While the series in Schoenberg's hands remained comparable with a theme, in Webern's it was more subtly pervasive and often not perceptible as a given sequence of 12 notes. The next stage in serialism was foreshadowed in 1944 by Messiaen in his Technique de mon langage musical, in which he wrote about serialization of durations. By the 1950s several components (parameters) of a work were being serialized by, for example, Babbitt, Boulez, and Stockhausen. With the introduction of elec. media, the scope for serial permutations became much enlarged, in relation to time. By the end of the 1960s, many composers renounced serialism as too restrictive; others, incl. Boulez, questioned its continued necessity because aleatory developments and new sounds available through elec. means achieve by synthesis the ends of serialism. Whatever the future of serialism, it remains a development which radically altered the tenets of mus. comp.

Shake. Early Eng. name for Trill.

Shakers (Shaking Quakers). Name for members of the United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing, a religious celibate community founded in the USA after 1774 by Ann Lee (1736--84), formerly of Manchester in Eng. They developed their own hymnology, incl. spirituals and dance, and in the 1840s two tunebooks were pubd. giving details of Shaker mus. theory, notation, and tunes. When a Shaker had a religious seizure which resulted in a hymn or dance-tune, a scribe wrote down the tune in a primitive letteral notation. The words of the songs were sometimes in Eng., at others were nonsense, or derived from Indian or Negro speech. Copland quotes the Shaker tune Simple Gifts in his Appalachian Spring. Shakers are now almost extinct, but their mus. has been collected and is studied.

Shakespeare and Music. The influence of William Shakespeare (b Stratford-upon-Avon, 1564; d Stratford, 1616) upon composers, from his own time until today, is of such magnitude that a short entry is essential. Morley comp. songs for the f.ps. of some of the plays. Since then nearly every composer of note has set a Shakespeare song---among the greatest being Schubert's Who is Sylvia? Incidental mus. to the plays ranges from Mendelssohn's and Orff's for A Midsummer Night's Dream to Walton's for Macbeth. Walton and Shostakovich are among those who have written mus. for Shakespeare films. In categories of their own are Berlioz's dramatic sym. and Tchaikovsky's fantasy-ov. Romeo and Juliet, Elgar's symphonic study Falstaff, and Vaughan Williams's Serenade to Music (a setting of words from The Merchant of Venice). Operas based on Shakespeare are many. Chief among them are Verdi's Falstaff, Otello, and Macbeth; Britten's A Midsummer Night's Dream; Berlioz's Béatrice et Bénédict (Much Ado About Nothing); Vaughan Williams's Sir John in Love (Merry Wives of Windsor); and Wagner's Das Liebesverbot (Measure for Measure). Purcell's The Fairy Queen is a masque based on A Midsummer Night's Dream although no word of Shakespeare's text is set. Bellini's I Capuleti e i Montecchi is based on Romeo and Juliet but not on Shakespeare's version. Walton's Troilus and Cressida is also not based on Shakespeare's play.

Short Octave and Broken Octave. Devices for avoiding expenditure on the lowest and biggest (and consequently most costly) pipes of the organ, and as they were adopted also in domestic kbd. instrs. such as virginals, spinet, and clavichord, the economic motive probably operated in their case also. (1) Where the short octave device was adopted the lowest octave incl. only 9 notes instead of 13 (C, D, E, F, G, A, Bb, B, and C) and these were distributed over 6 long finger-keys and 3 short ones, the omitted notes being those which in the days before equal temperament were not likely to be needed in the bass. (2) Where the broken octave device was adopted the arrangement was generally the following or something like it. The lowest octave was complete from C to C, except that the lowest C# was replaced by a more useful note, the A from below. This device was still to be seen in some Eng. organs at the beginning of the 19th cent.

Entered Petrograd Cons. 1919, encouraged and helped by Glazunov, and studied pf. with Nikolayev and comp. with M. Steinberg. Completed pf. course in 4 years and made several concert appearances. Gained 'honourable mention' in Int. Chopin Comp., Warsaw, 1927. His diploma work, the 1st Sym., was perf. in Leningrad and Moscow in 1926 and earned the composer world fame at the age of 20. As a convinced believer in Russ. socialism, he sought ways in which his mus. could serve the state. Prompted by the cond. Malko, he wrote for the stage and films, in the next decade producing his opera The Nose, the ballets The Age of Gold and The Bolt, and several cinema scores. These works, particularly The Nose, reflect the then-permitted influence of Western avant-garde music. His opera The Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District and ballet Bright Stream had both been successfully prod. when on 28 Jan. 1936 the opera was savagely attacked in the official Soviet newspaper Pravda for 'leftist distortion', 'petty-bourgeois sensationalism', and 'formalism' in an article headed 'Chaos instead of Music' (Sumbur v mesto muzyki). This article is said to have been written by Stalin himself, who had hated the opera. Another article attacking the ballet Bright Stream appeared in Pravda 10 days later. It almost seemed that Shostakovich's career was at an end, and he withdrew his 4th Sym. after initial rehearsals. His response was his 5th Sym. (1937), described by an unidentified commentator as 'A Soviet artist's practical creative reply to just criticism', a work which became and has remained one of his most popular. Significantly he avoided the stage for many years and between 1938 and 1953 wrote 5 more syms. and 4 str. qts. He taught comp. at Leningrad Cons. 1937--41 and was a fire-fighter during Ger. siege of Leningrad in 1941. From these experiences came his 7th Sym. (the Leningrad), which had a tremendous wartime success not only in USSR but in Eng. and USA. His pf. quintet (1940) won the Stalin Prize. In 1943 he settled in Moscow, becoming prof. of comp. at the Cons. In 1948, with other leading Russ. composers, he was again disgraced following the notorious Zhdanov decree against 'formalism' and 'anti-people art'. He was relieved of his Moscow professorship and did not resume the post until 1960. He made an official recantation, but his published works from 1948 to 1953 (when Stalin died) were chiefly film music and patriotic cantatas, exceptions being the 24 Preludes and Fugues for pf. The first Vn. Conc. (1947--8, rev. 1955), the 4th str. qt., and the song-cycle From Jewish Folk Poetry were all withheld from performance until after Stalin's death, and the arrival, under Khruschev, of a relatively and temporarily more liberal political and cultural climate. In 1953 the 10th Sym. appeared, a masterpiece which is one of several highly personal works using the motif DSCH (based on the initials of his name). This sym. inaugurates the great final period of his career, 22 years in which he comp. some of his finest mus.--the 10th to 15th Syms., the 6th to 15th str. qts., 2 vc. concs., The Execution of Stepan Razin to a text by the poet Yevtushenko, the 2nd vn. conc., the vn. and va. sonatas, and the Suite on Verses of Michelangelo. He visited England in 1958 and 1974, becoming a close friend and admirer of Britten. In 1969 he had a severe heart attack and was in fragile health thereafter. Many consider that Shostakovich is the greatest 20th-cent. composer. In his 15 syms., 15 qts., and in other works he demonstrated mastery of the largest and most challenging forms with mus. of great emotional power and technical invention. Nearly all the significant features of his mus. are present in the 1st Sym.: sectionalized structures, with themes built up into a mosaic, and frequent use of solo instr. in their highest and lowest registers. All his works are marked by emotional extremes---tragic intensity, grotesque and bizarre wit, humour, parody, and savage sarcasm. He frequently uses quotation, of himself and others. After his illness his mus. seemed preoccupied with death, and the great final works have an extraordinary and alarming power and tension. His admiration for, and knowledge of, Mahler is evident in his symphonic works, and he follows the Mahlerian precedent of juxtaposing the banal and the sublime. His student days in the decade following the Revolution were a time of comparative liberalism in Leningrad and it is evident from his 1st Sym. that he had studied the Western avant-garde of the time (Berg, Hindemith, and K; Akrenek). The influence of Berg's Wozzeck, perf. in Leningrad, 1927, may be discerned in the Lady Macbeth opera. No one can know whether Shostakovich became disillusioned with the Soviet system and whether the intensifying darkness and bitterness of his work reflects a spiritual misery connected with external events (his attributed memoirs, published in the West in 1979, suggest that he was and it does). What is certain is that the tensions within him, whatever their cause, produced a succession of masterpieces. Prin. works:

Sibelius, Jean (orig. Johan Julian Christian) (b Hämeenlinna (Tavastehus), 1865; d Järvenpää, 1957). Finn. composer, the nat. mus. v. of his country. In boyhood was called Janne by his friends and later adopted first name of an uncle, Jean Sibelius. Comp. as a child before he had technical instruction. Learned pf. and vn., hoping to become virtuoso of latter. Studied comp. in text-books. Entered Helsinki Univ. as law student 1885, taking special courses in mus. at Cons. and abandoning law in 1886. Studied comp. with Wegelius and vn. with Csillag at Helsinki Cons. 1886--9, being encouraged also by Busoni, in Berlin 1889--90 (comp. with A. Becker), and at Vienna Cons. 1890--1 (comp. with K. Goldmark and R. Fuchs). Taught vn. and theory, Helsinki Mus. Institute 1892--7. Inspired by nationalist feeling sweeping Finland in protest at Russ. domination, comp choral sym. for soloists, malech., and orch., Kullervo, based on Finn. nat. epic Kalevala. This had great success in Helsinki, 1892, but was withdrawn and not perf. again until after composer's death, when it was found to contain, amid immaturities, many indications of the later Sibelius. In the period 1893--7 he wrote the 4 Kalevala Legends about the hero Lemminkäinen and in 1892 the highly original tone-poem En Saga, a theme of which was taken from a student str. octet. In 1897 the Finnish state voted Sibelius an annual pension (increased in 1926) to enable him to concentrate solely on comp. His tone-poem Finlandia, which became almost a nat. emblem, dates from 1899, the year of his first visit to It. He had by then completed his First Sym., which blends Sibelian originality with a Slav romanticism derived from Tchaikovsky. The 2nd Sym. (1902), while still classical in outline, contains more of Sibelius's individual use of short themes gradually building into a larger whole, his fondness for ostinati, and his predilection for long, atmospheric str. passages (often inevitably likened to the Finnish wind) and for unusual and effective grouping of instr., esp. woodwind. The vn. conc. was written in 1903, its warm middle movement reflecting the It. visit, and rev. 1905 when Strauss cond. it in Berlin. The 3rd Sym., often regarded as traditional but one of the most original of the 7, followed in 1904--7. It is ded. to Bantock, one of his earliest Eng. champions. Sibelius first visited Eng. in 1905, conducting the 2nd Sym. in Liverpool. In Nov. 1907 Mahler visited him in Helsinki and they had a famous conversation in which they expressed their contrasted views of the sym. For Mahler it was 'the world---it must embrace everything'; for Sibelius, it was the 'profound logic creating a connection between all the motifs' and the 'severity of style' which were the attractions. His 4th Sym. (1911) is indeed the antithesis of the Mahlerian symphony, epigrammatic, austere (but not lacking passion), economically scored, the whole work severely concentrated. Its introspective character, like that of the str. qt. Voces Intimae of 1908--9, is possibly attributable to his fear that a throat ailment from which he suffered at that period might be cancer. In 1914 he visited the USA, conducting at the Norfolk Fest., Conn., and taking a new symphonic poem, The Oceanides. On return to Finland he was isolated by World War I but celebrated his 50th birthday by composing the 5th Sym., later much rev. This work, in the heroic key of Eb major, is among his most popular works, summing up all the familiar Sibelian characteristics and possessing a strong emotional power. After the war he revisited London in 1921 and in 1923 completed his 6th Sym., the most 'pastoral' and elusive of the set, with modal harmonies and a flavour of his admiration for Palestrina. In 1924 he finished the 7th Sym., compressed into 1 movement but with the conventional 4 symphonic movements easily recognizable. This was followed by incid. mus. for The Tempest. Another tone-poem, Tapiola, commissioned by the NY Sym. Soc., appeared in 1926. He wrote some male chs., and some pieces for vn. and pf., and 2 pieces for org. in 1931. Thereafter, though he is said to have written and destroyed an 8th Sym., he never pubd. another note in the remaining 26 years of his life. Yet despite this silence he remained a dominating figure, elevated to heroic status in his own country, in Eng., and the USA, but not in Ger. or Fr. In Eng. in the 1930s he was regarded by many composers as almost the only worthwhile figure in contemporary mus. and this effectively closed Eng. ears to Schoenberg, Berg, Webern, and to a large extent Stravinsky, until a rearguard action was fought on their behalf coincident with Sibelius's death. His reputation then suffered an exaggerated relapse, but a more balanced view of his highly original and rewarding style, particularly in the syms., now prevails. His mastery of the orch. has overshadowed the beauty of his choral works and his songs. Like Elgar, he wrote a good deal of lighter music of high worth and his incidental mus. is among the finest in existence. The picture of him as an ascetic, bleak figure is not supported by the facts of his far from austere life, nor is the mus. the 'cold, forbidding' art which some writers have portrayed. His place in symphonic development is assured, particularly if he is regarded as complementary to Mahler and the late romantics rather than as the antithesis. Prin. works:

Siciliano (a) (It.), Sicilienne (Fr.). Sicilian. Type of dance, song, or instr. piece, presumably of Sicilian origin, in compound duple or quadruple time and with a swaying rhythm, often in minor key. Usually pastoral in character and popular in 18th cent. 'Pastoral symphony' in Handel's Messiah is alla siciliana. Style uncommon after 18th cent., but Fauré used siciliano as 3rd entr'acte of his incidental music to Pelléas et Mélisande (1898).

Siegfried Idyll. Comp. for orch. by Wagner, comp. 1870 as birthday gift for his wife Cosima and f.p. on Christmas morning 1870, her 33rd birthday, and twice later in same day. F.p. by about 15 musicians, incl. Hans Richter (who learned tpt. specially for the occasion), cond. Wagner, standing outside Cosima's bedroom in their villa at Tribschen on shore of Lake Lucerne. Orig. scoring was for a few str., fl., ob., 2 cl., tpt., 2 hn., and bn., but Wagner later scored it for larger orch. Material is based on themes from unfinished str. qt., comp. 1864 when Wagner met Cosima, motifs from opera Siegfried, on Act III of which he was working in 1869 when their son Siegfried was born, and a lullaby he had noted (or comp.) in 1868. MS. ded. stated: 'Tribsch Idyll, with Fidi's Bird-Song and Orange Sunrise, presented as a Symphonic Birthday Greeting to his Cosima by her Richard, 1870.' 'Fidi' was domestic name for Siegfried, the 'orange sunrise' referred to memory of how the sunrise lit up the orange wallpaper on the morning of his birth. The Idyll was never intended for public perf., but financial hardship compelled Wagner to sell it in 1877 and it was pubd. 1878.

Siegfrieds Tod (Siegfried's Death). Proposed opera by Wagner, lib. of which he wrote in 1848. From it developed the scheme for a 4-opera cycle on the legend of Siegfried and the Nibelung's Ring. Siegfrieds Tod, much rev., eventually became Götterdämmerung (f.p. Bayreuth 1876).

Most Eng.-speaking countries now use systems based on movable doh or fixeddoh.

Signal horn. Another name for bugle.

Signature. A 'sign' placed at the opening of a comp. or of a section of a comp., indicating the key (Key Signature) or the value of the beat and the no. of beats in each measure (Time Signature). The key signature consists of one or more sharps or flats; the time signature usually of figures resembling a fraction, e.g.  $\frac{3}{4}$ .

Signature-Tune. A term which gained currency in the 1920s with the growing popularity of dance-bands, especially when broadcasting. As a means of quick identification, each band began and ended its perf. with a tune, known as the 'signature tune'. Most bands used one tune, e.g. Jack Payne's Say it with music, but some used one tune at the beginning and another 'to sign off', e.g. Henry Hall played It's just the time for dancing at the start and Here's to the next time at the end. Individual variety artists introduced their acts with a signature-tune; and if one wished to be facetious, one could say that the leitmotiv of characters in Wagner's Ring are their 'signature-tunes'.

Sinfonia (It.). Symphony. (1) Symphony. (2) Bach's term for his 3-part inventions. (3) Name given in Baroque period to orch. piece which served as 3-movement introduction to opera, suite, or cantata, i.e. an early form of ov. Operatic sinfonia standardized c.1690 by A. Scarlatti into so-called 'Italian overture'. (4) In 20th cent., often means a chamber orch., e.g. Northern Sinfonia, English Sinfonia.

Sinfonia Antarctica (Antarctic Symphony). Title given by Vaughan Williams to his 7th sym. for orch., sop. solo, and women's ch., f.p. Manchester 1953. Work based on mus. composed 1947--8 for film Scott of the Antarctic, about Capt. Scott's last expedition to S. Pole, 1910--12. Score contains part for wind-machine.

Sinfonia Concertante. Term preferred to conc. by Haydn, Mozart, and others, for comp. for more than one solo instr. and orch., e.g. Mozart's for vn. and va. In 20th cent. Walton, Williamson, and others have used the term even where only one solo instr. is employed, to imply that solo part is more closely integrated with orch. than in a 'display' conc.

Sinfonia da Requiem. Orch. work in 3 movements, Op. 20, by Britten, comp. 1940 in memory of his parents. F.p. NY 1941, London 1942. Commissioned by Japanese Govt. to celebrate (spurious) 2,600th anniversary of Mikado's dynasty in 1940, and furiously rejected because of work's reference to terms from R.C. liturgy, e.g. Dies Irae.

Sinfonia Eroica (Beethoven). See Eroica Symphony.

Sinfonia Espansiva (Expansive Symphony). Sub-title of Nielsen's 3rd Sym., Op. 27, comp. 1910--11. F.p. Copenhagen 1912, cond. Nielsen; f. Eng. p. 1937 (broadcast), London (public) 1962. Sop. and bar. solo vv. used. Sinfonia Sacra. Sym. by Panufnik, comp. 1963, f.p. Monte Carlo, cond. Frémaux 1964.

In finale 12 tpts. are used. (2) Small sym. orch., such as Bournemouth Sinfonietta, London Sinfonietta, etc.

Singakademie (Ger.). Singing-school. Choir founded in Berlin 1791 by Fasch. Mendelssohn cond. it in 1829 revival of Bach's St Matthew Passion. Name has been appropriated by other choirs.

Singing. Mus.-making by the human v. either solo or with others. Styles of singing and methods of v. prod. have varied over the centuries. In 14th and 15th cents., use of falseletot was favoured, hence high range of much mus. of that era; in 17th and 18th cents., the castrati imparted special brilliance, purity, and flexibility to operatic roles, qualities inherited by the bel canto singers of early 19th cent. opera (Bellini, Donizetti, Rossini, etc.). In the 19th cent. the growing expressive and dramatic nature of mus., e.g. the works of Beethoven, Berlioz, Verdi, Wagner, etc., led to a new style of singing in which vocal characterization was regarded as of more importance than mere technical agility. In 20th cent., with jazz, Sprechstimme, and a host of effects required by avant-garde composers, the demands on singers' virtuosity and versatility became even heavier. At the same time, revival of interest in early and baroque mus. restored styles of earlier centuries.

Singing Saw. Ordinary handsaw held between player's knees and played on by a vn. bow (or, more rarely, struck with a drumstick); its blade is meanwhile bent, under a lesser or greater tension, by the player's left hand, so producing different pitches.

Singspiel (Ger.). Song-play. Type of opera, Ger. equivalent of dramma per musica, which developed c. 1700, term orig. being applied to all operas. From c. 1750, Singspiel implied an opera with spoken dialogue, comparable to Eng. ballad-opera and Fr. opéra comique, e.g. those by Hiller and Benda. Zenith was reached with Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail, 1782 and Die Zauberflöte, 1791. Beethoven's Fidelio is technically a Singspiel, but term generally implies a comic or light subject.

Sinigaglia, Leone (b Turin, 1868; d Turin, 1944). It. composer. Pupil of Mandyczewski in Vienna and Dvořák in Prague, 1900--1. Rare among It. composers of his day in writing no opera. Sir John in Love. Opera in 4acts by Vaughan Williams to his own lib. based on Shakespeare's The Merry Wives of Windsor (1600--01), with interpolations from other Elizabethan dramatists. Comp. 1924--8. Score quotes several folk-songs, incl. Greensleeves, which is sung by Mrs. Ford in Act III. Prod. London (RCM) 1929, NY (Columbia Univ.) 1949, London (SW) 1946. See also In Windsor Forest.

Sir Roger de Coverley. Eng. country dance to tune of uncertain orig. (being variant of The Maltman, a Scottish tune sometimes called Roger the Cavalier). First printed by Playford, 1685. Arrs. by Grainger, Bridge, etc. Sistrum. Ancient type of rattle used in worship of goddess Isis, comprising rings or bells which jingled on a metal frame when shaken by handle. Sometimes called for by 19th-cent. composers.

Sitar. Indian long-necked lute, with 18 movable frets and wooden body. Orig. had 3 str., but 4 to 7 now common (5 melody and 2 drone if the latter). Nine to 13 or more sympathetic under-str. increase resonance. Played with plectrum worn on right forefinger or with fingernails. Popularized outside India in 1950s by virtuosity of Ravi Shankar.

Sivori, (Ernesto)[fy65,3] Camillo (b Genoa, 1815; d Genoa, 1894). It. violinist and composer. Pupil of Paganini, who wrote sonatas for him. Played in Paris 1827, London 1828, thereafter touring Europe extensively. Visited N. and S. Amer. 1846--50. Retired 1870. Had amazing technique but small tone. Wrote vn. concs., vn. pieces, Souvenir de Norma, etc.

Orch. versions by Rudolf Escher and Erich Schmid.

Six-Four Chord. 2nd inversion of a chord, e.g. C major chord with G in bass.

Six, Les (Fr.). The Six. Name applied by Fr. mus. critic Henri Collet in 1920 to group of young Fr. composers who, under influence of Satie and Cocteau, had achieved notoriety for their advanced ideas. They were Auric, Durey, Honegger, Milhaud, Poulenc, and Tailleferre. However, they soon went their separate ways and did not long operate as a group.

Sixteenth Note. The note [xf;Yc|rf (semiquaver). Its rest is notated ;Yo.

Sixth. Interval in melody or harmony, encompassing 6 degrees of the major or minor scale, counting bottom and top notes. Major 6th is distance, for instance, from C upto A, minor 6th (semitone less) from C up to Ab, augmented 6th (semitone more) from C up to A#. See Neapolitan 6th.

Sixty-Fourth Note. The note [xf;ye|rf (hemidemi[ol10]semiquaver). Rest is notated [xf;yq|rf.

Sizzle Cymbal. Cymbal with 5 or 6 small jingles (sizzlers) loosely attached to its upper surface. Played with special type of side-drumstick.

Skalkottas, Nikolaos (Nikos) (b Chalkis, 1904; d Athens, 1949). Greek composer and violinist. Studied at Athens Cons. 1914--20 and from 1921--33 in Berlin, being comp. pupil of Weill, Jarnach, and, most important, Schoenberg (1927--31). Studied vn. with Willy Hess, 1921--3. Returned to Gr. 1933, where his mus. attracted little attention and he comp. mainly in secret, working as back-desk orch. violinist. Collected Greek folk mus. After his death, committee was formed to promote interest in and publication of his mus., much of which was written in the 12-note system, but after 1938 was often freely atonal. Works incl.:

Sketch (Ger. Skizze; Fr. esquisse). (1) Short piece, usually for pf. and often pictorial in intention, e.g. 'Woodland Sketch'. (2) Composer's preliminary jottings out of which work is built, of great fascination to mus. scholars as showing workings of composer's mind (e.g. Beethoven's sketchbooks show how a comp. went through many stages over several years).

Skram, Knut (b Hjørundfjord, 1937). Norweg. bar. Studied Wiesbaden and Rome. Sang with Norwegian Opera, Oslo, from 1964. Glyndebourne from 1969. Also Lieder singer (esp. Strauss).

Skrowaczewski, Stanislaw (b Lwów, 1923). Polish-born cond. and composer (Amer. cit. from 1963). Studied at Lwów Acad., Kraków Cons., and in Paris with Boulangier. Early career as pianist until injury. Comp. 4 syms., str. qt., film scores, and songs, but became known as cond.: Wrocław P.O. 1946--7, Katowice Nat. P.O. 1949--54, Kraków P.O. 1955--6, Warsaw Nat. P.O. 1957--9. Amer. débüt Cleveland Orch. 1958. Mus. dir. Minneapolis (later Minnesota) S.O. 1960--79. Prin. cond. Hallé Orch. from 1984.

Skryabin, Alexander (Nikolayevich) (b Moscow, 1872; d Moscow, 1915). Russ. composer and pianist, son of a lawyer and his wife who was a brilliant pianist. Prodigy pianist; enrolled in Moscow Cadet School but studied pf. with N. S. Zverev. Entered Moscow Cons. 1888, studying pf. with Safonov and comp. with Taneyev and Arensky. While at the cons., attracted notice of the publisher Belayev who issued his early comps. under generous terms and in 1896 sponsored Skryabin's tour of Europe as pianist in his own works. Prof. of pf., Moscow Cons., 1898--1903, an occupation with which he became increasingly bored.

Settled in Switz. 1903 when former pupil settled annuity on him. Toured USA 1906--7 and found new publisher and champion in Koussevitzky. Since 1905 he had been under the influence of Mme. Blavatsky's theosophy and mystical influences; regarded his works from that date as preparation for a 'supreme ecstatic mystery' which would accompany a final cataclysm. Toured Russ. 1910 with Koussevitzky's orch. and in 1911 perf. his works with Mengelberg and Concertgebouw Orch. of Amsterdam. Visited London 1914 for perf. of his Prometheus under Wood and to play his pf. conc. and give recitals. Toured Russ. 1914 then became ill, dying from septicaemia from tumour on his lip. Skryabin's early works are strongly flavoured by Chopin and Liszt. As he developed his personal theories he grew harmonically bolder in his pf. works, using chords built of 4ths and sometimes of 2nds, sometimes achieving what has been called 'impressionist atonality'. In his sym.-poem, Prometheus, and 7th pf. sonata, he developed the 'mystic' chord, a series of 4ths---C, F#, Bb, E, A, and D. This extreme chromaticism was combined with a strong feeling for classical form. His obsession with extra-mus. ideas has tended to divert attention from the undoubted excellent qualities of his mus. Prin. works:

orch: Syms.: No. 1 in E, with ch. (1899--1900, f.p. 1900), No. 2 in C minor (c. 1901, f.p. 1903), No. 3 in C, Bozhestvennaya poema (Divine Poem, 1902--4, f.p. 1905); Sym.-Poems: Poema ekstasa (Poem of Ecstasy, 1905--8, f.p. 1908), Prometei---Poema ogyna (Prometheus---The Poem of Fire, 1908--10, f.p. 1911); Pf. Conc. in F# minor (1896).

piano: Sonatas: No. 1 in F minor (1892), No. 2 in G# minor (Fantasy) (1892--7), No. 3 in F# minor (1897), No. 4 in F# (1903), No. 5 in F# (1907), No. 6 in G (1911), No. 7 in F# (White Mass) (1911), No. 8 in A (1913), No. 9 in F (Black Mass) (1913), No. 10 in C (1913); 24 Études; 85 Preludes; Concert Allegro in Bbminor; Waltzes, Impromptus, Mazurkas, etc.

Slavonic Dances. 2 sets of dances by Dvořák in folk-mus. style but 'original' in melody. Written for pf. duet, Nos. 1--8, Op. 46, in 1878, Nos. 9--16, Op. 72, in 1886. All orch. by Dvořák, inwhich form they are now usually heard.

Slavonic Rhapsodies. 3comps. for orch. by Dvořák, Op. 45, comp. 1878, in vein of folk-mus. but all 'original': No. 1 in D, No. 2 in G minor, No. 3 in Ab.

Sleeping Beauty, The (Spyashchaya krasavitsa). Ballet in prol. and 3 acts with mus. by Tchaikovsky to lib. by Petipa and Vsevolovsky, based on Perrault's fairy-tale, choreog. Petipa. Comp. 1888--9. Prod. St Petersburg 1890, London 1921 (under title The Sleeping Princess). Last act sometimes perf. separately as Aurora's Wedding. Additions to orig. choreog. by Ashton, 1968, and MacMillan 1973.

Slentando (It.). Becoming slower; same as rallentando.

Slezak, Leo (b Krásná Hora, 1873; d Egern am Tegernsee, 1946). Austro-Cz. ten. Studied with J. de Reszke in Paris 1908--9. Sang in ch. of Brno Opera, making début there 1896 as Lohengrin. Berlin Royal Opera 1898--9. Engaged by Mahler for Vienna Opera 1901, remaining until 1927 (when he was made hon. member and made occasional guest appearances until 1933). CG début 1900 (Lohengrin) and 1909 (Otello). NY Met. 1909--13 (singing Herman in Amer. première of Queen of Spades under Mahler, 1910). Guest singer in world's leading opera houses. Man of towering height with dramatic power and sense of humour to match. Fine Lieder singer. On retirement wrote several books and appeared in Austrian films as comedian. His son Walter was in several Hollywood films and in Die Fledermaus at NY Met.

Slide. (1) In vn.-playing, expressive means of passing from one note to another, usually at distance of a 3rd or 4th. Paganini introduced virtuoso slide by executing chromatic passages, singly or in 3rds, with the same fingers. (2) Device fitted to wind instr. to adjust the pitch by altering length of vibrating air-column. Mainly used on tb. (3) An ornament; when 2 or more notes approach main note by conjunct motion.

Slide Trumpet. Mechanism, as in the tb., was fitted to tpts. as early as 15th cent. Bach probably meant this instr. when he scored for tromba da tirarsi. At beginning of 19th cent. new device was invented with springs to bring back slide to normal position. This lacked agility and became obsolete on invention of valve tpt.

Slobodskaya, Oda (b Vilno, 1888; d London, 1970). Russ. sop. Studied St Petersburg. Opera début there 1918 in Queen of Spades (Lisa). Left Russia for Paris 1922. London début 1931 (CG 1932). Slur. Curved line used in musical notation to group together notes. Most common indication is that notes concerned are to be played or sung smoothly (legato). For a str.-player, this signifies that the notes should be taken in one stroke of the bow, for a wind-player or singer that they should be taken in one breath. If notes within slur have dots above or below, this means they are to be played slightly detached. Slurs also used in vocal mus. to indicate that one syllable is to be sung to several notes.

Smetana, Bedřich (b Litomysl, 1824; d Prague, 1884). Bohem. composer, pianist, and cond., regarded as the founder of Czech mus. Played in str.qt. at age 5, pf. recital at 6, and wrote first comp. at 8. Settled in Prague in 1843, working as teacher to aristocratic family while having lessons from J. Proksch. Heard Liszt play and became close friend. Took part in fighting at barricades during abortive 1848 nationalist uprising. Set up mus. sch. but in 1856 went to Sweden as dir. of Göteborg Phil. Soc. Visited Liszt in Weimar and comp. 3 symphonic poems on Lisztian lines, incl. Wallenstein's Camp (1858–9). Returned to Prague 1861 but, through financial instability, toured Europe as concert pianist until 1863, coinciding with reawakening of Cz. nationalist fervour after Austria's defeat by Hungary. Became cond. of a Prague choral soc. and critic for daily newspaper. His patriotic opera The Brandenburgers in Bohemia, was prod., after much controversy, at Prague Provisional Th. (est. 1862) in 1866 and won him public success. Smetana was appointed cond. of the th. and dir. f.p. of The Bartered Bride (1866), which was a triumph. For laying of foundation-stone of permanent Prague Nat. Th. in 1868 he comp. the opera Dalibor. This was failure and was criticized as insufficiently nationalist because of Wagnerian influences on score. Resigned conductorship of Provisional Th. in 1874 because of total deafness, the result of venereal disease. Over next 5 years comp. his cycle of 6 symphonic poems Má Vlast (My Country) and in 1876 wrote his E minor str. qt. subtitled 'From My Life', in which the high-pitched note heard in finale represents the noise in his head which he experienced continually during onset of deafness. Living in isolation in the country, he comp. choral pieces and 2 operas The Kiss and The Secret. During 1880s nat. celebrations marked his achievement and his opera Libusín was chosen to inaugurate Prague Nat. Th. in 1881. Encouraged, comp. last opera, The Devil's Wall, but this was a failure in 1882, though it contains some of his best mus. He worked on Viola, an adaptation of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night which had occupied him for many years, but wrote only 363 bars before he became insane and died in asylum. Smetana was buried as a nat. hero. With The Bartered Bride he wrote the incomparable masterpiece of folk-opera. His other operas had to wait until many years after his death for a proper appreciation of their virtues. Inevitably there was a Germanic influence on his work, since he grew up under Austrian domination of Czech culture, but although Janáček and later composers are more truly 'Czech', the ground was furrowed by Smetana, and his mus. has freshness and strength which ensure its popularity. Prin. works:

operas: The Brandenburgers in Bohemia (Branibori u Akčního Cecháče) (1863); The Bartered Bride (Prodaná Neves; stá) (1863–6, rev. 1869 and 1870); Dalibor (1865–7, rev. 1870); Libušín (1869–72); The Two Widows (Dvě vdovy) (1873–4, rev. 1877, 1882); The Kiss (Hubička) (1875); The Secret (Tajemství) (1877–8); The Devil's Wall (Abertová Steň) (1879–82); Viola (unfinished, 1874, 1883–4).

Sonata (It., sounded, from suonare, to sound; Fr., Ger. Sonate). Instr. comp. for pf., or for other instr(s). with pf. acc., e.g. vc. sonata, fl. sonata, in several movements (sometimes in one, as in Liszt's B minor pf. sonata). Formal features of the sonata are found in other instr. comps., such as sym., qt., trio, but the term sonata is usually reserved for works involving not more than 2 performers. The sonata originated in the 16th cent., when it meant anything not sung but played. During early part of 17th cent., comps. for instr. ens., which were divided into 5 or more contrasting sections were known as sonatas. From these the baroque sonata developed, having 3--6 movements like a suite, and taking 2 forms, the sonata da camera ('chamber sonata', often for 2 or more players with kbd. acc., in dance rhythms) and sonata da chiesa ('church sonata', of more serious character). The earliest sonatas for kbd. alone are by Salvatore and Kuhnau, and these reached their apogee with D. Scarlatti and C. P. E. Bach. Later in that century, the Viennese classical sonata of Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven, usually but not invariably in 3 movements, marked the greatest period in the development of the form, leading to the superb romantic era. Like the orch. sym., the sonata remains the most important form for 1 or 2 instr., and the majority of important 20th-cent. composers have written them. Most sonatas are written in sonata-form or a version of it. The Haydn/Mozart sonata is usually in 3 movements, allegro--andante--allegro. Beethoven introduced the minuet (later scherzo), as 3rd movement, but in his Op. 111 pf. sonata he anticipated the 1-movement sectional structure adopted by later composers. The last movement of a 3- or 4-movement sonata is often in sonata or rondo form, or is sometimes a set of variations. Some 20th-cent. composers have revived 18th-cent. application of term to works for several instr., e.g. Walton's Sonata for Strings and C. Matthews's Sonata for orch. The fact is that a sym. is a sonata for orch., a str. qt. a sonata for 4 str. instr., etc.

Sonata da Camera (It.). Chamber sonata. Baroque type of sonata, the term originally indicating place (i.e. court, chamber), rather than type, of perf. Had several dance-like movements for 2 or 3 str. players with kbd. acc. Corelli standardized the form as a suite consisting of introduction, followed by 3 or 4 dances.

Sonata da Chiesa (It.). Church sonata. Like the sonata da camera, but of a more serious character appropriate to ecclesiastical surroundings. The standard Corelli sonata da chiesa is in 4 movements, slow--fast--slow--fast.

Sonata Form. Type of mus. construction (sometimes known as compound binary form) normally used in first movement of a sonata, sym., or conc. (and in other types of work). Used also in other movements. Regular sonata form implies 3 sections: 1. Exposition (containing first subject, in tonic key, and 2nd subject, in dominant, and sometimes further subjects), often repeated and followed by 2. Development (in which the material of the Exposition is worked out in a kind of free fantasia), and 3. Recapitulation (in which the Exposition is repeated, though often with modification, and with the 2nd subject now in the tonic). The Recapitulation has a coda, a peroration of moderate length though some composers, incl. Beethoven, extend it into what amounts to a 2nd Development section. The basis of sonata form is key relationships.

Sonata Rondo. Movement designed as combination of sonata and rondo form (e.g. finale of Beethoven's 8th Sym.). Outline is: Exposition (A|B|A, i.e. first subject in tonic; rondo theme; 2nd subject in dominant or another key; first subject in tonic), Development (C), Recapitulation (A|B|A, i.e. rondo first subject in tonic; 3rd episode, with 2nd subject now in tonic; rondo theme leading to coda). There are many variants.

Sonatina (It.; Fr. sonatine). Little sonata. A short sonata, usually lighter and easier (but several 20th-cent. sonatinas, e.g. by Ravel, Milhaud, Busoni, etc. are technically difficult).

Sondheim, Stephen (Joshua) (b NY, 1930). Amer. composer and lyric-writer. Studied Williams College, Mass. Wrote lyrics for Bernstein's West Side Story (1957) and for Jule Styne's Gypsy (1959). Comp. successful musicals incl. A Little Night Music (1973), Company (1970), Pacific Overtures (1976), and Sweeney Todd (1979), writing words and mus.

Sonetti di Petrarca, Tre (3 Petrarch Sonnets). 3 songs by Liszt (1839) which he later transcr. for pf. as Nos. 4--6 of the Seconde Année (Italie) of Années de pèlerinage (1837--49).

Song. Short vocal comp., acc. or solo. Song is the natural human means of mus. self-expression (as it is for most birds). There are various types of song--the individual folk-song, the part-song for a group of vv., the art-song for the trained performer. Today a 'song recital' generally means an evening of Eng. songs (mus. settings of poems), Ger. Lieder, or Fr. chansons. In opera the term aria or air is preferred to 'song' for a solo vocal item. Many composers, Berlioz, Mahler, Strauss, Elgar, Britten, Shostakovich, etc.--have written songs with orch., and the term is sometimes applied to a large-scale piece, e.g. Song of the Earth (Mahler) and Song of Destiny (Brahms). Probably prehistoric man uttered some sort of song, and the origins of folk-songs are beyond discovery (though not beyond speculation!). Synagogue and church were among the official institutions where song developed, through chants and hymns, some of the latter being adaptations of folk and popular songs. With 12th-cent. minstrels and troubadours, the love-song and ballad developed, to be followed in the 14th and 15th cents. by songs of the Ger. Minnesinger and Meistersinger. By the end of the 15th cent., following the revolution of Ars Nova, song colls., many of them polyphonic settings, were pubd. in several countries. In Eng. in the 16th and 17th cents. the lute-songs, exemplified by Dowland and the madrigals of Weelkes and Byrd, in Sp. the lute-songs of Milán, and in It. the madrigals of Monteverdi and others all played a significant role in the growth of elaborate song-writing. Ger. developed the Lied, beginning with Hassler and Abert, and continuing through Mozart and Beethoven to the great flowering of Schubert, who more than any composer made the song a mus. form into which as much emotional and dramatic expression could be poured as into a sym. Some of his songs are strophic, i.e. repeating the tune in successive stanzas, others are 'through-composed' (durchkomponiert), i.e. developing freely from start to finish. Schubert was followed by Schumann, Brahms, Wolf, Loewe, Marx, Mahler, Strauss, Pfitzner, and others. In Fr., Duparc, Debussy, and especially Fauré developed the chanson in as distinctive and complex a fashion as the great Germans developed the Lied. Indeed, in the 19th and 20th cents., composers in Eng., Sp., USA, Russia, Hungary, etc. have added masterpieces to the world's treasury of song. Nor should the immense world of 'popular song', from 19th-cent. mus.-hall songs to today's 'pop' songs be forgotten, ignored, or under-rated. Bravethe man who will make a didactic value-judgment between Dives and Lazarus, Gretchen am Spinnrade, and Smoke gets in your eyes.

Song-cycle (Ger. Liederkreis). Set of songs grouped into an artistic unity by the composer in a particular order and referring to a particular theme---love, death, jealousy, nature, etc.---or telling a story, or both. Examples are Beethoven's An die ferne Geliebte, Schubert's Winterreise, Schumann's Frauenliebe und -Leben, Mahler's Kindertotenlieder, Berlioz's Les Nuits d'été, Elgar's Sea Pictures, Vaughan Williams's On Wenlock Edge, Britten's Nocturne, etc. Some of the above are with pf. acc., some with chamber ens., and some with orch. Coprario's Funeral Teares (1606) is one of the earliest, if not the earliest, song-cycles.

Song-form. Another, if misleading, name for ordinary ternary form as generally applied in an instr. slow movement.

Spinet (Fr. épinette; It. spinetta). Small type of early kbd. instr. of hpd. family in which str. ran diagonally in front of player or more or less parallel to kbd. as on virginals. Often made in uneven 6-sided shape with kbd. on longest side. Normally one set of str. and 4-octave compass. The name 'spinet' is indiscriminately applied to a no. of plucked kbd. instr. First mentioned 1496. A theory is that it was named after Giovanni Spina, an instr.-maker active in late 15th cent., another that the name derives from its thorn-like plectra, spinetta being diminutive of spina, a thorn. The 19th-cent. square pf. is often incorrectly called a spinet.

Spiritual. Folk-hymn which developed during Amer. religious revival of c.1740 and took its name from 'spiritual song', the term by which publishers distinguished it from hymns and metrical psalms. Negroes attended revivalist meetings and their characteristic adaptations of spirituals became the religious folk-songs of the Amer. Negro, e.g. Swing low, sweet chariot, Go down Moses, Deep River, etc. Became prominent c.1871 in concerts by Fisk Jubilee Singers, but even better known in 20th cent. through singing of Paul Robeson and Marian Anderson. Dvořák was deeply touched by Negro spirituals, though their influence on his Amer. works is arguable; and Tippett used some very effectively as chorales in his oratorio A Child of Our Time.

Spisak, Michal (b Dąbrowa Górnica, 1914; d Paris, 1965). Polish composer. Studied Warsaw and in Paris 1937 with Boulanger. Settled in Fr. Works incl. bn. conc., Divertimento for 2 pf. and orch., pf. conc., 2-pf. conc., chamber mus., pf. pieces.

Appointed court cond. for life at Hesse-Kassel 1822 (gen. mus. dir. from 1847). Completed vn. method 1831. Early champion of Wagner, conducting Der fliegende Holländer at Kassel 1843 and Tannhäuser 1853. Spohr's operas were successful in their day (and Faust was successfully revived in London, 1984), but it is the melodic charm of his chamber mus. and his vn. concs. which has principally led to a moderate revival of interest in his work. Prin. comps.:

operas: Der Zweikampf mit der Geliebten (1811), Faust (1813, rev. 1852), Zemire und Azor (1819), Jessonda (1823), Der Alchymist (1830).

orch: Symphonies: No. 1 in Eb, No. 2 in D minor, No. 3 in C minor, No. 4 (Die Weihe der Töne, The Power of Sound), No. 5 in C minor, No. 6 in G (Historical Symphony), No. 7 in C (Double Symphony, Irdisches und Göttliches in Menschenleben), No. 8 in G minor, No. 9 in B minor (The Seasons); 6 ovs.; Waltzes.

Spontini, Gaspare (Luigi Pacifico) (b Majolati, Ancona, 1774; d Majolati, 1851). It. composer. Studied Naples Cons. Some church mus. earned him opera commission for Rome, 1796. 5 other operas followed. Went to Paris 1803, meeting with barely moderate success until the triumph of La Vestale in 1807. Became cond. of It. Opera in Paris 1810, improving standards and giving f. Paris p. of Mozart's Don Giovanni in its orig. form. Dismissed 1812, but reinstated 1814. Cond., Berlin Court Opera 1819. There, too, his tenure was stormy and controversial, partly because his quick temper and pompous manner made him hard to work with, and partly because he continued to promote his own Italianate works in the face of the new enthusiasm for Ger. romantic opera engendered by the success of Weber's Der Freischütz. When his royal patron died in 1840, Spontini was dismissed in 1841 but generously treated. Thereafter he lived chiefly in Paris until returning to his native village, to whose poor he left all his property. Operas incl.: Li puntigli delle donne (1796), L'eroismo ridicolo (1798), Il finto pittore (1800), La fuga in maschera (1800), La finta filosofa (1799), Milton (1804), La Vestale (1807), Fernand Cortez (1809), Olympie (1819), Nurmahal (1822), Alcidor (1825), Agnes von Hohenstaufen (1829). Fest. pageant: Lalla Rookh (1821). Most of Spontini's operas were rev. several times. Some have been perf. in It. since 1945. Sprechgesang, Sprechstimme (Ger.). Spoken song, speech-song. Type of vocal perf. between speech and song. First used by Humperdinck in first version of his opera Königskinder (1897), where singers were told to approximate the pitches but were doubled by instr. playing exact pitches. Schoenberg used the idea in his Gurrelieder (1900--11), in Die glückliche Hand (1910--13), and especially in Pierrot Lunaire (1912) and in his opera Moses und Aron (1930--2). Berg used the device in Wozzeck, and many others have used it since. Schoenberg was liberal in his attitude to manner of perf., as his recording of Pierrot Lunaire shows. In general usage, Sprechgesang is the term for the vocal technique, Sprechstimme for the v.-part employing it. A well-known example of Sprechgesang is that of Rex Harrison (and his successors) as Prof. Higgins in My Fair Lady.

Springer (Norweg.). (1) Norweg. folk-dance in  $\frac{3}{4}$  time, used in their mus. by Grieg and Svendsen. (2)(Ger. Nachsenschlag). Ornament in which an extra note, indicated in smaller mus.-type, takes part of the preceding note's time-value, i.e. the opposite of appoggiatura.

Spring Sonata (Frühlingssonate). Nickname given by someone other than Beethoven to his Sonata in F, Op. 24, for vn. and pf. (1801) -- the name is not inappropriate.

Spring Song (Frühlingslied). Unauthorized name for Mendelssohn's Lied ohne Worte, No. 30 in A, Op. 62, No. 6.

Spring Symphony, A. Choral work, Op. 44, by Britten for sop., cont., and ten. soloists, ch., boys' choir, and orch. Setting of poems by Herrick, Auden, Barnefield, Peele, Blake, Beaumont, Fletcher, Nashe, Vaughan, Spenser, Clare, Milton and Anon. F. p. Amsterdam 1949, f. London p. 1950.

Studied comp. 1950 with Frank Martin and began his own analytical studies of Schoenberg, Bartók, and Webern. At Darmstadt tint. summer school 1951 met Messiaen and Boulez. At this time he wrote his Kreuzspiel for pf., ob., bass cl., and perc. Lived in Paris 1952--3, studying with Messiaen. Worked in musique concrète studios of Fr. Radio and experimented with use of elec. tone generators. In 1953 returned to Cologne, becoming assistant to Herbert Eimert in elec. mus. studio of W. Ger. Radio. Became dir. of the studio in 1963. From 1954 to 1956 studied phonetics and acoustics with W. Meyer-Eppler at Bonn Univ., this enabling him to have a complete understanding of his mus. material through ability to produce an infinite number of sounds and their permutations and to analyse them scientifically. In 1954 became ed. of new magazine for serial mus., Die Reihe, founded by Eimert. Gave first lecture-concerts in USA 1958 and since then has toured frequently as lecturer and cond. of small ens. Pupils from all over the world went to study with him and in 1957 he was appointed head of comp. courses at Darmstadt. Visiting prof. at several Amer. univs. Founded, 1963, Cologne Course for

New Mus., teaching comp. until 1968. Prof. of comp., Cologne Musik-Hochschule from 1971. Collected writings pubd. in several vols. Few composers of the 20th-cent. 'New Music' can approach Stockhausen in the length and extent of his studies for his task. The first and strongest influence on his development was the mus. of Webern. Through detailed and profound analysis of Webern's mus., he realized how much further he could take Webern's techniques. He evolved the theory of 'parameters' or dimensions of sound: pitch, intensity, duration, timbre, and position in space. As Webern had serialized pitches, so Stockhausen in his early works serialized each parameter. Webern's method of composing with small 'cells' of motifs was developed by Stockhausen into what he called 'group composition', a group being a slice of mus. time (the larger groups are called 'moments'). How various groups are inter-related decides the formal design of a work. The culmination of this period came in 1961--4 with Momente. The next step was a new attitude to mus. mobility, whereby the order of self-contained groups could be varied so that mus. continuity could be altered. The 11th (1956) of his series of pf. works Klavierstücke is in mobile form, the groups being playable in any order the performer selects. In Zyklus (1959) for solo percussionist, the performer may start at any of its 17 pages and go on until he returns to his starting-point (he may read from left to right or turn over the score and go from right to left). The element of chance in these works means that no 2 perfs. are ever likely to be identical. In elec. mus., Stockhausen explored the spatial parameter (and transferred the same procedures to live mus. in his Gruppen for 3 orchs.). He began to specify the procedures--- placing and use of microphones, etc.---for producing sounds, sometimes, as in Carré, calculating beforehand the basic materials and forms but leaving realization of details to someone else. In Prozession (1967), the mus. events are taken from various of his earlier comps. The whole concept of elec. mus. is still so strange to ears accustomed to the disciplines of instr. comp. that the majority of audiences find it beyond their ken. But Stockhausen has an enormous following. He is constantly re-examining his theories, restructuring his comps., and exploring new media, in contrast to Boulez who seems to have remained where he was 20 years earlier. He has reached a wide audience with such works as Gesang der Jünglinge, which combines elec. sounds with the v. of a boy sop. altered by echo-effects, filters, etc., and the Orient-inspired Stimmung, in which for 75 minutes 6 singers take up elec. tones coming from concealed speakers and create a trance-like but ever-shifting vocalization. Prin. works:

Returned to Eng. 1972, frequently conducting LSO. Made transcrs. of Bach (for large sym. orch.). Was a master of soundand put his stamp on every orch. he cond. Opinions differed on quality of that stamp, for he took unusual liberties (which included alterations to the composer's scoring) in order to obtain effects he required, but that he was a superb cond. can scarcely be denied. He was active to the day of his death.

Stoltzer, Thomas (b Schweidnitz, Silesia, c.1480--5; d Ofen, 1526). Ger. composer. Kapellmeister to King of Hungary from 1522. Wrote church mus. and a few secular songs.

Stolz, Robert (b Graz, 1880; d Berlin, 1975). Austrian composer, pianist, and cond. Son of mus. teacher and pianist, and great-nephew of Teresa Stolz. Studied at Vienna Cons. with R. Fuchs and later with Humperdinck. Toured Europe as pianist, playing Mozart at age 7. First comp. pubd. in Berlin, 1891. Succeeded Bodanzky as chief cond., Theater an der Wien, Vienna, 1905--17. Stop (as noun). (1) Row of pipes on org. (registers), all operated by handles or draw-stops placed near the player. Both the pipes and the handles are called stops. ^(2) Hpd. mechanism for similar purpose as org. stop, i.e. to vary tone-colour, simulate sounds of other instr., etc.

Stop (verb). (1) on str. instr., 'stopping' means the placing of the fingers on a str., thereby determining length of portion of str. which is to vibrate. Thus double-stopping, triple stopping, means this action on 2, 3 str. at once. (2) In hn.-playing, the insertion of a hand into the bell of the hn. to alter pitch and tone-quality of a note. (3) In orgs.: to block passage of air through one end of pipe (i.e. end-stopped pipe), thereby producing note an octave lower than would otherwise be sounded.

Storace, Anna (Selina) (orig. Nancy) (b London, 1765; d Dulwich, 1817). Eng. sop., daughter of It. father. Début as singer, Haymarket Th., London, 1774. Became pupil of Rauzzini, singing in 1777 at CG in oratorio and at Hereford Fest. Went to Venice 1778 to study with Sacchini. Sang in Florence 1780, Parma 1781, and Milan 1782. Engaged as prin. sop. at Imperial Th., Vienna, 1784. Created role of Susanna in Mozart's Le Nozze di Figaro, 1786. Returned to Eng., 1787, singing in It. comic operas. For her farewell perf. in Vienna, Mozart comp. concert aria Ch'io mi Scordi di te (K505) for sop., pf., and orch., and played kbd. part himself. She sang in her brother Stephen Storace's The Haunted Tower, 1789, thereafter confining herself to comic roles in Eng. works. Sang at Handel Fest. 1791. Became mistress of ten. Braham, bearing him a son, and touring Europe with him. CG 1801-8. Died very wealthy.

Storace, Stephen (b London, 1762; d London, 1796). Eng. composer, brother of Anna Storace. Child violinist. Studied in Naples from 1776. Joined his sister in It. when she arrived in 1778 and went with her to Vienna, where 2 of his operas, Gli sposi malcontenti (1785) and Gli equivoci (1786, with lib. by da Ponte), were prod. Friend of Mozart. Returned to Eng. 1787. Wrote series of dialogue-operas in which he incorporated popular airs and adapted other composers' mus. Among them were The Haunted Tower (1789), No Song, No Supper (1790), The Siege of Belgrade (1791), The Pirates (1792), The Prize (1793), Cherokee (1794), etc. His last full-scale opera, Dido, Queen of Carthage, was prod. at King's Th. in May 1792. Many of his scores were lost in the Drury Lane fire of 1809, but

The Pirates was reconstructed in 1975 by Richard Vardigans from vocal score and MS. lib. Gli equivoci, based on Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors, was revived in 1975 and showed that Storace's contemporary reputation was deserved.

Storchio, Rosina (b Venice, 1876; d Milan, 1945). It. soprano. Studied at Milan Cons., making her début there as Micaela in Carmen. Sang Sophie in Werther at La Scala 1895. Created title-role of Madama Butterfly 1904. Sang in Barcelona 1898--1923 and in Buenos Aires 1904--14. NY début 1921.

Stornello (It., plural Stornelli). A traditional type of Tuscan folk-song often improvised by a Stornellatore (masc.) or Stornellatrice (fem.). The stanza has 3 lines each of 11 syllables.

Straccinato (It.). Stretched out, i.e. ritardando.

Stradella, Alessandro (b Montefestino, 1644; d Genoa, 1682). It. composer. Taught singing in Venice and Rome. From 1658 was in service of Queen Christina of Sweden in Rome, composing motets for her. Wrote operas, oratorios, cantatas, all notable for richness of expression and instr. acc. Was murdered. Flotow's opera Alessandro Stradella (Hamburg 1844) is a romanticized and inaccurate account of events leading to his death.

Stradivari (Stradivarius). Family of vn.-makers of Cremona, N. Italy. The greatest of them was Antonio Stradivari (b 1644; d Cremona, 1737), apprenticed as youth to Nicola Amati, continuing connection with Amati's workshop to 1684. Inserted his own label into vn. 1666 (signing himself, as always afterwards, by Maltese cross and initials A. S. enclosed within double circle). After 1684, his work developed experimentally towards perfection of design and balance, leading in 1690 to invention of the 'Long Strad'. 1700--20 was Stradivari's 'golden period' during which he prod. a series of magnificent instr., inc. vcs. and vas., and those made in the last 17 years of his life show no decline in craftsmanship. He made his last vn. in 1737 at age 92. It is calculated in the standard work on Stradivari by the Hill brothers (1902, rev. 1909) that he made 1116 instruments after 1666 of which over 600 are still in existence. Many are known by names e.g. La Pucelle, Viotti, Alard, Messie, Rode, etc. He paid vigilant attention to detail and personally designed pegs, fingerboards, tailpieces, inlaid patterns, and bridges; he designed the cases and also made bows. His application of the varnish was unsurpassed, soft in texture and shading from orange to red. The tone of the instrs. varies, of course, but is generally a sop. tone compared with the more cont. Guarneri. Stradivari was assisted by his sons Francesco (b Cremona, 1671; d 1743) and Omobono (b Cremona, 1679; d 1742) and by Carlo Bergonzi. These instruments bore the label 'sotto la disciplina d'Antonio Stradivari' but in many cases these were later unscrupulously removed and a label substituted attributing the instr. to Stradivari himself. Hence the controversies over the authenticity of certain 'Strads', highly important in view of the high prices the genuine instr. can fetch.

Strambotto (It.). 'Rustic Song'. It. Renaissance poetical form, often set to mus. on the lines of the Frottola. Poem had 8 lines, rhyming abababcc; and the mus. setting was usually strophic, with only 2 lines set to mus. and repeated for each remaining pair. See also Rispetto.

Straniera, La (The Foreigner). Opera in 2 acts by Bellini to lib. by Romani. Prod. Milan 1829, London 1832, NY 1834.

Stransky, Josef (b Humpolec, Bohemia, 1872; d NY, 1936). Bohemian cond. Studied medicine, qualifying as doctor in Prague 1896. While at univ. also studied mus., becoming comp. pupil of Fuchs, Bruckner, and Dvořák in Vienna. Prin. cond., Landestheater, Prague, 1898, Hamburg 1903--10. Also cond. in Berlin, Dresden, London, Amsterdam, etc. Succeeded Mahler as cond. NY P.O. 1911, holding post until 1921. Retired 1925, going into art-dealing business. Wrote operas and other works, and adapted Berlioz's Béatrice et Bénédict. Figures in R. Strauss's opera Intermezzo as Stroh; he was the cond. for whom Strauss was mistaken by an importunate lady, thereby nearly precipitating Strauss's divorce.

Strascicando; strascinando; strascinato (It.). Dragging; dragged (e.g. heavily slurring notes in bowing, singing portamento, etc.).

Stratas, Teresa (orig. Anastasia Strataki) (b Tor- onto, 1938). Canadian sop. of Gr. parentage. Studied Toronto Royal Cons. and in NY. Opera début Toronto 1958 as Mimi in La Bohème. Won NY Met. opera auditions 1959, making her début at Met. in Oct. 1959. Excellent Mozart singer in roles such as Despina. Sang Lulu in f. complete p. of opera, Paris 1979, and is an impressive Salome.

Strathspey. Slow dance of Scotland, as the reel is its quick dance. Mus. is in simple quadruple time, with many dotted notes and some use of the Scotch Snap. Appeared in mid-18th cent.

Stratton, George (Robert) (b London, 1897; d London, 1954). Eng. violinist and cond. Studied GSM. Leader, LSO 1933--52, occasionally conducting it. Leader and founder, Stratton Qt. 1925--42. Prof. of vn., RCM, from 1942. Wrote book on playing of chamber mus. O.B.E. 1954.

Straube, Karl (b Berlin, 1873; d Leipzig, 1950). Ger. organist, cond., and teacher. Had Eng. mother. Studied in Berlin (organ with H. Reimann). Toured Ger. giving org. recitals 1894--7, winning high reputation. Organist, Thomaskirche, Leipzig (Bach's post) from 1902 and cond. of Leipzig Bach Soc. Prof. of org., Leipzig Cons., from 1907. Cantor of Thomasschule from 1918. Cond. several Bach Fests. 1904--23 and 1925 Handel Fest. which led to formation of Handel Soc. Friend of Reger and champion of his mus., as of that of other 20th-cent. composers, incl. Vaughan Williams and Holst. Ed. choral works of Bach and Handel, and organ works by Bach and Liszt.

Straus, Oscar (b Vienna, 1870; d Bad Ischl, 1954). Austrian-born composer (Fr. citizen from 1939). Studied in Vienna and with Bruch in Berlin. Cond. of th. orchs. in Ger. 1895--1900, then pianist for Wolzogen's Überbrett in Berlin, for which he comp. several pieces. Wrote orch. and chamber mus., but best known for operettas comp. between 1904 and 1926. Most successful of these were Ein Walzertraum (A Waltz Dream), Vienna 1907; Der tapfere Soldat, based on Shaw's Arms and the Man (1894), Vienna 1908, NY as The Chocolate Soldier 1909; and Der letzte Walzer (The Last Waltz), Vienna 1920. Left Berlin 1927, living mainly in Paris and USA until after 1945. His last success was with the music for the film La Ronde, 1950.

Strauss, Eduard I (b Vienna, 1835; d Vienna, 1916). Austrian composer and cond., youngest son of Johann Strauss I. Début as cond. 1862, succeeding brother Johann Strauss II at St Petersburg 1865. In 1872 took over conductorship of court balls which Johann had held since 1863. Took Straussorch. to London 1885, disbanded it 1901. Wrote over 300 dances, many of them polkas. In 1907 burned all original MSS. of Strauss family because he believed world no longer deserved to possess them. Thus many waltzes have been preserved only in pf. reductions.

Strauss, Eduard (Leopold Maria) [fy65,3]II (b Vienna, 1910; d Vienna, 1969). Austrian cond., nephew of J. Strauss III. Début 1949. Cond. Vienna S.O. in recordings and toured with Vienna Johann Strauss Orch.

Strauss, Franz Joseph (b Parkstein, 1822; d Munich, 1905). Ger. hn.-player and composer. Prin. hn., Munich Court opera orch. 1847--89. Taught at Munich Acad. until 1896. Cond. semi-professional orch. 1875--96. Though disliking Wagner's mus., played in several Wagner premières and was consulted by composer on Siegfried's hn.-call. Wrote hn. conc., works for hn. and pf., etc. The composer Richard Strauss was his son by his 2nd wife.

Strauss, Johann I (b Vienna, 1804; d Vienna, 1849). Austrian composer, cond., and violinist, founder of the 'Strauss Waltz Dynasty', and known as Johann Strauss I to distinguish him from his son. Studied vn. and played va. in 1819 in Lanner's qt. With Lanner until 1825, when he began to compose his own waltzes. In 1826 appeared with 14-piece orch. at the 'Swan' in the Rossau suburb of Vienna and captivated public. With larger orch. engaged for 6 years at the 'Sperl', in the Leopoldstadt. Among those who heard him there were Chopin, Wagner, and Hans Christian Andersen. Also appointed Kapellmeister of first Bürger-regiment, responsible for mus. at court fêtes and dances. Toured Ger. and other parts of Europe from 1833. Visited London 1838, giving 72 concerts and playing at festivities in honour of Victoria's coronation. In 1840 introduced the quadrille to replace the galop. Successive tours were triumphal processions for Strauss. Visited Eng. again 1849, and died of scarlet fever shortly after return to Vienna. Comp. 251 works, 152 of which were waltzes, but his fame in this respect was eclipsed by his eldest son and his Radetzky March (1848) is by far the strongest survivor of his life's work.

Strauss, Johann II (b Vienna, 1825; d Vienna, 1899). Austrian composer, cond., and violinist, eldest son of Johann Strauss, and deservedly known as 'the Waltz King'. Because his father did not want his sons to choose mus. as career, worked as bank clerk but learned vn. secretly and studied comp. with Drechsler. In 1844 formed own orch. of 24 and appeared as cond. of his own and his father's waltzes. When his father died, amalgamated both orchs. and toured Austria, Poland, and Ger. In 1855 engaged to direct summer concerts in Petropaulovsky Park, St Petersburg, for 10 years. Cond. of Austrian court balls 1863--72. Comp. nearly 400 waltzes which have come to epitomize Viennese gaiety and sentiment. Visited Paris 1867, London 1867, USA 1872. Turned to stage 1871, when first of a series of successful operettas was produced at the Theater an der Wien, the most famous being Die Fledermaus (1874). Of his waltzes, the Blue Danube (1867), Roses from the South (1880), the great Emperor Waltz (1888), and Tales from the Vienna Woods (1868) are beloved wherever mus. is played, as are his polkas and other dances. Was friend and admirer of Wagner, who, like Brahms and other composers incl. Schoenberg, were what we should now call 'fans' of Strauss, recognizing a supreme master of a genre who comp. with style, elegance, taste, and wit. Prin. works:

operettas: Indigo und die vierzig Räuber (1871); Der Karneval in Rom (1873); Die Fledermaus (1874); Cagliostro in Wien (1875); Prinz Methusalem (1877); Blindekuh (1878); Das Spitzentuch der Königin (1880); Der lustige Krieg (1881); Eine Nacht in Venedig (1883); Der Zigeunerbaron (1885); Simplicius (1887); Ritter Pázmán (1892); Fürstin Ninetta (1893); Jubuka (1894); Waldmeister (1895); Die Götten der Vernunft (1897).

from the South), Op. 388; Schneeglockchen, Op. 143; Seid umschlungen Millionen, Op. 443; Wein, Weib und Gesang (Wine, Woman and Song), Op. 333; Wiener Blut (Vienna Blood), Op. 354; Wiener Bonbons, Op. 307; Wo die Zitronen blüh'n, Op. 364.

polkas: Aesculap, Op. 130; Annen, Op. 117; Armenball, Op. 176; Aurora, Op. 165; Bürgerball, Op. 145; Champagne, Op. 211; Damenspende, Op. 305; Demolierer, Op. 269; Electropher, Op. 297; Explosionen, Op. 43; Figaro, Op. 320; Juristenball, Op. 280; Lagerlust, Op. 431; Leichtes Blut, Op. 319; Pizzicato Polka (with Josef Strauss); Tritsch, Tratsch, Op. 214; Unter Donner und Blitz (Thunder and Lightning), Op. 324. Also, marches, galops, and Perpetuum Mobile, Op. 257.

Strauss, Johann (Maria Eduard) [fy65,3]III (b. Vienna, 1866; d Berlin, 1939). Austrian composer and cond. Son of Eduard Strauss I. Became a civil servant (accountant), but success of his operetta Katze und Maus (1898) caused him to follow family tradition. Conducted imperial court balls in Vienna 1901--05, relinquishing post after criminal conviction for debt. Strauss, Josef (b Vienna, 1827; d Vienna, 1870). Austrian composer, 2nd son of Johann Strauss I. Became architect, but studied mus. secretly and cond. in place of his brother Johann in 1853. Formed own orch. and comp. waltzes, etc., for it, writing 283 pieces. Polkas more often played today than his waltzes, but the latter incl. Dynamiden, Op. 173 (1865), borrowed by R. Strauss for one of waltz-themes in opera Der Rosenkavalier, and Dorfschwalben aus Österreich (Village Swallows), Op. 164.

Strauss, Richard (Georg) (b Munich, 1864; d Garmisch-Partenkirchen, 1949). Ger. composer, cond., and pianist. Son of Franz Strauss, hn.-player in Munich court orch. Had pf. lessons at 4 and began composing at 6. Vn. lessons at 8. Studied theory with F. Meyer 1875, but went to no mus. acad., having normal education, ending at Munich Univ. At 16 wrote first sym. and str. qt., both being perf. in Munich, 1881. In 1882 Serenade for wind perf. in Dresden, leading to commission from Bülow for Meiningen Orch. 2nd Sym. perf. NY 1884. Ass. cond. to Bülow at Meiningen 1885, succeeding him after a month. Left Meiningen 1886, visited It., and became 3rd cond. at Munich Opera. His Aus Italien perf. Munich 1887. Ass. cond. to Levi at Bayreuth 1889. 3rd cond. Weimar Opera 1889. Success of symphonic poem Don Juan est. him as most important young composer in Ger. and natural successor to Wagner, whose widow took great interest in his career. Married sop. Pauline de Ahna 1894 and wrote many songs for her, appearing as her accompanist. First opera Guntram failure at Weimar 1894. Ass. cond., Munich Opera 1894, chief cond. 1896--8. Cond. Berlin P.O. 1894--5. Series of tone-poems---Till Eulenspiegel, Also sprach Zarathustra, Don Quixote, and Ein Heldenleben---between 1895 and 1899 confirmed his stature as master of the orch. 2nd opera Feuersnot success in Dresden and Vienna, 1901 and 1902. Visited Eng. 1903, USA 1904. F.p. of Symphonia Domestica in NY. Operas Salome (1905) and Elektra (1909) caused sensations through their supposedly 'obscene' treatment of biblical and classical subjects. In latter Strauss first collab. with Austrian poet Hugo von Hofmannsthal, who was to be librettist of 5 more of his operas, beginning in 1911 with the 18th-cent. comedy Der Rosenkavalier. This work was a triumph at its Dresden première, went straight into the repertory of world's leading opera houses, and has stayed there. Since 1898 Strauss had been cond. of Berlin Royal Opera, living in the capital, but after 1908 lived in villa at Garmisch and was in constant demand as cond. of his own works. Completed his last full-scale orch. work, Eine Alpensinfonie, in 1915. Resigned Berlin post 1918 and became joint dir., Vienna Opera, 1919--24. His opera Die Frau ohne Schatten and ballet Schlagobers produced there 1919 and 1924. Opera Intermezzo, to his own lib. representing incident in his own marriage, prod. Dresden 1924. During comp. of Arabella, Hofmannsthal died, 1929. In 1933 new Nazi régime in Ger. appointed Strauss (without consultation) pres. of Reichsmusikkammer, but removed him in 1935 because of disapproval of his collab. with Jewish librettist Stefan Zweig on opera Die schweigsame Frau, which was banned after 4 perfs. Thereafter Strauss was tolerated by régime but kept under surveillance because of Jewish daughter-in-law. Visited London 1936, receiving Gold Medal of Royal Phil. Soc. and conducting at CG. 1-act operas Friedenstag and Daphne prod. 1938. During World War II lived mostly in Vienna and comp. operas Die Liebe der Danae and Capriccio. In 1943 reverted to instr. comps., writing 2nd hn. conc., wind sonatinas, ob. conc., and 'poem for 23 strings' Metamorphosen, inspired by destruction of Ger. opera houses in bombing raids. Moved to Switzerland 1945--9, not returning to Garmisch until officially cleared of complicity in Nazi régime. Visited London 1947, conducting own works and attending perfs. cond. by Beecham. His last work completed 23 Nov., 1948, was a song Malven (Knobel), ded. to Maria Jeritza. Strauss, like his friend and contemporary Mahler, had immense dual reputation as composer and cond. He was a master of several mus. forms. No sym. orch. can reasonably exist without having in its repertory his series of magnificent tone-poems, in which brilliance of scoring and vividness of representational detail are matched by satisfying mus. construction. Of his 15 operas at least half are regularly in the repertoires of the major opera houses. They provide superb singing roles, particularly for women's vv., of which, through his marriage to a sop., he had a profound understanding. In Der Rosenkavalier alone, he wrote parts for 3 sop. in which many a 20th-cent. reputation has been made and which have contributed to making it the most popular opera written in the 20th cent., with the probable exception of Madama Butterfly. In Elektra he approached the atonal and neuro-psychological world of Schoenberg and Berg, but turned aside to what Stravinsky called the 'time-travelling' of Der Rosenkavalier and Ariadne auf Naxos, the latter being one of several operas in which Strauss treated subjects from classical mythology, investing them with 20th-cent. traits e.g. Die ägyptische Helena, Daphne, and Die Liebe der Danae. His last opera, a 'conversation piece', Capriccio, has also become popular. Strauss's mus. is in the Ger. 19th-cent. tradition deriving from Mendelssohn, Liszt, and especially Wagner. However, his love for Mozart, of whose mus. he was a fine cond., is also reflected in many works, leading to a curious but satisfying blend of 18th-cent. elegance and Wagnerian richness as in Rosenkavalier, Ariadne, and Capriccio, and particularly in the superb instr. works of his last years. His natural gift for counterpoint leads to complex and interweaving textures in all his works, which has led his critics to complain of 'note-spinning' for its own sake (a charge that has some justification), but the former tendency to 'write off' Strauss operas comp. between 1919 and 1940 is gradually being reversed as their virtues become apparent. Though he wrote some concs., his big display pieces are for full orch. and for vv. His unacc. choral works are in a class of their own, and he wrote many first-rate Lieder, some with orch. A song such as Morgen, for example, is a perfect blend of melody and expression of the text, while its style epitomizes the highly-developed melodic conversational-recit. which was Strauss's lifelong preoccupation in his operas and which even forms part of the subject-matter of Capriccio. His last work, the Vier letzte Lieder (4 Last Songs) for sop. and orch. is a remarkable and moving summing-up of his life's work as well as a testament to all that the late-romantic style had meant to the art of mus. Prin. works:

operas (with dates of f.p. and cond.'s name): Guntram, Op. 25, Weimar, 1894 (Strauss); Feuersnot, Op. 50, Dresden, 1901 (Schuch); Salome, Op. 54, Dresden, 1905 (Schuch); Elektra, Op. 58, Dresden, 1909 (Schuch); Der Rosenkavalier, Op. 59, Dresden, 1911 (Schuch); Ariadne auf Naxos, Op. 60, Stuttgart, 1912 (Strauss); rev. version, Vienna, 1916 (Schalk); Die Frau ohne Schatten, Op. 65, Vienna, 1919 (Schalk); Intermezzo, Op. 72, Dresden, 1924 (Busch); Die ägyptische Helena, Op. 75, Dresden, 1928 (Busch); Arabella, Op. 79, Dresden, 1933 (Krauss); Die schweigsame Frau, Op. 80, Dresden, 1935 (Böhm); Friedenstag, Op. 81, Munich, 1938 (Krauss); Daphne, Op. 82, Dresden, 1938 (Böhm); Die Liebe der Danae, Op. 83, dress rehearsal only Salzburg, 1944 (Krauss); Salzburg, 1952 (Krauss); Capriccio, Op. 85, Munich, 1942 (Krauss).

songs (with pf. and/or orch.): Strauss wrote over 200 songs, publishing them in groups. Listed below alphabetically is a selective group of the best-known, with opus numbers where applicable. The sign ;sd means that an orch. acc. (not necessarily by Strauss) exists: Allerseelen, Op. 10 No. 9 (1885), All' mein Gedanken, Op. 21 No. 1 (1888), ;sdDas Bächlein (1933), ;SdBefreit, Op. 39 No. 4 (1898), ;sdCäcilie, Op. 27 No. 2 (1894), Du meines Herzens Krönelein, Op. 21 No. 2 (1888), Einerlei, Op. 69 No. 3 (1918), Einkehr, Op. 47 No. 4 (1900), ;SdFreundliche Vision, Op. 48 No. 1 (1900), Gefunden, Op. 56 No. 1 (1903--6), Hat gesagt, Op. 36 No. 3 (1897), ;SdDie Heiligen drei Königen, Op. 56 No. 6 (1906), ;SdHeimkehr, Op. 15 No. 5 (1886), ;SdHeimliche Aufforderung, Op. 27 No. 3 (1894), ;SdIch wollt' ein Sträusslein binden, Op. 68 No. 2 (1918), ;SdLiebes-hymnus, Op. 32 No. 3 (1896), ;SdMein Auge, Op. 37 No. 4 (1897), ;SdMeinem Kinde, Op. 37 No. 3 (1897), ;SdMorgen, Op. 27 No. 4 (1894), ;SdMuttertanderlei, Op. 43 No. 2 (1899), Die Nacht, Op. 10 No. 3 (1885), Nachtgang, Op. 29 No. 3 (1895), Nichts, Op. 10 No. 2 (1885) ;SdDas Rosenband, Op. 36 No. 1 (1897), ;SdRuhe, meine Seele, Op. 27 No. 1 (1894), ;SdSäusle, Liebe Myrthe, Op. 68 No. 3 (1918), Schlechtes Wetter, Op. 69 No. 5 (1918), ;SdStändchen, Op. 17 No. 2 (1887), Der Stern, Op. 69 No. 1 (1918), ;SdTraum durch die Dämmerung, Op. 29 No. 1 (1895), ;SdWaldseligkeit, Op. 49 No. 1 (1901), ;SdWiegenlied, Op. 41 No. 1 (1899), Wozu noch, Mädchen, Op. 19 No. 1 (1887--8), ;SdZueignung, Op. 10 No. 1 (1885).

Stravaganza, La (The Extraordinary). Title of Vivaldi's Op. 4, 12 vn. concs., pubd. Amsterdam c.1714.

Stravinsky, Igor (Fyodorovich) (b Oranienbaum, 1882; d NY, 1971). Russ.-born composer, cond., pianist, and writer (Fr. citizen 1934, Amer. citizen 1945). Son of prin. bass at Imperial Opera, St Petersburg. Went to St Petersburg Univ. 1901 to study law but increasingly spent time in mus. pursuits. Spent much time at Rimsky-Korsakov's house, becoming his pupil in 1903. Began first sym., 1905, also pf. sonata. When his short orch. pieces Fireworks and Scherzo fantastique were played in St Petersburg in 1909, they were heard by Diaghilev, who had by then formed the famous Ballets Russes in Paris. He invited Stravinsky to compose a ballet on the legend of The Firebird, Lyadov having failed to meet his deadline, for 1910 season. Its success made Stravinsky world-famous, and was followed by Petrushka (1911) and by The Rite of Spring (1913), the f.p. of the latter causing a riot. By then, Stravinsky was regarded as the leader of the mus. avant-garde. With the Russ.

Revolution of 1917, resulting in confiscation of his property, and the financial troubles of the Diaghilev co., Stravinsky thought of forming a small touring th. co. to present inexpensively mounted productions. The result was The Soldier's Tale (L'Histoire du Soldat), for chamber ens.; it also enabled him to combine 2 of his main interests, Russ. folk-rhythms and Amer. jazz. His ballet Pulcinella, composed for Diaghilev in 1919--20, was a 're-composition' of mus. attrib. to Pergolesi and initiated the 'neo-classical' phase in Stravinsky's career. His last overtly Russ. works of this period were the ballet Les Noces and the opera Mavra. Settling in Fr., he wrote a series of works in which the spirit of the 18th cent. is invoked but with unmistakably 20th-cent. harmonic and rhythmic flavouring. The pf. conc., in which he played the solo part, the Capriccio for pf. and orch., the vn. conc., the ballet Apollo Musagetes, the Sym. in C major and, most of all the Hogarthian opera The Rake's Progress (1951), are the finest flowers of this facet of Stravinsky's art. On the other hand, the opera-oratorio Oedipus Rex (1926--7), for which Cocteau wrote the text, is 19th cent. and Verdian in its heroic melodies. In 1939 he settled in the USA, moving eventually to Los Angeles where the climate suited one who had contracted tuberculosis in 1936--7. His first major 'American' work was the Symphony in 3 Movements of 1945. Yet another turning-point was the ballet Orpheus (1947), which had led Stravinsky to study of Monteverdi, and a meeting with the young Amer. cond. Robert Craft, who (besides an enthusiasm for Stravinsky) combined interest in the Baroque period with intense sympathy for the 2nd Viennese Sch. of Schoenberg, etc. Stravinsky had lately shown awareness of serialism, particularly as practised by Webern, and, spurred by Craft, his work now began to reflect these new interests, as in the Canticum Sacrum of 1955, the Threni of 1958, the ballet Agon, and Movements for pf. and orch. In 1962 he was invited to return to Russ., a triumphant tour ending in his reception by the then Soviet leader Khruschev at the Kremlin. In his final years he wrote short, bare works, many of them religious in feeling and form, at the opposite pole from the opulence of his early successes. He is buried in Venice near to Diaghilev, as he wished. Stravinsky's place as a seminal figure in 20th-cent. mus. and individually as a great composer seems assured. Though it used to be said he 'changed his skin' every few years, and though he did, superficially at any rate, alter his style more than once, he remained fundamentally himself throughout his life. Like his antithesis Strauss, he was a time-traveller, at home in centuries other than his own. Yet when he touched Pergolesi, Gesualdo, and Tchaikovsky, they became Stravinskian re-creations. Where the prin. features of Strauss's mus. are complex harmonic and contrapuntal textures, the overriding feature of Stravinsky from first to last is rhythm. It is rhythm, in many wonderful forms from the primitive (Les Noces) to the sophisticated (Rite of Spring), which is the mainspring of his work. With the great Diaghilev ballets he took part in a golden age in assoc. with some of the most extraordinary talents of the century, not only Diaghilev but Nijinsky, Picasso, Bakst, Fokine, and others. Later Cocteau, Auden, and Dylan Thomas came within his orbit. The sense of th. and of the dance is never wholly absent from even his most austere works, such as the Mass of 1948, nor his delight in childlike fun (the Circus Polka, Jeu de cartes, etc.), and his sardonic humour. It seems appropriate that almost his last work was a setting of Lear's The Owl and the Pussycat. His critics once used to write of a 'soulless' mus., bare of expression and emotion. As he recedes from us and his mus. comes into perspective, the wrongheadedness of this judgment provokes either mirth or anger. Prin. works:

operas: [fy75,1] The Nightingale (1908--9, 1913--14); Mavra (1921--2); Oedipus Rex (1926--7, also can be perf. as oratorio); The Rake's Progress (1948--51).

(1919); The Star-Spangled Banner, for orch. and optional ch. (1941).

Stravinsky, Svyatoslav (Soulima)(b Lausanne, 1910). Swiss-born pianist, son of Igor Stravinsky. Studied Paris with I. Philipp and N. Boulanger. Stravinsky wrote the Conc. for 2 solo pf. (1931--5) for Soulima and himself to play and they gave f.p. in Paris, 1935. Settled in USA.

Street Corner. Ov. for orch. by Rawsthorne, f.p. 1944. Version for wind band by R. O'Brien.

Street Piano. Instr. used by vagrant musicians, being a mechanical type of pf. By turning a handle to operate a barrel-and-pin mechanism, a selection of tunes is available. Sometimes called piano-organ.

Streich(Ger.). Stroke (of bow). Streichquartett, string quartet, Streichstimmen, string-toned stops (org.), etc.

Streich, Rita(b Barnaul, 1920). Ger. sop., studied in Berlin with Erna Berger, Maria Ivogün, and Willi Domgraf-Fassbänder. Opera début Aussig 1943. Berlin State Opera 1946--50, Berlin City Opera 1950--3, Vienna State Opera from 1953. London début 1954, San Francisco 1957, Glyndebourne 1958. Outstanding in Mozart and Strauss (Queen of the Night, Constanze, Pamina, Zerbinetta, Sophie, Verdi's Gilda, etc.). Strepitoso (It.). 'Noisy', 'loud'. Direction to play forcefully, with the implication of headlong excitement. Elgar used it as an expression mark. Liszt's Tasso begins allegro strepitoso. Strepponi, Giuseppina (b Lodi, 1815; d Busseto, 1897). It. sop. and 2nd wife of Giuseppe Verdi. Studied Milan Cons. 1830--4. Opera début Trieste 1835 in Rossini's Mathilde di Shabran. Sang in Vienna, Rome, Venice, etc., before Milan début 1842 in Donizetti's Belisario. Instrumental in getting Verdi's first opera Oberto staged at Milan, 1839. Created Abigaille in Nabucco, Milan, 1842. Retired from stage 1846 to live with Verdi. Married him 1859.

Stretta(It.). Drawn together, tightening (feminine of stretto). Passage at end of It. operatic aria, ens., or act where tempo is quickened for final climax.

Stretto(It.). Drawn together. (1) Quicker tempo. (2) In fugue: when entry of the answer occurs before subject is completed, overlapping with it. This is a way of increasing excitement, as in a 4-part fugue when all 4 vv. enter in stretto.

Strich or Bogenstrich or Anstrich(Ger.). A stroke (with a bow); hence mit breitem Strich, with the breadth of the whole bow, and so forth. So also Strichart, manner of bowing; Aufstrich, up-bow; Niederstrich, down-bow.

Strict Canon. Canon in which intervals of the imitating v. are same as those of v. imitated.

Strict Counterpoint. See Counterpoint.

Striggio, Alessandro(b Mantua, c.1540; d Mantua, 1592). It. composer. Prin. composer at court of Medicis in Florence in 1560s, writing intermedi for ceremonial occasions. Visited Eng. as political emissary 1567. Wrote madrigals for Ferrara 1584. Returned to Mantua 1584. Skilled instrumentalist, playing lira da gamba and descant viol. Unusual for his time in composing little sacred mus.

String(s). The sound-producing agent of certain instr., i.e. thin strands of wire or gut vibrated on vn., va., vc., db., etc. by bow, on pf. by hammers, and on hpd., harp, guitar, etc. by plucking. But strings, meaning str. instr., is taken as referring in an orch. to the vns., vas., vcs., and dbs. A string orchestra comprises these only. A string quartet is 2 vn., va., vc.; string trio, vn., va., vc.

Stringendo(It.). Squeezing. Direction that intensity of the mus. is to be increased, by quickening the tempo (as when approaching a climax). String Quartet. Group of 4 players (almost always 2 vn., va., vc.) or comp. written for them to play. Like the sym. in orch. mus., the str.qt. in chamber mus. has become the highest medium for a composer's thought.

Form first developed at beginning of 18th cent. with A. Scarlatti, Tartini, etc., but achieved its flowering with Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and Schubert. Since then most composers have written str. qts., and the 19th and 20th cent. produced many superb qts. of performers, e.g. the Joachim, Brodsky, Bohemian, Léner, Griller, Amadeus, Gabrieli, Vermeer, etc.

String Quintet. Group of performers (2 vn., 2 va., vc.; or 2 vn., va., 2 vc.; or 2 vn., va., vc., db.) or workwritten for them. Great examples are those by Mozart and Schubert.

String-toned stops. Org. stops whose tone quality resembles that of str. instr., e.g. Gamba.

String Trio. Group of 3 players (usually 2 vn. and vc., or vn., va., vc.) or comp. written for them to perf. Trios for 2 vn. and vc. were derived from baroque trio sonata. Haydn seems to have been the first to write for vn., va., and vc. and was emulated by Boccherini. Mozart's Divertimento (K563) is a notable example and there are others by Beethoven. An unusual combination of instr. is Dvořák's Terzetto for 2 vn. and va. (1887). In the 20th cent. trios for vn., va., and vc. have been written by Webern (1927), Schoenberg (1945), Dohnányi, Hindemith, Roussel, Moeran, and L. Berkeley. In 1938 Vaughan Williams wrote a double str. trio (2 vn., 2 va., 2 vc.), revised it in 1942, and rewrote it 1946--8 as Partita for str.

Strisciando (It.). Trailing. Smooth, correct It. term for what is usually called glissando.

Stromento (It., old form of strumento). Instrument, Stromento a corde, str. instr.; stromenti d'arco, bowed instr.; stromenti di legno, woodwind instr.; stromenti d'ottone, brass instr.; stromenti a percossa, perc. instr.; stromenti a fiato, wind instr.; stromenti da tasto, kbd. instr. Also, recitativo stromentato, acc. recit.

Strophic (from Gk. strophe). Term applied to song in which the same mus. is repeated, perhaps with very minor change, for each successive stanza of setting of a poem, in manner of folk-song. The opposite, where the mus. progresses, is called 'through-composed' (Ger. Durchkomponiert). In general, the strophic song is simple and lyrical, the through-composed more dramatic or complex.

Stuart, Leslie (really Thomas Barrett) (b Southport, 1864; d Richmond, Surrey, 1928). Eng. composer and organist. Organist, Salford Cath., and Church of the Holy Name, Manchester. Went to London 1895 where he became composer of such popular songs as Soldiers of the Queen (1895), Little Dolly Daydream (1897), Lily of Laguna (1898), and operettas Florodora (1899), The Belles of Mayfair (1906), etc.

Stück (Ger.). Piece, as in Konzertstück, concert piece.

Stucken, Frank Valentine van der (b Fredericksburg, Texas, 1858; d Hamburg, 1929). Amer. cond. and composer. Studied vn. in Brussels 1866--76, then comp. in Leipzig with Grieg and Reinecke. Stuckenschmidt, Hans Heinz (b Strasbourg, 1901). Ger. critic, author, and composer. Studied with Schoenberg and cond. concerts of new mus. in Hamburg, 1923--4. Mus. critic in Berlin 1929--34, when removed by Nazis, and in Prague 1937--41. Head of new mus. dept., Berlin radio, 1946. Returned to Berlin mus. criticism 1947. Prof. of mus. history, Berlin Tech. Univ. from 1948 (emeritus from 1967). Author of books on Busoni, Stravinsky, Ravel, Blacher, and David. His major biography of Schoenberg appeared in 1974 (Eng. trans. 1978).

Study. See Étude.

Sturm und Drang (Ger., 'Storm and stress'). Term applied to period, roughly 1760--80, in Ger. literature and mus. when emotionalism was at height. Specially applied to works comp. by Joseph Haydn at that time, particularly syms. (roughly nos. 40--59), and str. qts. These works are marked by new and audacious formal and harmonic features. Also used to describe much kbd. mus. by C. P. E. Bach.

Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra. Founded by Karl Münchinger, first concert 18 Sept. 1945. Tours to France, Britain, and Spain 1949, Central and S. Amer. 1952, USA 1954, Far East 1955, and Russia 1959. Su (It., other forms incl. sul, sull', sulla, sulle, etc.). (1) On, near. Sul G (in vn. playing), on the G str. (2) Up, e.g. arcata in su, up-bowed.

Subdominant. 4th degree of major or minor scale, e.g. Fin key of C. So called because it is the same distance below the tonic as the dominant is above it (not because it is the note below the dominant or less important).

Subito (It.). Suddenly. Quickly, immediately, as in volti subito (abbreviated to V.S.), turn over at once; attacco subito, go on without a break. Sometimes subitamente is used.

Subject. (1) Term in mus. analysis meaning a motif, phrase, or melody which forms a basic element in the construction of a comp. Thus, in sonata-form, one has the first and 2nd subjects, sometimes more. These are introduced in the exposition, then developed and recapitulated. (2) In fugue, the melodic theme which is stated at the beginning, reappearing at various places and pitches during the comp. The answer is the imitation of the subject.

Submediant. 6th degree of major or minor scale, e.g. A in key of C major, Ab in key of C minor, lies midway between tonic and subdominant in the same way as the mediant is midway between tonic and dominant.

Sub-Octave Coupler. Coupler on pedal organ which duplicates notes played an octave lower on same stop. Subotnick, Morton (b Los Angeles, 1933). Amer. composer and clarinettist. Studied Mills Coll. 1957--9 (comp. with Milhaud). Played cl. in orchs., then became mus. dir. Lincoln Center Repertory Th., 1967. Est. elec. mus. studio at Pittsburgh Univ. On staff Calif. Suite (Fr., Eng.; Old Fr. Ordre; Old Eng. Lesson; Old Ger. Partita or Partia; Old It. sonata da camera). A following. Orig. a piece of instr. mus. in several movements, usually in dance-style. During 17th and 18th cents. was one of most important forms of instr. mus. During Baroque period, typical Suite would have framework of Allemande, Courante, Sarabande, and Gigue, with frequent interpolations of Minuet, Gavotte, Passepied, Bourrée, Musette, and Rigaudon. The various movements were usually based on one key, though modulations occurred within individual movements. Nearly all movements were in simple binary form. Fr. kbd. suites sometimes contained up to 18 movements, but these were not necessarily all intended to be perf. at once: the composer left it to the player to make a selection. In importance the suite was superseded by the sonata and the sym., and the title was given to works of a lighter type, e.g. Grieg's Holberg and Elgar's Wand of Youth Suites, and assemblages of movements from opera or ballet scores, e.g. Ravel's Daphnis et Chloé suites. 20th-cent. neo-classic composers revived the term (Stravinsky for example).

Suite Bergamasque (Bergomask suite). Pf. suite by Debussy containing 4 movements, Prélude, Menuet, Clair de Lune, and Passepied. Comp. 1890, rev. 1905. Orch. version of Nos. 1, 2, and 4 by G. Cloez, No. 3 by Caplet.

Sullivan, (Sir) Arthur (Seymour) (b Lambeth, 1842; d Westminster, 1900). Eng. composer, cond., and organist. Son of Irish bandmaster at Sandhurst. Chorister, Chapel Royal, 1854. First comp., an anthem, pubd. 1855. First holder of Mendelssohn Scholarship, RAM, 1856, becoming pupil of Goss and Sterndale Bennett. Went to Leipzig Cons. where his teachers incl. Rietz, David, and Moscheles. Returned to Eng. 1861 and became organist, St Michael, Chester Sq. In 1862 his mus. for Shakespeare's The Tempest was played under Manns at Crystal Palace and made Sullivan's name. Ballet L'Ile enchantée prod. CG 1864 and cantata Kenilworth Birmingham Fest. later same year. To 1864 also belongs comp. of Irish Symphony. Prof. of comp. RAM 1866, in which year he wrote vc. conc. for Piatti. Went with Grove to Vienna in 1867 to recover Schubert's Rosamunde mus. and to examine MS. of 'Great' C major Sym. In 1866 wrote light opera Cox and Box, first of works in genre which was to ensure Sullivan's lasting fame. For a time, however, Sullivan persisted with oratorio (The Prodigal Son, Worcester 1869) and incidental mus. to Shakespeare. However in 1871 met playwright William Schwenck Gilbert (1836--1911) and collaborated in unsuccessful light opera Thespis, following it in 1872 with tune for hymn 'Onward, Christian Soldiers'. Festival Te Deum followed, then another Birmingham oratorio, The Light of the World (1873). By now much in demand as cond. and administrator, and was also friend of royalty. In 1875 another collaboration with Gilbert, engineered by Richard D'Oyly Carte, resulted in successful curtain-raiser Trial by Jury. This led to D'Oyly Carte's leasing of Opéra-Comique Th. especially to produce operas by Gilbert and Sullivan. The Sorcerer (1877) justified the risk, running for 175 nights, but this was eclipsed by the 700-night run of H.M.S. Pinafore (1878). Despite copyright pirates, these works were in demand throughout the Western world, particularly in USA. The Pirates of Penzance (1879) continued run of success, followed by Patience (1881). During run of Patience, D'Oyly Carte opened his new th., the Savoy, and the operas became known as the Savoy operas and the cast 'Savoyards'. Sullivan was knighted 1883. It is a tragic irony that Sullivan and some of his friends felt that the success of the operettas was beneath the dignity of the dir. of the Nat. Training Sch. for Mus., 1876--81; they were happier with The Martyr of Antioch (Leeds 1880) and The Golden Legend (1886) than with Iolanthe (1882), Princess Ida (1883), and The Mikado (1885). These were followed by further 'hits': Ruddigore (1886), The Yeomen of the Guard (1888), and The Gondoliers (1889). During run of the last-named, the 2 partners quarrelled (supposedly over a new carpet at the Savoy Th.). Haddon Hall (1892) was comp. to a lib. by S. Grundy. Reconciliation with Gilbert led to Utopia Limited (1893) and The Grand Duke (1896). During quarrel, Sullivan's only 'grand opera', Ivanhoe, to a lib. by Julian Sturgis, was prod. in 1891 at new Eng. Opera House built by D'Oyly Carte. Had 160 perfs., but costly venture failed and th. became a mus.-hall. By then, Sullivan's health was beginning to rebel against the strain he put on it. He was cond. of the Phil. Soc. 1885--7, frequently cond. at the Hallé Concerts in Manchester, was cond. of the Leeds Fest. from 1883, and continued to write th. mus., anthems, etc. In his last years his path crossed that of the rising Elgar. He died on St Cecilia's Day 1900 at comparatively early age of 58. Sullivan's 'serious' work, by which he set such store, survives in the occasional ch. from The Golden Legend and the infrequent revivals of his sym. and incidental mus. and of Ivanhoe. These show talent, not quite as much, it could be argued, as in his hymn-tunes and in his popular ballads, such as My dearest heart and The Lost Chord (written in 1877 on the death of his brother and given a further lease of fame by the Amer. comedian Jimmy 'Schnozzle' Durante in his song 'The guy who found the Lost Chord'). But in the Savoy operettas there is genius. In them Sullivan's melodic felicity, light-fingered orchestration, and truly astonishing gift for pastiche and parody (Handel, Verdi, Donizetti, Wagner---all are paid the compliment of witty imitation) found their proper outlet and gave England a unique type of mus. entertainment and cult. Sometimes parody seems to have taken over completely and one longs to call out 'Will the real Sullivan stand up?' At other times, Gilbert's cruelties and facetiousness become oppressive; also the stylized, unchanging ritual of the D'Oyly Carte prods. became wearisome except to devotees, of whom there are millions, seemingly versed in every phrase of both mus. and lib. With such a following, Sullivan's fame seems secure for as long as one dares to foretell. Prin. works:

operettas (Where no librettist is given, Gilbert is implied): Cox and Box (Burnand, 1866); Contrabandista (Burnand, 1867); Thespis (1871, lost); Trial by Jury (1875); The Zoo (Stevenson, 1875); The Sorcerer (1877); H.M.S. Pinafore (1878); The Pirates of Penzance (1879); Patience (1880--1); Iolanthe (1882); Princess Ida (1883); The Mikado (1884--5); Ruddigore (1886); The Yeomen of the Guard (1888); The Gondoliers (1889); Haddon Hall (Grundy, 1892); Utopia Limited (1893); The Chieftain (Burnand, 1894); The Grand Duke (1895--6); The Beauty Stone (Pinero and Comyns Carr, 1898); The Rose of Persia (Hood, 1899); The Emerald Isle (Hood, 1900, mus. completed by German).

orch: Sym. in E (Irish) (1864--6); Ov., In Memoriam (1866); Overture Di Ballo (1870); Imperial March (1893); Vc. Conc. (1866).

choral: Oratorios: The Prodigal Son (1869); The Light of the World (1873, rev. 1890); The Martyr of Antioch (1880, rev. as opera 1898); Cantatas: Kenilworth (1864); On Shore and Sea (1871); The Golden Legend (1886). Also songs, chamber mus., ballads, hymns, anthems, organ pieces.

Sul Ponticello (It.). On the bridge. Instruction to the player of the vn., va., vc., and db. that he is to take the bow as near as possible to the bridge to produce a rather metallic but mysterious sound-effect.

Sul Tasto (It.). On the touch. Direction to player of vn., etc., to take the bow over the fingerboard, giving a rich, mellow sound. Sulla tastiera (on the fingerboard) means the same.

Sumer is Icumen In (Old Eng.). Summer is coming in. Eng. comp., dating supposedly from c.1240, sometimes known as the Reading Rota because the MS. originated at Reading Abbey. The conjectural author was a monk of Reading, John of Fornsete. An infinite canon at the unison for 4 ten. vv., with 2 basses repeating a ground bass or pes, also in canon at the unison. Can claim to be the earliest extant canon, 6-part comp., example of ground bass, and mus. setting of both sacred (Latin) and secular words.

Susato, Tylman (b ?Cologne, c.1500; d ?Antwerp, c.1561). Ger. mus. publisher and composer. Town musician in Antwerp 1529--49, where in 1543 he est. a printing firm. Pubd. over 50 vols. of church mus. and chansons. His songs and instr. dances are attractive.

Suspended Cadence. Delay before final cadence of a comp. so that performer in conc. (or, formerly, aria) may insert cadenza.

Suspension. Opposite of anticipation: a note in a chord is held over (sounded slightly late) as a momentary discordant part of the combination which follows; it is then resolved by falling a degree to a note which forms a real part of the 2nd chord. When 2 notes are held over it is called a double suspension. In many 20th-cent. works suspensions are often left unresolved.

Süsskind, (Jan) Walter (b Prague, 1918; d Berkeley, Calif., 1980). Cz.-born cond. and pianist (Eng. citizen). Studied Prague Acad.of Mus. with Suk, Hába, and Szell. Début as cond., Ger. Sweelinck, Jan Pieterszoon (b Deventer or Amsterdam, 1562; d Amsterdam, 1621). Dutch composer, organist, harpsichordist, and teacher. Succeeded father as organist of Old Church, Amsterdam, c.1580, remaining in post until death. First composer to give independent part to the pedal and to write fully worked-out fugues, thus pioneering and establishing form to be used by Bach. Taught most of great N. Ger. school of organists and was of immense influence. Wrote over 250 vocal works and 70 for keyboard. Set the entire psalter. Keyboard works show Eng. and It. influences.

Swell. Mechanical device on org. and certain other kbd. instr., e.g. hpd., for increasing (and lessening) the vol. of sound.

Swell Organ (Swell). Section of organ in which the pipes are enclosed in a Swell Box. Player can increase or diminish vol. of sound by means of Swell Pedal which opens and closes a Venetian shutter. Manual controlling this is placed above Great Org. and is known as Swell Manual. On some modern orgs. 'swell' effect may be obtained also on Choir and Solo manuals.

Swieten, Gottfried, Baron van (b Leiden, 1733; d Vienna, 1803). Dutch-born Austrian patron of mus. Went to Vienna 1745 when his father became empress's physician. Held diplomatic posts in Brussels, Paris, and London, and was ambassador to Berlin 1770--7. Prefect of Imperial Lib., Vienna, 1778--1803. Wrote light operas, but remembered for commissioning works from C. P. E. Bach, Haydn, and Mozart. Introduced Mozart to mus. of Bach and Handel 1782--3. Mozart made his arrs. of Handel oratorios and other vocal works for private concerts van Swieten founded. Wrote or adapted texts of Haydn's Seven Last Words (ch. version 1796), The Creation (1798), and The Seasons (1801). Helped the young Beethoven, who dedicated his 1st Sym. to him.

Swing. See Jazz.

Sydney Symphony Orchestra. Orch. based in Sydney, N.S.W. Began in 1934 as broadcasting orch. (A.B.C.) also giving public and schools concerts. Title of Sydney S.O. adopted permanently in 1945. Prin. cond. have incl. Joseph Post, Nikolay Malko, Dean Dixon, Moshe Atzman, Willem van Otterloo, and Sir Charles Mackerras. Gives over 160 concerts a year. Sygietynski, Tadeusz (b Warsaw, 1896; d Warsaw, 1955). Polish cond. Studied Lwów, Leipzig (with Reger), and Vienna (with Schoenberg). Founded state dance ens. 1949 to popularize Polish folk-dance and with it toured Europe and USA. Arr. Polish folk-songs.

Sylphides, Les (The Sylphs). Ballet in 1 act, orig. called Chopiniana, arr. to mus. of Chopin, choreog. Fokine. Prod. St Petersburg 1907 (Pavlova among dancers). This first version used 5 pieces orch. by Glazunov: Polonaise in A, Op. 40 No. 1, Nocturne in F, Op. 15 No. 1, Mazurka in C# minor, Op. 50 No. 3, Waltz in C# minor, Op. 64 No. 2, and Tarentella in Ab, Op. 43. Rev. version by Fokine prod. St Petersburg 1908 with additional pieces orch. by Maurice Keller. This comprised Polonaise in A, Op. 40 No. 1 (in most Western versions Prelude in A, Op. 28 No. 7), Nocturne in Ab, Op. 32 No. 2, Waltz in Gb, Op. 70 No. 1, Mazurka in D, Op. 33 No. 2, Mazurka in C, Op. 67 No. 3, Prelude in A, Op. 28 No. 7, Mazurka in C# minor, Op. 50 No. 3, Grand Waltz in Eb, Op. 18 No. 1. Later Fokine choreographed Mazurka in C, Op. 33 No. 3 as alternative to Op. 67 No. 3. Revived by Diaghilev, Paris 1909. Extra items were scored by Tcherepnin and Lyadov, and Stravinsky re-scored the Nocturne in Ab, Op. 32 No. 2 and the Grand Waltz in Eb, Op. 18 No. 1. One of most popular ballets in repertory. Eng. versions have used Chopin arrs. by Roy Douglas, Gordon Jacob, Malcolm Sargent, and others.

Sylvia, ou La Nymphe de Diane. Ballet in 3 acts, mus. by Delibes, lib. by Barbier and de Reinach, choreog. Mérante. Prod. Paris 1876, London 1911. New choreog. by Ashton CG 1952.

Sympathetic Strings. Those str. on a bowed, plucked, or hammered instr. which vibrate (and thereby sound a note) in sympathetic resonance with the note sounded near them by some other agent. Certain instr., e.g. viola d'amore, were strung with sympathetic str., tuned to certain pitches, which vibrated because of proximity to bowed str. above them and thus enriched the tone.

Symphonia. (1) Gr. word taken into Lat. and sometimes used by composers instead of 'symphony'. Thus R. Strauss's Symphonia Domestica is correct title given by composer, not Sinfonia Domestica (It.). (2) Name given in medieval period to hurdy-gurdy, first str. instr. to which kbd. principle was applied. Perhaps so called because it was used in polyphonic mus., a master of polyphony being then sometimes called a symphoneta (Gr.).

Symphonia Domestica (Domestic Symphony). Orch. tone-poem by R. Strauss, Op. 53, comp. 1902--3, f.p. NY 1904, f.Eng.p. London 1905. Depicts a day in the life of the Straussses, with themes representing wife Pauline, their baby son, and himself, but is also a sectional sym. in one movement not solely dependent on programme for mus. effectiveness.

Symphonic Dances. Orch. work in 3 movements by Rakhmaninov, Op. 45, comp. 1940, f.p. Philadelphia 1941.

Symphonic Metamorphosis of Themes by Carl Maria von Weber. Orch. work by Hindemith, comp. 1940--3, f.p. NY 1944. Originated in sketches (1940) for ballet for Massine on Weber themes, using Turandot ov. The Weber themes used are: 1st movt. (Allegro), No. 4 (All'Ongherese) of Eight Pieces for pf. duet, 1818--19; 2nd movt. (Turandot Scherzo), theme from ov.to incid. mus. for Schiller's trans. of Gozzi's Turandot, Prinzessin von China, 1809; 3rd movt. (Andantino), No. 2 of 6 Petites Pièces faciles, pf. duet, 1801; 4th movt. (Marsch), No. 7 of Eight Pieces for pf. duet, 1818--19. Symphonic Poem (Ger. Sinfonische Dichtung). Descriptive term first applied by Liszt to his 13 one-movement orch. works which, while on a symphonic scale, were not 'pure' syms. because they dealt with descriptive subjects taken from classical mythology, Romantic literature, recent history, or imaginative fantasy e.g. Prometheus, Mazeppa, Les Préludes, etc. In other words, they were 'programmatic'. Other composers followed his line, e.g. Smetana (Wallenstein's Camp, etc.), Tchaikovsky (Francesca da Rimini, etc.), Saint-Saëns (Le Rouet d'Omphale, etc.), Franck (Le chasseur maudit, etc.), and many others. Richard Strauss, who carried pictorialism a stage further, preferred the term Tondichtung for his works in this form (Don Juan, etc.). This is usually translated as 'tone-poem', but it has been well suggested that 'sound-poem' comes nearer to the intention. Most late 19th- and early 20th-cent. composers wrote symphonic poems though they did not always so describe them, e.g. Delius's In a Summer Garden. Elgar used designation 'concert-ov.' for what are in effect 3 symphonic poems, Froissart, Cockaigne, and In the South, and he called Falstaff a symphonic study. Later 20th-cent. composers have shown less interest in the form, but it still survives in such works as Birtwistle's The Triumph of Time (1972).

Symphonic Study. Term used by various composers in different ways. Schumann called his 1837 set of pf. variations Études symphoniques; Elgar applied the term to his symphonic poem Falstaff, presumably to show that it was an 'in depth' character-study; Rawsthorne described an orch. set of variations as Symphonic Studies.

Symphonie espagnole (Spanish Symphony). Orch. work for vn. and orch. by Lalo, Op. 21, comp. 1874, written for and first played by Sarasate in 1875.

Symphonie Fantastique (Fantastic Symphony). Orch. work, Op. 14, in C major by Berlioz, comp. 1830 when he was 26, and f.p. Paris, 5 Dec. 1830. F. Eng. p. Manchester, cond. Hallé, 9 Jan. 1879. F. complete London p., cond. W. Ganz, April 1881. One of most remarkable Romantic comps. and forerunner of the programme-syms. and symphonic poems of Liszt, Mahler, Strauss, Tchaikovsky, and others. Sub-titled 'Episode in the Life of an artist', it was inspired by Berlioz's then unrequited love for the Irish actress Harriet Smithson, whom he later married. This is symbolized in the mus. by a melody (idée fixe) which acts as a motto-theme recurring in various guises, like a Wagnerian leitmotiv, in each of the 5 movements. A theme in the 1st movement was taken from a song Berlioz wrote when he was 12 and the March to the Scaffold was taken from his unfinished opera Les Francs Juges (1826). Berlioz rev. the Symphonie Fantastique in Rome, 1831--2, and made other re-touchings before publication 1846. Titles of the movements are: 1. Rêveries, passions (Dreams, Passions). 2. Un bal (A ball). 3. Scène aux champs (Scene in the fields). 4. Marche au supplice (March to the Scaffold). 5. Songe d'une nuit du Sabbat (Witches' Sabbath). Arr. for pf. by Liszt, 1833. See also Lélio.

Symphonie funèbre et triomphale ('Funereal and triumphal symphony'). Work by Berlioz, sometimes known as Grande Symphonie funèbre et triomphale, composed 1840 to commission by French Government to mark tenth anniversary of 1830 Revolution. Originally scored for large military band and perf. out of doors. Berlioz in 1842 added parts for optional str. orch. and later also for chorus to patriotic text by A. Deschamps. In 3 movements: 1. Marche funèbre in F minor; 2. Oraison funèbre in G; 3. L'Apothéose in Bb. Probably comp. from earlier sketches.

Symphonie Liturgique. Honegger's Sym. No. 3, comp. 1945--6. F.p. Zürich 1946.

Symphonie sur un chant montagnard fran;Alcais (Symphony on a French mountain song). D'Indy's Op. 25, sub-titled Symphonie Cévenole because the theme comes from the Cévennes region. Specified as 'for orch. and pf.'. Comp. 1886, f.p. Paris, Lamoureux concert 1887.

Symphony (from Gk., 'a sounding together'; Ger. Sinfonie, Fr. Symphonie, It. Sinfonia, Gk.-Lat. Symphonia). A term which has had several meanings over the centuries: (1) In 17th and 18th cents., Sinfonia meant what we should now call an 'overture' to an opera, etc., i.e. a short instr. piece often consisting of 3 short sections or movements in quick-slow-quick form. (2) It was also used of an orch. interlude, e.g. the 'Pastoral' sym. in Handel's Messiah, in a vocal work. Some 20th-cent. composers have revived this archaic usage of the term, e.g. Stravinsky in his Symphonies of Wind Instruments (1920). (3) As the word is now generally used, it means a large-scale orch. comp. (usually in 4 movements but often in 1, 3, or 5, occasionally in 2), a Sonata for orch., the first movement and others being in sonata-form. It is reserved by composers for their most weighty and profound orch. thoughts, but of course there are many light-hearted, witty, and entertaining syms. The movements of the Classical and early Romantic sym. were usually an opening allegro, followed by a slow movement, then a minuet or scherzo, finally another allegro or rondo. Frequently the slow movement is placed 3rd, sometimes last. Early composers of the 18th-cent. 4-movement sym. were Sammartini, Wagenseil, Gossec, J. C. and C. P. E. Bach, Boyce, and especially the composers of the Mannheim School, Stamitz, Cannabich, Richter, and others, who made innovations in dynamics, expanded the development of themes, and broadened the harmonic idiom. The average 18th-cent. sym. orch. comprised str., double woodwind (cls. later), hns., and a continuo instr., usually hpd. The sym. was brought to a new peak by Joseph Haydn, who wrote 107, and was the first composer to demonstrate what later composers also seized upon, namely that the word 'symphony' should not imply rigidity of form or material. Some of Haydn's syms. have 6 movements; some utilize mus. he wrote for plays; some themes are based on folk-songs; most have slow introductions; many movements are monothematic; rondos, variations, and minuets are used; wit and humour are deployed; rarekeys are explored; deep emotions are aroused. Haydn's example was followed and improved upon by Mozart, especially in his 3 last syms. of 1788, and these in turn led to even further marvels from Haydn in his last 12 syms. written for his 2 visits to Eng. Taking over from Haydn and Mozart, Beethoven raised the sym. to a new plane of emotional expression, his 3rd Symphony (Eroica, 1803--4) ending the 18th cent. at a stroke and striding forward into an age when democracy, revolution, and ethics were to become influential factors in art, while at the same time effecting a mus. revolution by its enlarged dimensions, boldness of harmony, subtlety of key relationships, and general scope. In the Pastoral Symphony, No. 6 (1807--8), Beethoven reconciled perfectly the claims of 'absolute' and 'descriptive' mus., and in the 9th (1817--23) he introduced human vv. into the finale in a setting of Schiller's Ode to Joy. The floodgates were now open. Schubert's syms. bridged the way to the Romantic period. The syms. of Mendelssohn and Schumann combine classical outlines with romantic feeling and some pictorialism, as in the former's Scotch and Italian syms. and the latter's Spring and Rhenish. Brahms's 4 syms. eschew pictorial associations and uphold the virtues of classical design (though they are deeply romantic in essence and also formally unusual in places) as an antidote to the growing craze for Lisztian symphonic poems and the operas of Wagner (who wrote only one early sym. but was contemplating others when he died). Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique (1830) is one of the most remarkable works in the genre, frankly programmatic, brilliantly orchestrated, and opening up horizons which were not further explored until the picturesque late-19th-cent. syms. of Tchaikovsky. Yet the epitome of the Romantic sym., imbued still with classical principles while on a huge architectural scale, is to be found in the 9 syms. of Bruckner. Berlioz's pioneering was taken a stage further by Mahler, whose 10 syms. not only bridge the 19th and 20th cents. but also form a 'transition passage' of their own between 19th-cent. mus. idioms and the new 20th-cent. preoccupation with the dissolution of tonality. The crisis of the sym. in the early years of the 20th cent. is exemplified by the contrasting approaches of Sibelius and Mahler. The former expressed his faith in compression, concentration, and 'absolute' mus. whereas Mahler said that 'the symphony must embrace everything'. In Sibelius, especially in the 4th and 7th syms., symphonic thought and processes are elliptical and pared to essentials. In Mahler, vv. are used in 4 of the syms., philosophical and religious theories are at the root of their inspiration, and wildly juxtaposed thematic material is brought into cohesive unity by sheer force of conviction, the instrumentation being exotic and multiple. The two attitudes, regarded as mutually exclusive, are in fact not incompatible and a compromise has governed the development of the 20th-cent. sym., often within the works of the samecomposer, e.g., compare the severe 'classicism' of Vaughan Williams's 4th Sym. with the programmatic 7th, Sinfonia Antarctica; compare Shostakovich's 5th Sym. with his 13th and 14th. From timeto time throughout the 20th cent. composers and pundits have pronounced the sym. dead but it shows an encouraging refusal to lie down. Nielsen (6), Vaughan Williams (9), Bax (7), Shostakovich (15), Ives (4), W. Schuman (9), Rubbra (11), and many others show that thesym. has not lost either its attraction or challenge for composers. Argument frequently occurs over whether certain works designated 'symphony' really merit the description, e.g. Stravinsky's Symphony in 3 Movements (1945), Messiaen's Turangalila (1946--8), etc. An answer to this is that no mus. form can be regarded as immutable. The 18th-cent. composer (with the likely exception of Haydn) would scarcely recognize some 20th-cent. syms. in form, but there is more to a sym. than its title. It implies an attitude of mind, a certain mental approach by the composer, and in this respect the 4 syms. of Tippett and the three large-scale syms. by Maxwell Davies, as well as many others comp. since 1960, suggest that, for some considerable time to come, reports of the demise of the sym. will prove to have been exaggerated. (4)In the USA 'symphony' also means 'symphony orchestra'. (5) Sym. concert means, pedantically, a concert at which a sym. is played, but it is generally used to mean a concert by a sym. orch., whatever it is playing.

Symphony in 3 Movements. Orch. work by Stravinsky comp. 1942--5 and f.p. NY P.O. cond. Stravinsky 1946. F.Eng.p. 1946, cond. Ansermet (broadcast). Work's genesis is of special interest; first movement began, in 1942, as pf. conc. or conc. for orch. with concertante pf. part, inspired by film on China's 'scorched earth' tactics. 2nd movement was written as acc. for apparition of Virgin Mary in film Song of Bernadette, an abortive project where Stravinsky was concerned. 3rd movement influenced by wartime newsreels.

Symphony of a Thousand. Nickname, not wholly approved by the composer,for Mahler's Sym. No. 8 in Eb major, comp. 1906--7, f.p. Munich 1910 (cond. Mahler), because of the huge forces employed to perf. it. It is, however, not necessary to use 1,000 people, although at the f.p. more than that number were on the platform. F.Eng.p. London 1930 (Wood).

Symphony of Psalms. Work for mixed ch. and orch. in 3 movements by Stravinsky, Lat. text being drawn from the Psalms 39, 40, and 150. Comp. 1930 to commission from Boston S.O. for 50th anniversary. F.p. Brussels 1930, cond. Ansermet; f.p. in USA 6 days later, Boston, cond. Koussevitzky; f.p.in England London 1931, cond. Stravinsky.

Syncopation. Deviceused by composers in order to vary position of the stress on notes so as to avoid regular rhythm. Syncopation is achieved by accenting a weak instead of a strong beat, by putting rests on strong beats, by holding on over strong beats, and by introducing a sudden change of time-signature. First used at time of Ars Nova, and exploited to fullest capabilities by jazz musicians, often in improvisation. Stravinsky, Bartók, etc. also employ syncopation with dramatic effect.

Synthesizer. Term for system of elec. apparatus which can be used to control or produce sounds (usually from a kbd.). Used by composers of elec. mus. Its invention, by Robert Moog in 1965, revolutionized elec. comp. by speeding up the process and doing away with drudgery of assembling and splicing small sections of tape. The first synthesizer was built from voltage-controlled and selected non-voltage-controlled components. It could play itself in mobile sound patterns which might be recurrent or non-repetitive and could also, by use of a device called a 'sequencer', memorize long and complex mus. structures and play them live without recording or tape editing. (It is possible to reproduce instr. mus. on a synthesizer, as was convincingly demonstrated in 1969 by the success of Walter Carlos's commercial recording 'Switched-on Bach'.) Its numerous functions are controlled by punched paper tape. A means of producing mobility is by an 'envelope shaper', a device to control the shape of a sound or other parameter. It has controls which est. the time of attack, sustain, decay, and end of a sound. An initial drawback was that most synthesizers could perform only one note at a time. Since 1976, however, polyphonic synthesizers have been developed. See also Electronic music.

Syrinx. For solo fl., by Debussy, comp. 1913 for Louis Fleury who gave f.p. Paris 1913. Syrinx was the Gr. term for the panpipes, instr. played by the mythical god Pan (half-goat, half-man).

Szabó, Ferenc (b Budapest, 1902; d Budapest, 1969). Hung. composer. Studied Liszt Acad. of Mus., Budapest, 1922--6 (comp. with Kodály, etc.). Lived in Russia and Ger. 1932--45. Prof. of comp. Szymanowski, Karol (b Tymoshovka, Ukraine, 1882; d Lausanne, 1937). Polish composer. Boyhood spent in Ukraine, where many Poles owned land. Showed early mus. promise and because of leg injury which compelled a sedentary life, studied much mus. and conceived lifelong enthusiasm for Chopin. Studied theory with Neuhaus and wrote 9 pf. preludes in 1900. In 1901 went to Warsaw to study comp. with Noskowski. Moved to Berlin 1905, attracted by brilliance of Strauss and others, and wrote first sym. there. With 3 compatriots (Fitelberg, Rózycki, and Szeluta) formed 'Young Poland in Music' soc., the Berlin P.O. giving a concert of their works. Left Berlin 1908, returning to Tymoshovka, his mus. being championed by other Polish musicians, e.g. the pianist Arthur Rubinstein, the cond. Fitelberg, and his sister Stanislawa, for whose sop. v. he wrote many of his songs. Another Polish virtuoso, the violinist Paul Kochánsky, was inspiration of the 1st vn. conc. and other works. Family home was destroyed in 1917 and for four years Szymanowski abandoned music while he wrote a long novel Efebos (the manuscript was destroyed in Warsaw in 1939). Left Russia 1920 for Warsaw, but visited Paris, London, and NY, taking part in concerts of modern mus. Back in Poland, wrote several works inspired by folklore. Became dir., Warsaw Cons. 1926, revolutionizing teaching methods. F.p. in 1928 of his Stabat Mater was his first big Polish triumph. Resigned directorship 1929 because of tuberculosis but became rector of Warsaw Acad. (which replaced Cons.) in 1930, resigning in 1932 after a dispute. Completed 2nd vn. conc. 1933, f.p. being given by Kochánsky shortly before he died. In 1933--4, Szymanowski toured Europe as solo pianist in his Symphonie Concertante, but continued ill-health weakened him and he died in a sanatorium. Szymanowski is typical of many 20th-cent. composers who searched for some key to the liberation of what they felt to be their individual characteristics. Through his works can be traced the influence of the Ger. school of Strauss, etc., from which he was released by admiration for Debussy and the Fr. 'impressionist' composers. From them he took what he needed, experimenting further with atonality, polytonality, microtones, elaborate rhythms, and declamatory passages. The return to Poland awakened his latent nationalism---inspired by Chopin---as he studied his native mus., particularly the songs and dances of the Tatra mountaineers, which led to the Mazurek for pf. and the colourful, exotic ballet Harnasie. His opera King Roger is among his best works, a notable example of modern romanticism, and the vn. concs. are particularly rewarding. The Stabat Mater is an especially beautiful setting. Prin. comps.:

t. Tonic sol-fa symbol for 7th degree of scale, pronounced te.

Tabachnik, Michel (b Geneva, 1942). Swiss cond. and composer. Studied Geneva Cons. Ass. cond. to Boulez for 4 years. Début Royan Fest. Guest cond. with European and Brit. orchs. Cond., Gulbenkian Orch., Lisbon, 1973--5. Art. dir. Ensemble Inter-Contemporain, Fr., 1976--7, Cond. Lorraine P.O. from 1975.

Tabarro, Il (The Cloak). Opera in 1 act by Puccini to lib. by Adami, after Didier Gold's play La Houppelande (1910). Part 1 of Il trittico. Comp. 1913--6. Prod. NY Met. 1918, Rome and Chicago 1919, London 1920.

Tabla. Indian small hand-drum with single head but double body of 2 truncated cones. Played with fingers. Usually wedged in crook of right knee of seated player. Some Western composers have scored for it, e.g. Berio and Cowell.

Tablature. System of writing down mus. to be perf. other than by use of notes. Instead figures, letters, and similar signs were used. There were systems of org. and lute tablature in which the symbols represented the position of the player's fingers, not the pitch. Diagrammatic notation used today in popular mus. for guitar, ukelele, etc. is type of tablature.

Tabor. Small drum used in medieval times to accompany folk-dancing, usually played in conjunction with end-blown pipe. Performer struck drum with one hand, holding pipe in the other.

Tacet (Lat.). It is silent. Indication that particular performer or instr. has no part to play for considerable time. Tacet al fine means he has no more to play.

Tactus (Lat.). Term used in 15th and 16th cents. to designate a specified 'beat', either a unit of time, or the cond.'s beat. For a considerable period, the tactus was the equivalent of the whole-note.

Taddei, Giuseppe (b Genoa, 1916). It. bar. Opera début Rome 1936. London début 1947, Salzburg 1948, CG 1960. Famous as Scarpia in Tosca, and in buffo roles.

Tafelmusik (Ger.). Table-music. Mus. to be sung or played during or after a meal. Telemann wrote a fine example of Tafelmusik 1733, in 3 sections, each with 6 movements, for various groups of instr. In Der Rosenkavalier, the off-stage band in Act III is described to Baron Ochs as Tafelmusik. Tagliabue, Carlo (b Mariano Comense, 1898; d Monza, 1978). It. bar. Opera début Lodi 1922 as Amonasro. Sang at Scala, Milan, 1930--53. CG 1938 and 1946, NY Met 1937--9. Noted Verdi bar., also sang Wagner parts in It.

Tagliavini, Ferruccio (b Reggio Emilia, 1913). It. ten. Studied Parma and Florence. Opera début Florence 1939. Leading It. lyric ten. during World War II, then Buenos Aires 1946--7, NY Met. 1947--54, CG 1950. Excelled in bel canto roles, such as Nemorino, Duke of Mantua, etc.

Tahiti Trot (Shostakovich). See Tea for Two.

Taille (Fr.). Old name for middle v., particularly ten., and for instr. of similar register, e.g. taille de basson, ten. ob., or taille, va. In Bach's cantatas, taille is taken to mean ten. ob. (oboe dacaccia).

Tailleferre, Germaine (b Parc St Maur, nr. Paris, 1892; d Paris, 1983). Fr. composer and pianist, one of Les Six. Studied Paris Cons. Pupil of Ravel. Comps. incl. pf. conc., harp concertino, conc. for 2 pf., v., and orch., conc. for bar., pf., and orch., str. qts., vn. sonata, ballets, etc.

Tajo, Italo (b Pinerolo, 1915). It. bass. Studied in Turin. Opera début Turin 1935 as Fafner. Sang at first Edinburgh Fest., 1947, with Glyndebourne Co. San Francisco 1948--56, CG 1950, NY Met. 1948--50. Outstanding in Donizetti buffo roles. After 1966 taught at Cincinnati Cons.

Takács, Jenö (b Cinfalva, 1902). Austrian composer, pianist, and teacher. Studied comp. in Vienna with Gál and Marx. Taught at Cairo Cons. 1927--32, 1934--6, Univ. of Philippines, Manila, 1932--4. Visit to USA as pianist 1938. Dir., Pécs Cons. 1942--8. Taught at Univ. of Cincinnati from 1970. Deeply interested by folk mus. of many nations. Works incl. Tarantella for pf. and orch., chamber mus., and many pf. pieces.

Takemitsu, Toru (b Tokyo, 1930). Japanese composer, mainly self-taught except for study with Kiyose 1948--50. Organized experimental workshop for painters and composers in Tokyo, 1951. Art. dir. of Space Theatre at Osaka Exposition 1970. His mus. uses avant-garde procedures and much of it is on tape. Influenced at first by Schoenberg, Messiaen, and Schaeffer's musique concrète. Much concerned, like Ligeti, with timbre. Works incl. Relief statique on tape (1955), Requiem for str. (1957), Music of Tree, orch. (1961), Coral Island, sop. and orch. (1962), The Dorian Horizon, 17 str. (1966), November Steps No. 1, shakuhachi, biwa, orch. (1967), Asterism, pf. and orch. Tala. Indian term for rhythm, being a fixed time-span for mus., repeated in cycles, and articulated by hand-beats, drum-beats, or by a percussive idiophone.

Tale of Two Cities, A. Opera in 3 acts by A. Benjamin to lib. by Cedric Cliffe after Dickens. Comp. 1949--50 and awarded a Fest. of Britain prize (1951) but not prod. until 1957 (London, SW). San Francisco 1960.

Tales from the Vienna Woods (Geschichten aus dem Wienerwald). Waltz, Op. 325, by Johann Strauss II. Comp. 1868.

Tales of Hoffmann, The (Contes d'Hoffmann, Les). Opera in prol., 3 acts, and epilogue by Offenbach to lib. by J. Barbier and M. Carré based on stories Der Sandmann, Geschichte von verlorenen Spiegelbilde, and Rat Krespel by E.T.A. Hoffmann. Left incomplete at Offenbach's death (many numbers unfinished, sketches only of others). At f.p. the Giulietta act was omitted and Guiraud provided revisions, recitatives (in place of the correct spoken dialogue), and some of the orchestration. In 1893, Giulietta act was restored as Act 2, where it is placed in the largely corrupt Choudens edn. of 1907. New edn. by Fritz Oeser (1980) attempts to interpret Offenbach's final intentions, with acts in the order: 1, Olympia; 2, Antonia; 3, Giulietta. F.p. Paris 1881, NY 1882, London 1907. Famous Barcarolle, orig. written for Die Rheinnixen (1864), occurs in Giulietta act as orch. intermezzo before epilogue.

Tallis, Thomas (b c.1505; d Greenwich, 1585). Eng. composer and organist. Organist, Waltham Abbey from c. 1538 to 1540. Lay clerk, Canterbury Cath. 1540--2. Gentleman of the Chapel Royal 1540--85, serving under Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth I, and organist jointly with Byrd. In 1575 Elizabeth granted Tallis and Byrd letters patent giving them 21-year monopoly for printing mus. and mus. paper. In that year they pubd. 34 Cantiones sacrae in 5 and 6 parts (16 by Tallis and 18 by Byrd). Tallis wrote some pieces for kbd. and viols, but is mainly known for church mus. of great contrapuntal ingenuity and technical dexterity. In this respect his masterpiece is perhaps the 40-part motet Spem in alium, in the opening section of which 20 vv. enter successively with theme in imitation. The other 20 then enter with new material and, after passages for varying numbers of vv., all 40 combine for the ending. Of special interest, too, is the use of modulation in the 2 Lamentations from near the end of his long career. The tune known as Tallis's Canon was one of 9 which Tallis comp. for Archbishop Parker's metrical Whole Psalter, 1567, where it is attached to Ps. 67. In 1732 it was linked with Bishop Ken's Winchester evening hymn, 'Glory to thee, my God, this night'. Another tune written for this psalter was that used by Vaughan Williams in 1910 as the basis of his Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for str.

Tchaikovsky (Chaykovsky), Pyotr (Ilyich) (b Votkinsk, 1840; d St Petersburg, 1893). Russ. composer and cond. Studied law before entering St Petersburg Cons. (comp. with A. Rubinstein) 1863--5. Went to Moscow 1866, becoming prof. of harmony at new Cons. under directorship of N. Rubinstein. During first 2 years there wrote First Sym. and opera

Voyevoda. In 1868 met nationalist group of young Russ. composers headed by Rimsky-Korsakov and was stirred by their enthusiasm, as is shown by his 2nd Sym., but later came to be regarded by them as cosmopolitan rather than truly Russ. From 1869 to 1875 wrote 3 more operas and first pf. conc. and was mus. critic of Russkiye vedomosti 1872--6, going to first Bayreuth Fest. 1876. In 1877 married one of his pupils, separating from her 9 weeks later and coming near to mental collapse, psychological result of fatal step for a man of homosexual tendencies. At this time was taken under patronage of wealthy widow, Nadezhda von Meck, who out of admiration gave him yearly allowance which enabled him to abandon teaching and devote himself wholly to comp. She and Tchaikovsky never spoke to each other, though they corresponded voluminously. 4th Sym. is ded. to her. Went to Switz. and It., composing opera Eugene Onegin, prod. by students of Moscow Cons. 1879, with moderate success. By 1880, his works were popular in Russia (thanks to advocacy of N. Rubinstein), and in Brit. and USA but still met with hostility in Paris and Vienna. In 1885 bought country house, first of several, at Klin, living in hermit-like isolation. There, wrote Manfred and in 1887 made débüt in Moscow as cond. of rev. version of opera Vakula the Smith under title Oxana's Caprice. In 1888 toured Ger., Fr., and London as cond., returning to Ger. and Eng. in 1889. Ballet Sleeping Beauty prod. 1890, after which Tchaikovsky went to Florence to work on opera Queen of Spades, prod. St Petersburg 1890. Year ended with sudden rupture of relationship with Mme von Meck; illness had dictated her decision, which wounded Tchaikovsky deeply. Visited USA with great success 1891, and in Jan. 1892 heard Mahler conduct Eugene Onegin at Hamburg. Ballet Nutcracker comp. 1891--2, and work started on a 6th Sym. In that year, again visited Vienna and in 1893 went to Eng., where hon. doctorate of mus. was conferred on him by Cambridge Univ. During 1893 wrote 6th Sym., having abandoned sym. begun in 1891--2 and re-worked it as a 3rd pf. conc., eventually retaining only one movement (2nd and 3rd orch. from the surviving sketches by Taneyev after Tchaikovsky's death). F.p. of the sym. was only moderately successful, though Tchaikovsky was convinced it was his best work. It is usually stated that 4 days later he felt ill and drank a large glassful of unboiled water (possibly with deliberate intent) and developed cholera, which led to his death. But in 1979 the Russian scholar Alexandra Orlova revealed some substantiation for the theory that the composer's death was suicide by poison, ordered by a private court of his former law-student colleagues to prevent revelation of a homosexual scandal involving the aristocracy. Not all specialists on the composer accept the validity of this research. Few composers are more popular with audiences than Tchaikovsky; the reasons are several and understandable. His music is extremely tuneful, luxuriously and colourfully scored, and filled with emotional fervour directed to the heart rather than to the head (though the notion that Tchaikovsky's syms. are lacking in symphonic thinking and structure does not bear serious consideration). Undoubtedly the emotional temperature of the mus. reflected the man's nature. He was doubly afflicted: by repressed homosexuality (hence his disastrous attempt at marriage) and by the tendency to extreme fluctuations between elation and depression, each success being followed by a period of introspective gloom and melancholy which stemmed from psychological defects rather than from 'typical Russian melancholy'. This showed itself also in his attitude to his visits abroad. As soon as he left Russia he was ill with homesickness; once back, he was restlessly planning to be off again. In 19th-cent. Russ. mus., Tchaikovsky stands alone. His Romeo and Juliet was ded. to Balakirev, one of the 'Five', but he never identified himself with out-and-out nationalism. He succumbed to the influence of neither Brahms nor Wagner, but greatly admired the Fr. mus. of Bizet and Saint-Saëns. This can be linked with his lifelong passion for Mozart, and many passages in Tchaikovsky's mus. are as delicately detailed and coloured as works by Bizet and Mozart. The other element of his nature, the fate-laden, Byronic, emotional impact of the last 3 syms., is traceable in many episodes in the operas, notably Eugene Onegin. None of his operas was a success on its first appearance, but Onegin and Queen of Spades are now widely perf. and admired, and adventurous cos. have explored the others, which, however, are marred by dramatic defects. The true theatrical Tchaikovsky is to be found in the ballets, a supreme combination of melodic inventiveness, grand sweep, and constant freshness. Nor should the superb songs be forgotten: in them, in miniature, the soul of Tchaikovsky is enshrined as surely as in the great syms., concs., and orch. masterpieces. Prin. works:

operas: Voyevoda, Op. 3 (Dream on the Volga) (1867--8); Undine (destroyed) (1869); Oprichnik (The Life Guardsman) (1870--2); Vakula the Smith, Op. 14 (Vakula kuznets) (1874, rev. 1885--7 as Cherevichki (The Little Shoes) or Oxana's Caprice); Eugene Onegin (Evgeny Onyegin), Op. 24 (1877--8); The Maid of Orleans (Orleanskaya Deva) (1878--9, rev. 1882); Mazeppa (1881--3); The Sorceress (Charodeyka) (1885--7); Queen of Spades (Pikovaya Dama), Op. 68 (1890); Yolanta, Op. 69 (1891).

Te. In Tonic sol-fa, spoken name for 7th degree of scale, written t.

Te Deum Laudamus (We praise thee, O God). Ecclesiastical canticle, or hymn of thanksgiving, the words of which were probably written in 5th cent. Adopted by both R.C. and Anglican churches. Has traditional plainsong melody, but has been set by innumerable composers, incl. Purcell, Handel, Berlioz, Verdi, Dvořák, Bruckner, Vaughan Williams, Britten, Walton, often on highly elaborate scale for soloists, ch., and orch. as well as more simply. Tea for Two. Song by Youmans, comp. for musical No, No, Nanette (1925). In 1928 orch. version was made by Shostakovich in, it is said, 45 mins. at the request of the cond. Malko who wanted something extra to perf. at a concert of Shostakovich's mus. at Moscow Cons. on 25 Nov. 1928. The cond. Aleksandr Gauk included it as an entr'acte in Shostakovich's ballet The Age of Gold. Shostakovich gave the arrangement the title Tahiti Trot (Taiti trot) because this was the Russ. name for the song, which enjoyed great popularity in the USSR when it was new.

Tear, Robert (b Barry, Glamorgan, 1939). Welsh ten. Choral scholarship to King's, Cambridge, where he read mus. but took degree in Eng. Studied singing with Julian Kimbell. Telemann, Georg Philipp (b Magdeburg, 1681; d Hamburg, 1767). Ger. composer and organist. Self-taught by study of scores (esp. those of Lully and Campra). Organist, Neuekirche, Leipzig, 1704, having already written several operas. Kapellmeister at Eisenach 1708--12, moving then to Frankfurt. In 1721 he went to Hamburg as Kantor of the Johanneum and mus. dir. of the 5 main churches. When in 1722 an attempt was made to prevent his taking part in operatic performances, he retaliated by applying for the vacant post of Kantor at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig. He was appointed, in preference to J. S. Bach, but Hamburg retained him by increasing his salary and appointing him mus. dir. of the Opera. Extremely prolific composer, skilled in counterpoint and of great facility, but his mus. has surface charm rather than depth. The best of it, however, is delightful. Among his voluminous output, which incl. 600 ovs. in the It. style, 44 Passions, 12 complete services, and 40 operas, are the following:

oratorios: Der Tag des Gerichts (The Day of Judgement), Die Tageszeiten (The Times of Day), Der Tod Jesu (The Death of Jesus), Die Auferstehung Christi (The Resurrection of Christ), St Luke Passion (1728, 1744), St Mark Passion (1759), St Matthew Passion (1730).

cantatas: Cantata oder Trauer-Musik eines kunstfahrenden Kanarienvogels (Funeral Music for a sweet-singing canary); Der Schulmeister (The Schoolmaster); Die Landlust (The Joy of Country Life); In dulci jubilo.

orch: Tafelmusik (Table Music) I, II, and III; Suite, Don Quichotte, str. and b.c.; La Lyra, suite in Eb, str. and b.c.; Concertos; 3 tpt., drums, 2 ob., str., b.c.; in G for vn., str., b.c.; A minor for concertino vn., str., b.c.; C major, 2 vn., str., E minor, fl., str.; E minor, 2 fl., vn., str.; E minor, ob., str.; A major, ob. d'amore, str.; A minor, treble recorder, viola da gamba, str.; D major for D tpt., str.; D major, hn., str.; C major, 4 vn.; G major, 4 vn.; 12 12-part qts. Tema (It.). Theme, as in Tema con variazioni, Theme and Variations.

Temperament. Adjustment in tuning (i.e. 'tempering') of mus. intervals away from 'natural' scale so that such pairs of notes as B# and C, or C# and D $\flat$ , are combined instead of being treated individually. This leaves neither note accurate but sufficiently so for the ear to accept it. In kbd. instr. this avoids unmanageable number of finger-keys. The pf., organ, and other fixed-pitch modern instr., are tuned to equal temperament, in which each semitone is made an equal interval, making it easy to play in any key and to modulate. Before Equal Temperament (which was introduced for pfs. in Eng. in 1846 and for organs a little later), the commonest system was mean-tone temperament, which left certain keys tolerable, others less so, and some unusable. The untempered scale is known as just intonation. Instr. such as the vn. family can have no system of temperament, the player determining the pitch and checking it by ear. Some 20th-cent. composers have restored 12-note scale to just intonation. Others have used microtonal scales in just relationship. Still more have used 'prepared' instr. producing unexpected pitches, or elec. systems, or computers.

Temperley, Nicholas (b Beaconsfield, 1932). Eng. musicologist, composer, and pianist. Studied RCM and Cambridge Univ. Ass. lecturer in mus., Cambridge Univ. 1961--6. Theremin. 'Space-controlled' elec. instr. developed by the Russian, Lev Theremin (b St Petersburg, 1896), and first publicly demonstrated in the Soviet Union 1920. Introduced to USA 1927. 'Space-controlled' means that it is played by movements of the hands, which do not touch the instr. The theremin is built like a radio receiver, with an antenna protruding from the right and a metal loop on the left. The mus. is prod. by 2 high-frequency circuits, employing oscillating (thermionic) valves, one being at constant frequency while that of the other is altered when the player moves his hand through the air in front of the antenna. The resultant oscillation is called 'heterodyning' ('beating together'), and the heterodyne frequency can be made audible by amplification through aloudspeaker. Vol. is controlled by a switch and by the movement of the player's left hand over the metal loop. Sounds similar to the human v. or to those of about 7 instr. can be prod. Plays only one note at a time; range of 5 octaves. First comp. to use instr. was Pashchenko's Symphonic Mystery, for theremin and orch., Leningrad, 1924. Martinianu wrote a Fantasy for theremin, str. qt., ob., and pf.

Thoroughbass. See Basso continuo. Three Choirs Festival. Name for the annual meeting of the 3 (Cath.) Choirs of Gloucester, Hereford, and Worcester, held by rotation in these cities. First was held probably in 1715 with aim of alleviating poverty of widows and orphans of clergy in the 3 dioceses. Early meetings lasted 2 days, and in 18th cent. mus. of Handel was frequently perf. In 1737 William Boyce was engaged for Worcester as chief cond. of fest. Messiah was first oratorio to be perf. complete in the caths. (Hereford 1759, Worcester 1761, Gloucester 1769). In 19th cent., 'star' singers became chief attractions and the mus. of Mendelssohn the staple fare. In 1875 the church authorities at Worcester refused use of the cath. because the perfs. could not be equated with the idea of worship. In the 2nd half of the 19th cent. the fests. became a leading forum for Eng. oratorios etc., from Sullivan's The Prodigal Son (1869) to Parry's Job in 1892. In 1878 one of the orch. violinists was a local man, Edward Elgar (a Catholic), who was to become the prin. figure at the fests. from 1902 to 1933, although few of his works were specially written for the 3 Choirs. Exceptions were Froissart (1890), Lux Christi (1896), and the Te Deum and Benedictus (1897). The organists at this period, Ivor Atkins (Worcester), G. R. Sinclair (Hereford), and Herbert Brewer (Gloucester) were Elgar's friends, Sinclair being immortalized as G.R.S. in the Enigma Variations. Elgar cond. Gerontius at Worcester, 1902; thereafter his conducting of his own major works was the foundation of the programmes each year. Other composers who came to be assoc. with the 20th-cent. fests. were Coleridge Taylor, Walford Davies, Vaughan Williams (several of whose works had f.ps. at the fests., e.g. Tallis Fantasia, 5 Mystical Songs and Hodie), Holst (Choral Fantasia), Bliss, Howells, Finzi, etc. Sibelius's Luonnotar had f.p. at Gloucester in 1913, and Kodály's Psalmus Hungaricus was cond. by the composer there in 1928. There were no fests. 1914--19 but they resumed at Worcester in 1920. A similar break occurred 1939--45. Since 1945 the programmes, both sacred and secular, have been much expanded and a more adventurous policy has been followed. For many years the LSO led by W. H. Reed provided the chief orch. support, but the RPO and CBSO have lately been engaged. Works by John McCabe, Geoffrey Burgo, Philip Cannon, Malcolm Williamson, Jonathan Harvey, Gordon Crosse, Maxwell Davies, Christopher Steel, and others have been commissioned or performed, and the programmes have been broadened to include Mahler's 8th Sym., David Fanshawe's African Sanctus, and Walton's Belshazzar's Feast (for many years regarded as too 'barbaric' for these surroundings).

Became schoolmaster and cond. choral soc.; in 1920 studied counterpoint and fugue with R. O. Morris. Mus. dir., Morley College, 1940--51, dir. of Bath Fest. 1969--74. Imprisoned during 1943 for failure to comply with conditions of his conscientious exemption from military service. C.B.E. 1959. Knighted 1966. C.H. 1979. O.M. 1983. Tippett's life is his mus. A late developer, he did not achieve any kind of recognition until 1935 with his first str. qt. The work which made his name more familiar was the Conc. for Double Str. Orch. (1938--9). His oratorio A Child of Our Time, comp. 1939--41, was among the first of his works which reconcile personal vision with expression of 'collective' feeling. After 6 years of work he completed his first opera, The Midsummer Marriage in 1952. Though not successful until its revival over 20 years later, this opera marks the culmination of Tippett's early lyrical style, a style that is complex in its madrigalian, contrapuntal, inter-weaving but which repays close study. He entered a tougher middle phase in 1962 with the opera King Priam and the 2nd pf. sonata, works of rhetoric and drama. This period culminated in the Concerto for Orchestra and the elaborate choral work The Vision of St Augustine. With the opera The Knot Garden (1969) Tippett entered a 3rd period in which he fused his 2 earlier periods, the 'lyrical' and the 'disjunct', as they have been called, and also extended his bounds by reference to popular and serious mus., past and present, e.g. 'blues', quotations from Monteverdi, and a tighter control of form as shown in the 3rd pf. sonata and the 4th sym. Yet, like all great composers, Tippett has remained essentially himself, and the flowing lines of the Double Conc. are still discernible in King Priam, just as the exuberant, life-enhancing lyricism of The Midsummer Marriage spills over into the pf. conc., the Corelli Fantasia, and the 4th sym. Some of his determinedly popular passages in recent years may come to sound increasingly self-conscious, but this is part of the price one pays for Tippett's open-eyed, even naive outlook on the world expressed in mus. of exceptional technical sophistication. Prin. works:

Toccata (It.). Touched. One of oldest names for kbd. piece (org., hpd., etc.), orig. a short movement, often merely a prelude, in which the player's 'touch' was displayed through rapidity and delicacy. But note that Monteverdi's first opera Orfeo, 1607, begins with a Toccata for baroque tpts. Later the toccata form was combined with a ricercare, and Bach wrote several toccatas and fugues. Bach also comp. hpd. toccatas in several movements. Several 20th-cent. composers have used the term toccata for movements of orch. works, e.g. Vaughan Williams for first movement of pf. conc. and 4th movement of 8th Sym. First printed source for use of word is G. A. Casteliono's Intabolatura de leuto de diversi autori (1536). Earliest printed keyboard toccatas were by S. Bertoldo (1591).

Tonal. (1) Opposite to real in such technicalities as Answer and Sequence. See Fugue. (2) Of keys, as in tonal basis. (3) Of tonality, i.e. the opposite of atonal, as in tonal comp.

Tonality. Key, meaning particularly observance of a single tonic key as basis of comp., thus, bitonality, use of 2 keys at once; polytonality, use of several keys at once; atonality, loyalty to no key.

Tonart (Ger.). Mode, scale, or key.

Tondichter (Ger.). Sound-poet, i.e. composer.

Tondichtung (Ger.). Tone-poem; term preferred to symphonic poem by R. Strauss.

Tone. (1) Mus. sound, as in analysis to show that a vn. note has several different tones. (2) Interval of major 2nd, e.g. C-D, E-F#. (3) Quality of sound, as in 'sweet tone', 'harsh tone', 'dry tone'. (4) Plainsong melody, as in Gregorian tone. (5) Amer. usage for 'note', hence 12-tone mus. and tone-row instead of 12-note and note-row.

Tone-Cluster. Amer. term for cluster, i.e. group of notes on pf. played by placing the forearm flat on the keys.

Tone-Colour. See Timbre.

Tone-Poem. See Symphonic Poem.

Tone Roads. Name of 2 works by Ives. No. 1 for small orch., comp. 1911; No. 3 for chamber orch., comp. 1915.

Tonguing. Use of the tongue to articulate certain notes in playing of wind instr. Thus, single-, double-, and triple-tonguing refer to increasingly fast playing. Flutter-tonguing (Ger. Flatterzunge) is used chiefly by flautists, but occasionally by clarinettists and trumpeters, for a trilling effect required by composers from R. Strauss and Mahler to the present day.

Tonic. First degree of the major or minor scale. The 'key-note' from which the key takes its name, as Key of A etc.

Tonic Sol-Fa. Eng. system of sight-singing and notation first mooted by D. Sower in 1832, developed by Sarah Ann Glover (1785--1867) as Norwich Sol-fa, and pioneered by John Curwen (1816--80) in the 1840s. Based on movable-doh system of Solmization. Notes of major scale are named (in ascending order) doh, ray, me, fah, soh, lah, te, where doh is the tonic, other notes being thus related to tonic of the moment, not fixed in pitch. Minor is treated as mode of the major, first note being lah, 2nd te, 3rd doh, etc. In notation notes are written as d, r, m, f, s, l, t. Sharps and flats are indicated by change of vowel, sharps to 'e', flats to 'a' (pronounced 'aw'). E.g. doh sharpened is de; me flattened is ma. Double dots (:) separate beat from beat; single dots are used when a beat has to be divided into a half-beat, commas to divide half-beats into quarters. Horizontal lines show that notes are held; blanks indicate rests.

Tonkunst (Ger.). 'Sound art'. Music.

Tono (It., plural toni). Tone---in all the various senses of the English word (see Tone). Also mode, key.

Tono (Sp.). Type of part-song or madrigal, of 2 or 3 stanzas, sung before play in 17th cent.

Tonreihe (Ger.). Note-row.

Tonus Peregrinus (Lat.). Foreign tone. (1) Medieval term for minor scale. (2) Plainsong for Psalm 114 (When Israel went out of Egypt).

Transition. (1) Modulation from one key to another, particularly of a sudden and abrupt nature. (2) Transition passage is one which acts as link between 2 more substantial passages (in sym., conc., etc.).

Transposing Instruments. Instruments which are not notated at their true pitch but (mechanically and without any effort on the player's part) produce the effect of that pitch. For example, the cl. is made in several sizes, the Bb and A being the most often used because these keys reduce the difficulty of playing in the flat and sharp keys, respectively, by reducing the number of flats or sharps with which the player has to cope. In the Bb instr., that key is to its player the 'natural key' (as C is to the pianist): the player faced with music in (say) the key of Eb finds the music written in the key of F, i.e. there are 2 flats fewer to consider. Similarly with the A instrument a piece written in the key of B is notated in the key of D, i.e. there are 3 sharps fewer to consider. Thus music for the Bb cl. is notated a tone higher than it is to sound and music for the A cl. a minor 3rd higher. Many players, with improved mechanism and developed technique, use the Bb instrument for all keys, making the transposition mentally. On the rare C cl. the note sounded is the note written; the Eb cl. transposes 1½ tones higher than written note; the bass clarinet in Bb an octave and a tone lower. The transposing instruments are as follows: (a) Bass Fl.; (b) Cor Anglais, Ob. d'Amore, Ob. in Eb, Heckelphone, Sarrusophone (c) Cl. in Bb and A, Bass Cl., High Cl. in Eb and D, Alto Cl. in Eb and F, Bassoon Hn., Pedal Cl. (d) Saxophones (e) Cornets (f) French Hns. (g) Tpts. (h) Saxhorns (i) Kettledrums (up to Mozart's period, but excluding Handel).

Transposition. Changing of the pitch of a comp. without other change, e.g. the raising of the pitch of a piece in the key of C to that of key D, or its lowering to the key of B or A.

Transverse Flute. Side-blown fl., distinguished from recorder, which is end-blown and therefore held pointing downwards.

Tremolando (It.). Trembling. With tremolo effect.

Tremolo (It.). Shaking, trembling. (1) In playing of str. instr., the rapid reiteration of a note or chord by back-and-forth strokes of the bow; also, on other instr. as well as str., the very rapid alternation between 2 notes. Note that tremolo is the rapid iteration or alternation of notes, whereas vibrato is fluctuation of pitch.

Tremulant. Mechanical org. device, operated by a stop-knob, which varies the wind-pressure and thus imparts a 'wobbling' effect to the note being sounded.

Trepak. Lively Russ. popular dance in ;d2;i4 time, introduced by some Russ. composers, e.g. Mussorgsky, into their works. Famous example is in Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker.

Triad. Chord of 3 notes, basically a 'root' and the notes a third and a fifth above it, forming two superimposed thirds, e.g. C--E--G ('common chord' of C major). If lower third is major and the upper minor, the triad is major. If lower third is minor and the upper major, the triad is minor. If both are major the triad is Augmented. If both are minor, the triad is Diminished.

Trial. Term applied at Paris Opéra-Comique to ten. of dramatic rather than vocal powers who specializes in comedy. Named after Antoine Trial (b Avignon, 1737; d Paris, 1795).

Trial by Jury. Operetta in 1 act (styled 'dramatic cantata') by Sullivan, lib. by Gilbert, the only one of their works sung throughout (i.e. no spoken dialogue). Prod. London 1875.

Triangle. Perc.instr. of indefinite pitch, made of metal shaped into a triangle and struck with metal stick to give tinkling sound. Much used by composers to intensify excitement, e.g. in 3rd movement of Brahms's 4th Sym. Liszt's Pf. Conc. No. 1 in Eb has important part for triangle. Tribschen (Triebeschen). Villa near Lucerne, Switz., on Vierwaldstätter lake, where Wagner lived from 1866 until 1872 when he moved to Bayreuth. On its staircase on Christmas Day 1870, Siegfried Idyll was f.p. (orig. title Tribschen Idyll). (The spelling Triebeschen, although incorrect, was Wagner's own.)

Tricorne, Le(Falla). See Three-Cornered Hat, The.

Trillodel Diavolo (Tartini). See Devil's Trill.

Trimble, Lester Albert (b Bangor, Wisconsin, 1923). Amer. composer. Studied Carnegie Inst. of Technology 1944--8, at Tanglewood 1947 with Milhaud, and in Paris 1948 with Milhaud, Honegger, and N. Boulanger. Mus. critic NY Herald Tribune 1951--9. Prof. of mus., Univ. of Maryland 1963--7 and at Juilliard Sch. 1971--3. Works incl. opera Boccaccio's Nightingale, 3 syms., Sonic Landscape for orch., 4 Fragments from The Canterbury Tales for sop. and ens.

Trinity College of Music, London. Mus. coll. incorporated as Trinity Coll., London, 1875, developed from mus. soc. founded 1872. In 1874 complete system of testing by examination, both of teachers and their pupils, was organized at centres throughout Brit. and Ireland and, from 1876, at centres in S. Africa and other places then under Brit. rule. Today TCL examiners visit nearly 40 countries. Now part of Univ. of London. Awards graduate diploma (GTCL).

Trinklied (Ger.). Drinking song.

Trio (It.). Three. (1) Any body of 3 performers together, or piece of mus. written for them to perform, e.g. string trio, usually vn., va., vc., piano trio, usually pf., vn., vc. The comp. called a trio is usually in sonata form and in 3 movements. (2) The central section of a minuet, scherzo, or march, usually in gentler contrast to the first section and its repeat. So called because formerly it was written in 3-part harmony, as for a trio. (3) A vocal trio may be acc. or unacc. In the 16th cent. the minor-key sections of the mass were often written for 3 vv.; there were also 3-part canzonets. In opera, the simultaneous combination of 3 vv. is a trio, a famous example being that for 3 sop. in Act 3 of Strauss's Der Rosenkavalier, but there are of course many examples of trios for 3 different types of v. (4) For the org. a trio is intended for manuals and the pedals, each in a different registration for contrast (and, of course, played by one performer).

Trionfi (It.). Triumphs. Theatrical triptych by Orff comprising Carmina Burana, Catulli Carmina, Trionfo di Afrodite.

Trionfo di Afrodite (Triumph of Aphrodite). Scenic conc. by Orff, the 3rd part of his trilogy Trionfi. Comp. 1950--1, to Lat. and Gr. texts by Catullus, Sappho, and Euripides. For soloists, ch., and orch. Prod. Milan 1953. Trio Sonata. Comp. prevalent in late 17th and early 18th cents. (Baroque period), usually for 2 vn. and vc. or bass viol, with kbd. continuo. The most important genre of Baroque chamber mus. Towards the end of the 17th cent. the form diverged into the sonata da chiesa and the sonata da camera. Among the most celebrated examples of the trio sonata are the 48 by Corelli, 12 by Purcell, 28 by Handel, 14 by Fran;alcois Couperin, and 12 by Vivaldi.

Triple Concerto. Conc. for 3 solo instr. and orch. or ens. Beethoven's is for pf., vn., and vc., but there are other combinations, e.g. Tippett's for vn., va., and vc.

Triple Counterpoint. That concerning 3 vv. or parts which are capable of changing places with one another, so making 6 positions of the parts possible.

Triple-croche (Fr.). Triple-hook. 32nd note, or demisemiquaver.

Triplet. Group of 3 notes, or notes and rests, equal in time-value, written where a group of 2 notes is suggested by time-signature. Usually indicated by adding numeral 3 above each group.

Triple Time. Where the primary division is into 3 beats. Usually indicated by figure 3 (in simple time) or 9 (in compound time) as upper digit of a time-signature, e.g. ;d3;i4 or ;d9;i8.

Tristan. Preludes for pf., orch., and tape by Henze. Comp. 1973. F.p. London, 1974 (Homero Francesch, C. Davis).

Tristan und Isolde. Mus. drama (Handlung, action) in 3 acts by Wagner to his own lib., based on G. von Strassburg's Tristan, c. 1210, and ultimately on Arthurian legend. Comp. 1857--9. Prod. Munich 1865, London 1882, NY Met. 1886. The Prelude to Act I and Isolde's Liebestod (Love Death) are often perf. as concert item.

Tritone. Interval of augmented 4th which comprises 3 whole tones, e.g. from F up or down to B. Difficult to sing, and in medieval times its use was prohibited. There was saying, involving the Hexachord names for the notes, Mi contra fa diabolus est in musica, 'Mi against fa is the devil in music', hence the frequent use of the tritone in comps. to suggest evil.

Trittico, Il (The Triptych). Set of 3 1-act operas for perf. on one evening by Puccini, comprising I Itabarro (The Cloak) (1913--6), Suor Angelica (Sister Angelica) (1917), Gianni Schicchi (1917--8). Prod. NY Met. 1918, Rome and Chicago 1919, London 1920.

Triumphlied (Song of Triumph). Setting by Brahms, his Op. 55, for ch. and orch. of text from Revelation. Comp. 1871, f.p. 1872, to celebrate Prussia's defeat of Fr.

Triumph of Neptune, The. Eng. pantomime in 10 scenes, mus. by Berners, lib. by S. Sitwell, choreog. Balanchine. Prod. London 1926. Some of this was scored by Walton. Orch. suite (1926--7), arr. Berners, longer suite arr. R. Douglas. Triumphs of Oriana, The. Coll. of Eng. madrigals in 5 and 6 parts by various composers, ed. by Morley in honour of Elizabeth I and dated 1601 but issued only after her death in 1603. Modelled on It. Trionfo di Dori 1592. In first edn. 24 composers were incl., as follows; Michael Este (Hence Stars); Daniel Norcome (With Angel's Face); John Mundy (Lightly she Tripped); Ellis Gibbons (Long live fair Oriana); John Benet (All Creatures now are Merry-minded); John Hilton (Fair Oriana, beauty's Queen); George Marson (The Nymphs and Shepherds danced); Richard Carlton (Calm was the Air); John Holmes (Thus Bonny-boots); Richard Nicholson (Sing shepherds all); Thomas Tomkins (The Fauns and Satyrs); Michael Cavendish (Come gentle Swains); William Cobbold (With Wreaths of Rose and Laurel); Thomas Morley (Arise, awake); John Farmer (Fair Nymphs); John Wilbye (The Lady Oriana); Thomas Hunt (Hark, did ye ever Hear so Sweet a Singing?); Thomas Weelkes (As Vesta was from Latmos Hill descending); John Milton (Fair Orian); Ellis Gibbons (Round about her Chariot); G. Kirbye (Bright Phoebus) (With Angel's Face); Robert Jones (Fair Oriana); John Lisley (Fair Cytherea); Thomas Morley (Hard by a Crystal Fountain); Edward Johnson (Come blessed Bird); Giovanni Croce (Hard by a Crystal Fountain). To these in later edns. were added: Thomas Bateson (When Oriana walked to Take the Air and Hark, hear you not?) and Francis Pilkington (When Oriana walked to Take the Air). There were 2 issues of first edn: in the first Kirbye's madrigal has the words With Angel's Face, already set by Norcome, and in the 2nd the same mus. is set to Bright Phoebus. For 20th-cent. Eng. composers' similar tribute to Elizabeth II, 1953, see Garland for the Queen.

Troilus and Cressida. Opera in 3 acts by Walton to lib. by Christopher Hassall based on Chaucer and other sources (but not Shakespeare). Comp. 1948--54. Prod. CG 1954, San Francisco and NY 1955, Milan 1956; rev. and prod. CG 1963; further rev., with Cressida's role altered to mez., 1972--6, prod. CG 1976.

Tromba. (1) (It.). Trumpet. (2) 8' organ stop.

Tromba da Tirarsi (It.). Drawing-out trumpet. Slide tpt., probably invented in 14th cent., and required by Bach in 7 of his cantatas.

Tromba Marina (It.). Marine trumpet. Not a tpt., but a type of monochord, developed in 12th cent. Had 3-sided body about 4' long, tapering towards pegbox. Single str. (2 after 15th cent.) and played with bow. Produced only natural harmonics (hence assoc. with tpt. tone): player's left thumb lightly touched str(s)., his right hand drawing bow across str(s). Reason for 'marine' in title remains obscure (possibly corruption of Marian).

Tromba Spezzata (It.). Broken trumpet, i.e. Trombone.

Tromboncino, Bartolomeo (b Verona, c.1470; d ?Venice, after 1535). It. composer, prolific composer of frottola. Was at Mantua 1487--1501. In 1499 he murdered his wife and her lover. He was pardoned, but fled from Mantua in 1501 and for the next 6 years was in service of Lucrezia Borgia in Ferrara. In 1521 he settled in Venice.

Trombone (from It., largetrumpet). (1) Non-transposing brass instr., derived from sackbut, of semi-cylindrical bore and cup-mouthpiece, generally equipped with slide which serves to extend length of the tube. In any one of the 7 recognized slide positions, the 7 fundamental notes of harmonic series can be prod. a semitone apart. A few pedal notes can also be prod.: the first tones of the harmonic series in various positions. Tbs. make a noble sound and have been used by composers for dramatic effect, e.g. by Mozart in Don Giovanni and by Beethoven in his 5th sym., (their first use in sym.). Several tb. concs. have been written. In baroque times they were confined to church mus. but are now standard in military and brass bands, and have been effectively used in jazz (several brilliant solo players incl. Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller). Members of the tb. family are: Treble: required in scores by Purcell and Bach; Alto: much used in baroque mus. but later replaced by ten. Britten uses one in The Burning Fiery Furnace; Tenor: the most generally used, notated in either ten. or bass clef, with chromatic range from E below bass stave upwards for about 2; FD octaves; Bass: compass is a 4th below that of ten.; Tenor-bass: ten. with a mechanism which allows for extra length of tubing for conversion to bass; Double-bass or Contrabass: octave in pitch below ten., sometimes required by Wagner; Valve: with valves in place of a slide. made in ten. and bass sizes. (2) Org. stop, type of tuba or tromba, 16' pitch, generally on pedal. Trombonino (It.). Alto trombone.

Trompete (Ger.). Trumpet.

Trompette (Fr.). Trumpet, hence trompette à coulisse, slide tpt.; trompette à pistons, normal tpt.; trompette basse, bass tpt.; trompette cromatique, valve tpt.

Tronco, Tronca (It.). Broken off short, truncated (used of a note, especially in singing).

Trope. (1) Interpolations in plainsong words, resulting either in mus. melisma on one note or a fragment of new melody. Practice flourished from 9th to 15th cent., was abused, and finally banned by Tridentine reform. Survived only as the sequence (trope set to final melisma of Alleluia). (2) Term used by Hauer to describe 44 pairs of unordered hexachords which are basis of his version of 12-note technique.

Troppo (It.). Too much. Found usually in such directions as allegro ma non troppo, fast but not too fast.

Troubadours. See Minstrels.

Trouble in Tahiti. 1-act opera by Leonard Bernstein, to own lib. Prod. Brandeis Univ. June 1952, cond. Bernstein; NY 1958.

Troutbeck, John (b Blencowe, Cumberland, 1832; d Westminster, 1899). Eng. translator and clergyman. Studied Oxford Univ. Precentor, Manchester Cath. 1865--9, minor canon, Westminster Abbey from 1869. For Novello's, trans. Bach Passions, Christmas Oratorio, Magnificat, etc., Beethoven Mount of Olives, Brahms Song of Destiny, Dvořák Spectre's Bride, St Ludmilla, Gounod Redemption, Weber Jubilee Cantata. His opera trans. incl. Mozart's Così fan tutte and Die Entführung aus dem Serail, Wagner's Der fliegende Holländer, and Gluck's Orfeo, Iphigenia in Tauris, and Iphigenia in Aulis.

'Trout' Quintet. Nickname of pf. quintet in A major by Schubert (D667), so called because 4th of 5 movements is set of variations on his song Die Forelle (The Trout, 1817, D550). Comp. 1819.

Trout, The (Die Forelle). Song for v. and pf. by Schubert comp. 1817 (D550) to words by Schubart. Exists in 4 versions, differing in only minor ways; last version (1821) has 5-measure pf. prelude. Used as theme for variations in andantino (4th) movement of his pf. quintet in A major (1819, D667), which is therefore known as the 'Trout' Quintet.

Trouvères. See Minstrels.

Trovatore, Il (The Troubadour). Opera in 4 acts by Verdi to lib. by Cammarano (with part of 3rd act and all 4th act completed after Cammarano's death by L. E. Bardare). Based on play El trovador by Gutiérrez. Comp. 1851--2. Prod. Rome 1853, NY and London 1855.

Trowell, Brian (Lewis) (b Wokingham, 1931). Eng. musicologist. Studied Cambridge Univ. with Thurston Dart. Lecturer in mus. at Birmingham Univ., 1957--62, and King's Coll., London, 1964--5. Head of radio opera, BBC, 1967--70. Returned to King's Coll. 1970 as reader, becoming prof. 1974. Authority on 15th cent. Eng. mus. and on opera of all periods. Has written important articles on Elgar.

Troyanos, Tatiana (b NY, 1938). Amer. mez. Studied Juilliard Sch., NY, graduating 1963, and with Hans Heinz. Joined NY City Opera (début in Britten's Midsummer Night's Dream, 1963), then NY Met. Went to Ger. to sing with Hamburg Opera, Aix-en-Provence Fest., 1966 (Composer in Strauss's Ariadne). Salzburg Fest. 1969. CG début 1969 (Oktavian), La Scala 1977 (Adalgisa).

Troyens, Les (The Trojans). Opera in 5 acts by Berlioz to his own lib. from Virgil's Aeneid. Comp. 1856--8. To achieve a staging, Berlioz in 1863 divided it into two operas: Acts I and II became La Prise de Troie (The Capture of Troy) in 3 acts; Acts III, IV, and V became Les Troyens à Carthage (The Trojans at Carthage) in 5 acts with prelude not in orig. score, this part being perf. in Paris 4 Nov. 1863. First prod. of whole work but with the 2 parts on successive evenings, Karlsruhe, 6--7 Dec. 1890, cond. F. Mottl, likewise in Glasgow 18--19 March 1935, cond. E. Chisholm. F.p. on one evening, London, CG 1957, cond. Kubelik, (but cut by 20 mins), f.p. complete on one evening, sung in Eng., Glasgow (Scottish Opera) May 1969, cond. Gibson, f.p. complete on one evening, sung in Fr., London CG Sept. 1969, cond. C. Davis.

Trumpet. (1) Metal wind instr. of cylindrical bore, which in last quarter of its length widens into a moderate-sized bell. Cup-shaped mouthpiece. Since mid-19th cent. fitted with 3 valves which admit air to additional lengths of tubing, making available harmonic series at 6 pitches. Either a transposing instr. in Bb (which may be switched to A) with compass from e upwards for nearly 3 octaves, or non-transposing in C (a tone higher). Used in orch. and jazz bands, also in military and brass bands (though sometimes replaced by cornet). Medieval tpts. without slides, valves, or finger-holes, were restricted to 'natural' notes of harmonic series. Straight tpt. of that time was over 6' long, made in jointed metal sections, often with flared bell. Known as buisine. Shorter tpts. were called claro or clarion. In Renaissance, new methods of metalworking greatly improved sound quality, and the brilliant, high-pitched effects required from the baroque tpt. by Monteverdi and others were obtained from the clarino. Mutes in that day were inserted so far into the bell that they raised pitch by whole tone. Members of tpt. family are: bass trumpet: rare, sounding in C an octave lower than normal valved tpt.; piccolo trumpet; pitched octave higher, and sometimes has 4 valves; Bach trumpet: 19th-cent instr., in D, specially made (with valves) to play high tpt. parts in works of Baroque period. Ravel, Stravinsky, and Britten have included it in certain scores, and Maxwell Davies wrote a sonata for it. See also under Crook. (2) Org. reed stop, 8' pitch.

Trumpet Marine (Marine Trumpet). See Tromba marina.

Trumpet Tune or Voluntary. Piece which, while not comp. for a tpt., imitates its sound, as on tpt.-like org. stop. Title Trumpet Voluntary was given by Henry Wood to his transcr. of a kbd. piece for organ, brass, and kettle-drums. This piece was mistakenly attrib. to Purcell, but is now known to be by Jeremiah Clarke.

Tryon, Valerie (Ann) (b Portsmouth, 1934). Eng. pianist. Studied RAM and with Jacques Février in Paris. Début London 1953. Specialist in Liszt.

Tsar's Bride, The (Tsarskaya nevesta). Opera in 3 acts by Rimsky-Korsakov to lib. adapted from L. A. Mey's play (1849) with extra scene by I. F. Tumenev. Comp. 1898. Prod. Moscow 1899, Seattle 1922, London 1931.

Tschaikowsky (Ger.). See Tchaikovsky, Pyotr.

Tschudi. See Shudi, Burkhat.

Tuba. (1) Type of bass brass instr. played in vertical position in contrast to horizontal position of tpt., tb., etc. Term covers several kinds of brass-band instr., e.g. euphonium, but term tuba usually means the standard orch. bass tuba in F (invented 1835) with compass from f an octave below bass clef upwards for about 3 octaves. Vaughan Williams comp. a conc. for bass tuba, 1954. There is a French 6-valve tuba which can cover four octaves and play Wagner contrabass parts. The contrabass tuba has become standard in orchestras since the 1940s, where it is known as the 'double C' (CC) tuba. This is a whole tone higher than the 'double Bb' (BBb), with either 3 or 4 valves, which is generally used in bands. Most of tuba family are of semi-conical bore, with from 3 to 5 valves, and cup mouthpiece. The tenor tuba is rare, but is required by Strauss in Don Quixote, and in Brit. is identical with euphonium. Brass and military band tubas, sometimes called 'basses' are in Eb (same as double-bass tuba). See also sousaphone and Wagner tuba. (2) Sonorous organ stop, like trumpet, 8', 16', or 4' pitch.

Tuba mirum (Hark, the trumpet). Part of the Requiem Mass, being a section of the Dies Irae. Verdi's setting is especially fine.

Tubb, Carrie (Caroline Elizabeth) (b London, 1876; d London, 1976). Eng. sop. Studied GSM. Principally known for work in oratorio, etc., but sang in opera (Elektra, Hänsel und Gretel etc.) at CG 1910 and later in Beecham co. Taught at GSM for over 30 years from 1930.

Tubin, Eduard (b Kallaste, 1905; d Stockholm, 1982). Estonian composer and conductor. Studied comp. at Tartu Acad., 1924--30. Cond. Vanemuine Th. Orch., Tartu, 1930--44. Keen interpreter of Stravinsky, Bartók, and Kodály. Settled in Swed. 1944. His mus. is strongly melodic and attractively scored. Comps. incl.:

orch: Syms., No. 1 (1934), No. 2 (1937), No. 3 (1942), No. 4 (1943), No. 5 (1946), No. 6 (1954), No. 7 (1958), No. 8 ([sm1966]), No. 9 (1970), No. 10 (1973); Vn. Conc. No. 1 (1941), No. 2 (1945); Db. Conc. (1948); Conc. for chamber orch. (1963).

Tubular Bells. Orch. instr. in form of suspended tubes, tuned to the diatonic scale, struck by hammer held by player. Set of tubular bells sometimes spans an octave. Vaughan Williams wrote for them in finale of his 8th Sym., 1953--5.

Tucker, Norman (b Wembley, 1910; d Ruislip, 1978). Eng. pianist, opera administrator, and translator. Studied Oxford Univ. and RCM (pf. with H. Samuel and theory with R. O. Morris). Promising career as Mozart pianist cut short by manual disability. Co-dir., SW Th., 1947--54, dir. 1954--66. Under his aegis Janáček operas were brought into the Eng. repertory and (at that time) rare Verdi operas such as Simon Boccanegra, Don Carlos, and Luisa Miller. Nurtured Eng. singers such as Peter Glossop and Amy Shuard and cond. Colin Davis, Charles Mackerras, and Alexander Gibson. Trans. Simon Boccanegra and Luisa Miller, Janáček's Ká;akta Kabanová, Excursions of Mr Brouček, Einem's Visit of the Old Lady, and other works. C.B.E. 1956.

Tucker, Richard (orig. Reuben Ticker) (b Brooklyn, NY, 1913; d Kalamazoo, 1975). Amer. ten. Sang in synagogues as cantor, then studied NY with P. Althouse. Opera début NY Met. 1945, becoming prin. ten. there in It. and Fr. operas. CG début 1958 as Cavaradossi in Tosca. Sang opposite Callas at Verona in her It. début, 1947. Sang in Toscanini concert-opera perfs. Tucket. Old Eng. term for fanfare or flourish.

Tuckwell, Barry (Emmanuel) (b Melbourne, 1931). Australian hn.-player. Hn.-player in Sydney S.O. 1947--50. Settled in Brit. 1951. Hallé 1951--3, SNO 1953--4, Bournemouth S.O. 1954--5, LSO 1955--68. Prof. of hn., RAM 1963--74. Formed Tuckwell Wind Quintet. Soloist in concs. and chamber works. O.B.E. 1965.

Tudor, Antony (orig. William Cook) (b London, 1908). Eng. choreog., dancer, and teacher. Studied with Rambert 1928, then with others. Joined Ballet Rambert 1930. Founded Dance Th. with A. de Mille 1937. Formed London Ballet 1938. Worked in NY 1940--50 as dancer and choreog. Royal Swed. Ballet 1949--50, NY City Ballet 1951--2. Dir. NY Met. Opera Ballet Sch. 1950. Joined teaching staff, Juilliard Sch. Dir., Royal Swed. Ballet 1963--4. Ass. dir., Amer. Ballet Th. 1974. One of foremost and most perceptive 20th-cent. choreogs. Ballets (composers in parentheses) incl. Dark Elegies (Mahler) 1937, Judgement of Paris (Weill) 1938, Gala Performance (Prokofiev) 1938, Romeo and Juliet (Delius) 1943, Lady of the Camellias (Verdi) 1951, Shadowplay (Koechlin) 1967, Knight Errant (R. Strauss) 1968.

Tudor Church Music. Name of famous critical edn. of mus. by Eng. composers of 16th and 17th cents. pubd. in 10 vols., 1929, with appendix 1948, under editorship of Percy Buck, E. H. Fellowes, Sylvia Townsend Warner, and A. Ramsbotham. Vols. contain: 1. Taverner Masses. 2. Byrd Services, etc. 3. Taverner motets. 4. Gibbons services and anthems. 5. Whyte. 6. Tallis. 7. Byrd Graduals. 8. Tompkins services, etc. 9. Byrd masses, etc. 10. Merbecke, Aston, and Parsley.

Tudor, David (b Philadelphia, 1926). Amer. pianist, organist, and composer. Studied in Philadelphia and NY (with S. Wolpe). Organist, St Mark's, Philadelphia 1938--43, Swarthmore Coll. 1944--8. Taught pf. in NY 1948. Musician with Merce Cunningham Dance Co. from 1953. Began assoc. with Feldman and Cage 1948--9. Member 1951--3 of Cage's elec. studio project. Helped Cage in 1960s to pioneer 'live' elec. mus., as distinct from pre-recorded. Took part as pianist in f.p. of several Cage works, incl. Music of Changes, pf. conc., and Atlas Eclipticalis with Winter Music. Gave f.p. of Bussotti's 5 Piano Pieces for David Tudor and f. Amer. p. of Boulez's 2nd pf. sonata. Also plays bandoneon, performing works written for it by Kagel. Expertise in elec. works has pioneered many techniques for composers. His own works use visual forces, e.g. light systems, laser projections, dance TV, etc. They incl.: Fluorescent Sound, Rain Forest, Assemblage, Video/Laser I, II, and III, 4 Pepsi Pieces, and many 'collaborative realizations' of mus. by Cage, Oliveros, etc.

Tudway, Thomas (b c.1650; d Cambridge, 1726). Eng. composer and organist. Chorister, Chapel Royal, under Blow, 1660. Org., King's Coll., Cambridge, 1670--1726. Prof. of mus., Cambridge Univ., from 1705 (he was suspended from his university posts from July 1706 to March 1707 for making uncomplimentary puns about Queen Anne). Wrote church mus. and compiled (1714--20) 6 MS. vols. of Eng. church mus. from Reformation to Restoration.

Tunder, Franz (b Bannesdorf, 1614; d Lübeck, 1667). Ger. organist and composer. Organist, Marienkirche, Lübeck, from 1641. Founded Lübeck Abendmusiken (Musical Evenings) of church mus. played by str. and brass. Succeeded by son-in-law Buxtehude. Wrote org. works, church cantatas, etc.

Tune. (1) As noun. Melody. (2) Upper part of any simple comp. (3) As verb. To est. correct intonation of an instr., e.g. to tune a pf. so that it is 'in tune'.

Tuning. Adjustment of pitch in any instr. so that it corresponds to accepted norm. Str. players tune their instrs. just before playing by simple adjustments to the str., but kbd. instr. need lengthy professional attention.

Tuning-Fork. 2-pronged metal instr., invented 1711 by the trumpeter John Shore (b c. 1662; d London, 1752; noted for his playing of Purcell and Handel). When set in vibration, it produces a sound wherewith to check the pitch of instr. and to give the pitch to singers. Gives a 'pure' tone, without upper harmonics.

Tuominen, Harri Olavi (b Kuusankoski, 1944). Finnish composer and cond. Studied in Helsinki, Prague, and Budapest. Comp. chiefly choral works.

Twelfth. Org. stop of the Mutation kind. Length and pitch 2; FN' sounding an octave and a 5th (i.e. a 12th) above normal.

Twelve-Note Composition (Ger. Zwölftonmusik). System of comp. in which all 12 notes within octave (7 white and 5 black notes of pf.) are treated as 'equal', in an ordered relationship where no group of notes predominates as in major/minor key system. One of first, if not the first, to devise such a system was J. M. Hauer, but it is generally assoc. with Schoenberg, whose 'method of composing with 12 notes which are related only to one another' was developed gradually 1920--25 and first used by him partially in his Op. 23 and Op. 24 (the 5 Piano Pieces and Serenade) and throughout his Op. 25 (the Suite for pf.). In the Schoenberg method, all pitches are related to a fixed order of the 12 chromatic notes, this order providing the work's basic shape. The fixed order is called a note-row (or series or set). No note is repeated within a row, which therefore comprises 12 different notes and no other. The note-row is not a theme but a source from which the comp. is made. It can be transposed to begin on any of the 12 pitches, and it may appear in retrograde, inversion, and retrograde-inversion. Since each of these transformations may also be transposed, each note-row can have 48 related pitch successions. Schoenberg's foremost contemporary disciples were Berg and Webern, but it should be noted that their application of his theory differs considerably from his own, particularly in the case of Webern, who explored the possibility of 'cellular' comp., i.e. self-contained structures within the note-row. From his type of serialism, later composers progressed to total serialism. ^Certain composers, e.g. Dallapiccola, Frank Martin, and Stravinsky, have used 12-note technique but have retained not only their marked individuality of style but a relationship in their work to the major/minor system of tonality. Other composers who do not subscribe to Schoenbergian tenets have used all 12 notes without repeating any one note. Examples of this are to be found in Walton, Britten, Hindemith, and Shostakovich. Argument will no doubt continue about which composer was the first to use 12-note technique. Medieval candidates may be found, and Skryabin's 'mystic chord' is a pointer. Hauer's system pre-dated Schoenberg's; and the Ger. critic Herbert Eimert has written that Jef Golyscheff comp. 'the first unequivocal 12-note music' in 1914. Twilight of the Gods (Wagner). See Götterdämmerung.

Two Widows, The (Dve^; vdovy). Comic opera in 2 acts by Smetana to lib. by Emanuel Züngel adapted from Les Deux Veuves by Félicien Mallefille. Comp. 1873--4, rev. 1879 and 1882, prod. Prague 1874, Wexford 1978.

Tye, Christopher (b c.1505; d Doddington-cum-Marche, 1573). Eng. composer. Lay clerk at King's College, Cambridge, 1537, having taken Mus.B. in 1536 after 10 years' study and teaching. Unessential Note. A passing note, suspension, appoggiatura, etc., whereas an essential note is an actual note of a chord.

'Unfinished' Symphony. There are many unfinished syms. (e.g. by Tchaikovsky, Mahler, Elgar, Shostakovich) but this title is generally taken to refer only to Schubert's No. 8 in B minor (1822, D759). His 7th in E was also left incomplete. No one knows why the 8th was left unfinished---2 movements were completed and sketches exist for the scherzo. Romantic solutions have been invented, but the truth seems to be that Schubert either forgot about it or abandoned it because he could not find comparable inspiration for the 3rd and 4th movements. F.p. Vienna, Dec. 1865, cond. Herbeck. Among 'completions' of the sym. are those by G. Abraham (1971) and B. Newbould.

Ungar, Ungarisch (Ger.). Hungarian.

Unger, Caroline (b Vienna, 1803; d Florence, 1877). Austrian cont. Studied in Milan and Vienna (with Vogl and Aloisia Weber). Opera début Vienna 1821 as Dorabella in Così fan tutte. In 1824 in Vienna sang in f.p. of Beethoven's 9th Sym. (it was she who turned the deaf Beethoven to face the audience after the 9th so that he could see applause). Sang for several years in It., creating roles in Donizetti operas and Bellini's La straniera. Paris début 1833, winning high praise from Rossini. Retired on marriage 1843.

Unger, Georg (b Leipzig, 1837; d Leipzig, 1887). Ger. ten. The first Wagner Heldentenor. Created role of Siegfried at first Bayreuth Fest. 1876. Sang in London 1877 at Wagner's concerts in Royal Albert Hall, although he frequently failed to appear. Sang at Leipzig Opera until 1881.

Unger, Gerhard (b Bad Salzungen, Thuringia, 1916). Ger. tenor. Studied at Eisenach. Opera début Weimar 1947. Berlin Deutsche Staatsoper 1952--61, Stuttgart from 1961. Lifar 1938, Ashton 1947, MacMillan 1966, Hynd 1975).

Valse Triste (Sad Waltz). Waltz by Sibelius, Op. 44, orig. comp. for str. 1903 as one of 6 items of incidental mus. to play Kuolema (Death) by Arvid Järnefelt, in Helsinki. Rev. for orch. 1904. Also arr. for pf.

Valve (Fr. piston; Ger. Ventil; It. pistone). Mechanism invented c.1813 by the horn-player Heinrich Stölzel and improved in 1818 in collaboration with Friedrich Blühmel, whereby all the notes of the chromatic scale were made available to brass instr. Pitch altered by increasing or decreasing length of tube through which wind must go to produce sound (except normal trombones, for which slide is sufficient). 2 types in use, piston, inwhich piston works up and down in casing, and rotary, a 4-way stop-cock turning in cylindrical case and governed by a spring. Credit for the first type of valve must go to Charles Claggett, an Irishman, who patented an invention in 1788 which enabled pitch to be altered by means of a lever.

Valve Instruments. Brass instrs. which have valves, i.e. all except certain trombones.

Valverde, Joaquin (b Badajoz, 1846; d Madrid, 1910). Sp. composer, cond., and flautist. Played fl. in th. orchs. 1859--71, then cond. 1871--91. Wrote zarzuelas and songs incl. the popular Clavelitos (Carnations).

Vamping. Improvised acc. to a song or instr. solo, often by pianist who cannot read notation but 'plays by ear'.

Vampyr, Der (The Vampire). Opera in 2 acts by Marschner to lib. by Wohlbrück. Comp. 1827. Prod. Leipzig 1828, London 1829.

Variant. (1) Name for differing versions of same piece of mus. (2) Sudden changes from major to minor. (3) Differing versions of folk-songs, the tune often slightly altering from region to region.

Variation. Piece of mus. which is a varied version of a well-known tune or of an orig. theme specially comp. as basis for variations. Some variations follow the orig. tune closely, others make the briefest reference to it, sometimes harmonically rather than thematically. Popular form with composers from 16th cent., 'divisions on a ground' being the same as 'variations on a theme'. In some comps., one movement takes the form of a theme with variations, e.g. the finale of Beethoven's Eroica sym., and movements of several Haydn syms. Among famous sets of variations are Beethoven's on a waltz by Diabelli, Brahms's on a theme by Haydn, Schumann's Études symphoniques, Strauss's Don Quixote, Elgar's Enigma, Rakhmaninov's Rhapsody on a theme of Paganini, and Britten's Variations on a Theme of Frank Bridge.

Variations. 6 works comp. between 1958 and 1966 in which Cage took indeterminacy to remarkable limits. Some of them consist of transparent plastic sheets inscribed with lines and circles, and instructions explaining how these can be 'performed' by any number of players using any means. In Var. V the performer is merely supplied with a description of previous perfs., involving actions as well as sounds.

Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Purcell (Britten). See Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra.

Variations on 'America' (Variations on a National Hymn, 'America'). Orig. work for organ by Ives comp. 1891 or 1892. Arr. for orch. by William Schuman 1964 and for concert band by Schuman and W. Rhoads.

Variations on a Theme by Haydn. Orch. comp., 1873, by Brahms, Op. 56a, or in version for 2 pf., Op. 56b. Often called the 'St Anthony' Variations, because the theme is called the 'St Anthony Chorale'. Brahms took the theme from a suite in Bb for military band (Feld-partita) by Haydn but research has shown that the theme was borrowed by Haydn. However, since Brahms named the work 'Variations on a Theme by Haydn' there seems no good reason to discard this title for a musicological nicety.

Variations on a Theme of Frank Bridge. Work for str. orch. Op. 10, by Britten comp. 1937 for Salzburg Fest. Theme is taken from Bridge's Idyll No. 2 for str. qt. Arr. for 2 pfs., 1942, by Colin McPhee for ballet Jinx.

Varnay, Astrid (b Stockholm, 1918). Swed.-born sop. of Austro-Hungarian parentage, resident in USA since childhood. Studied with her mother and H. Weigert. Vaudeville (Fr., either from vaux de vire or voix de ville). (1) In late 16th cent., song with amorous words as sung in the valleys (vaux) near Vire or catches sung in the streets of towns. (2) In 18th cent., the term came to mean a song with different verses sung in turn by different singers, and this meaning was incorporated into operatic terminology, e.g. a 'vaudeville finale', as in Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail. ^ (3) In 19th cent., meant short comedies interspersed with popular songs, as in Fr. revues. (4) In late 19th and 20th cents., a synonym for a variety show or mus.-hall, particularly in USA.

Vaughan, Denis (b Melbourne, Victoria, 1926). Australian cond., organist, and musicologist. Studied Melbourne Univ. and at RCM (org. with Thalben-Ball, db. with E. Cruft). CG début 1961, where she has sung Mimi, Tosca, Liù, Tytania, and Violetta. NY Met. début 1972 (Donna Elvira). A particularly fine Butterfly.

Vaughan Williams, Ralph (b Down Ampney, Glos., 1872; d London, 1958). Eng. composer, cond., and organist. Studied at Cambridge Univ. and RCM, teachers incl. Parry, Charles Wood, Alan Gray, and Stanford; later in Ger. with Bruch and in Paris 1908 with Ravel. Organist, St Barnabas, S. Lambeth, 1897. Began collecting Eng. folk-songs 1902. Mus. ed., English Hymnal, 1906. Cond. Leith Hill (Dorking) Fest., 1905--53. Prof. of comp. RCM 1919--39. Cond., Bach Choir, London, 1920--7. O.M. 1935. One of leaders, with Holst and others, of 20th-cent. revival of Eng. mus. in wake of Elgar. Early works mainly songs, such as the famous Linden Lea and Silent Noon, and chamber mus. Deeply influenced by revival of interest in Eng. 16th-cent. composers and by his own folk-song collecting. Studied for 3 months with Ravel when 36 and thereafter produced series of major works, incl. Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for str., On Wenlock Edge, song-cycle on Housman's 'Shropshire Lad' poems, and A London Symphony (1913). Served in 1914--18 war although over military age and after war was active in every phase of Eng. mus. life as cond. of amateur choral fests., teacher, writer, and of course composer. Lived at Dorking, Surrey, 1929--53, then returned to London. Gave constant encouragement to young musicians; had strong prejudices, about which he wrote entertainingly in various essays. Vaughan Williams's mus. is strongly individual, with the modal harmonies characteristic of folk-song composers, yet owing something to Fr. influence of Ravel and Debussy. He wrote works in almost every genre, from operas and syms. to choral works for amateurs as well as for highly professional choirs, concs. for neglected instrs. such as harmonica and tuba, a suite for pipes, etc. He believed that a composer should 'make his art an expression of the whole life of the community', but he was paradoxically a very personal composer rather than a state laureate. His operas have not so far held the stage, except for Riders to the Sea, but all are spasmodically revived, for they contain fine mus. His 9 syms. range from the choral Sea Symphony (Whitman text) and the picturesque London to the programmatic Antartica and the sternly 'absolute' Nos. 4, 5, 6, and 9. A wide range of orch. colour is deployed in these works and in his large-scale choral works such as Sancta Civitas. The basis of his work is melody, rhythm sometimes being unsubtle, but its visionary quality, as in the masque Job and the 5th and 9th syms., its broad humanity, and its appeal at several levels make it a remarkable expression of the nat. spirit in mus. just as the man himself personified all that was best in the liberal 19th-cent. tradition of which he was a scion. Prin. works:

operas: Hugh the Drover (1910--14, rev. 1924 and 1956); The Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains (1921--22); Sir John in Love (1924--8); Riders to the Sea (1925--32); The Poisoned Kiss (1927--9, rev. 1934--7, 1956--7); The Pilgrim's Progress (1925--36, 1944--51).

Venice. Italian city, capital of region of Veneto. Its importance as a musical centre dates from 1527 when the Netherlands composer Willaert was appointed choirmaster of S. Marco Cath. Through his influence, Venice became centre of madrigal composition in private houses and academies. Under Zarlino, choirmaster from 1564, an instr. ens. was formed (1568) which, augmented, performed at large fests. Use of choral and instr. forces by dividing them into groups placed in different galleries of the cath. (cori spezzati) led to the dominating splendour of Venetian church mus. 1575--1610, notably under G. Gabrieli and A. Gabrieli. In 1612 Monte-verdi was appointed choirmaster and remained for 30 years. He revivified the city's musical life, introducing younger composers, e.g. Cavalli and Grandi. The plague of 1630 ended the dominance of S. Marco in Venetian music-making and the balance was tipped towards operas, of which Monteverdi provided several masterly examples and was followed by Cavalli. Refusal of the authorities after 1642 to raise the salary of the choirmaster led to a decline in standard, halted only by Legrenzi, who achieved an increase in the size of the choir and orch. (to 36 and 34 respectively). After 1700 Venetian musicians made their living in the ospedali, charitable institutions for the sick and orphaned where mus. was taught and perf. in the chapels. From this milieu arose the next great sch. of Venetian composers, Vivaldi, Porpora, Sarti, Galuppi, Jommelli, and Albinoni. Visitors to Venice included Gasparini, A. Scarlatti, and Handel. Galuppi excelled in opera buffa and collab. with the playwright Goldoni from 1749. Opera thrived again after the opening of the Teatro La Fenice in 1792 with a work by Paisiello. No Venetian sch. now existed, but f.ps. were given at La Fenice of operas by Cimarosa, Rossini (Tancredi, 1813), Meyerbeer (Il Crociato in Egitto, 1824), Bellini (I Capuleti e i Montecchi, 1830), and Donizetti (Maria di Rudenz, 1838). Several Verdi operas were commissioned for La Fenice, notably La Traviata, 1853. In the 20th cent. La Fenice has been the birthplace of Dallapiccola's Marsia (1948), Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress (1951), Britten's The Turn of the Screw (1954), Prokofiev's The Fiery Angel (1955), Nono's Intolleranza (1960), and Bussotti's Lorenzaccio (1973). It has also staged the Venetian Malipiero's operas. These operas were given at the annual fest. of contemporary mus. held between 1948 and 1973. Stravinsky also comp. several choral and instr. works for Venice 1956--60 and was buried there near Diaghilev. The fascination of Venice for composers is epitomized by Britten's opera Death in Venice (1973) and it was in Venice that the dying composer wrote some of his 3rd str. qt. (1975). And not the least of Venice's claims to musical fame is that Richard Wagner died there on 13 Feb., 1883.

Veni Creator Spiritus (Come Holy Ghost). Whitsuntide hymn generally attrib. Hrabanus Maurus, 9th-cent. Archbishop of Mainz, and sung liturgically to harmonized adaptation of plainsong melody. Set by several composers. Mahler's setting for soloists, ch., and orch. forms Part I of his 8th Sym. (1906--7). Veni Sancte Spiritus (Come Holy Spirit). Sequence of R. C. liturgy for Whitsunday sung to traditional plainsong. Text ascribed to Pope Innocent III and Stephen Langton. Settings include those by Dufay, Després, Willaert, Palestrina, and Victoria.

Venite (Come). Ps. 95 (Ps. 94 in Vulgate) chanted as canticle at Anglican matins to words 'O come, let us sing unto the Lord'. Settings by several composers, incl. Mendelssohn.

Survived after introduction of conscription in 1849 as cere- monial dance with two or more sections, similar to those of csardás. Used by Liszt in his Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, and by Bartók and Kodály.

Verdelot, Philippe (b Verdelot, Orange, ?1470--80; d before 1552). Fr. composer. Spent most of his life in It. Choirmaster in Florence from 1522, part of time at cath. Visited Rome 1523. Wrote much church mus. but best known for madrigals, composed before first madrigal publications c. 1530.

Verdi, Giuseppe (Fortunino Francesco) (b Le Roncole, nr. Busseto, Parma, 1813; d Milan, 1901). It. composer. Son of innkeeper. Taught by local organist. Local grocer, who liked mus., recognized his mus. ability and offered to pay for him to go to Milan Cons., but authorities would not admit him, partly because of poor pf.-playing. Studied in Milan privately for 2 years. Returned to Busseto, where he continued studies, directed town's mus. activities, and married grocer's daughter. Completed opera Rocester (now lost) in 1836, but Oberto was prod. at LaScala, Milan, in 1839 with some success, followed by comic opera, Un giorno di regno (1840), a failure. Between 1838 and 1840, Verdi's wife and 2 children died. Prostrate with grief, vowed to abandon comp., but was persuaded to compose Nabucco (1841); its triumphant success made him most prominent of young It. composers. Thereafter wrote series of operas, some more successful than others at their premières, but each eagerly sought by impresarios. In 1847 he comp. I masnadieri for Her Majesty's, London, with Jenny Lind and Lablache heading the cast. In 1849 he bought a farming estate at Sant' Agata, near Busseto, to which he returned whenever possible. In the sensitive political climate of 19th-cent. It., Verdi's libs. (e.g. for Rigoletto, Un ballo in maschera, etc.) frequently caused trouble with the censors, especially when they dealt with historical events which could be interpreted as referring to contemporary political events, Verdi's sympathies for It. independence from Austria being well known. In 1860, after the It. war of independence, he was elected a Deputy in first It. nat. parliament, resigning 5 years later. His next 3 operas were written for perf. outside It., La forza del destino for St Petersburg, 1862, Don Carlos for Paris, 1867, and Aida for Cairo, 1871. 16 years were to pass before the next opera, but in 1874 the great Requiem, comp. in memory of the poet Manzoni, was perf. in Milan. It was an immediate success. Verdi cond. 15 perfs. of it in Paris in 1874 and 1875, 4 in Vienna, and 3 in London. In 1879, his publisher Ricordi suggested Shakespeare's Othello as an operatic subject, and Boito, with whom Verdi's relations had hitherto been cool, submitted a draft lib. The work (Otello) was f.p. in Milan in 1887 and was acclaimed as the supreme achievement not only of its composer but of It. opera. In 1889 Boito suggested a further collaboration, on Falstaff. Its prod. at Milan in 1893, though a personal triumph, was not such a success as that of Otello and it has taken until recent times for this masterpiece of comic opera to become a popular favourite. In 1859 Verdi had married the sop. Giuseppina Strepponi, with whom he had lived for a decade before that. Her death in 1897 marked the end of Verdi's composing career. He died at Sant' Agata, leaving most of his money to a home for elderly musicians which he had founded in Milan. Verdi's stature as one of the 2 or 3 greatest opera composers is unchallengeable. Though his technical mastery continually developed and was refined, and his powers of characterization became more subtle and expressive, the essential Verdi---direct, noble, and intense---remained unchanging from Nabucco to Falstaff. There was no 'change of style' in Otello: the lib. drew from Verdi his greatest mus., but it is still recognizably the work of the composer of Il trovatore and Simon Boccanegra. In recent years the earlier works have been revived and have revealed their considerable merits---the comic Un giorno di regno, for example, is particularly fine. In operas like Rigoletto, La traviata, and Aida, Verdi put on to the stage operatic characters who are as real as the characters in Shakespeare. His 3 Shakespeare operas are major achievements and his failure to compose King Lear, though he toyed with the idea for many years, must ever be regretted. Prin. works:

Verhallend (Ger.). Dying away.

Verismo (It.). Realism. Term applied to 'realistic' sch. of It. opera in which (following Zola in literature) subjects treated were usually contemporary and often sordid or down-to-earth, e.g. Mascagni's Cavalleria rusticana, Giordano's Fedora, Puccini's Il tabarro, etc. But, like all such terms, it is imprecise and has acquired a slight pejorative tinge. Also, some verismo operas are not truly verismo, and where does one draw the line---is Verdi's La traviata not verismo? But the opera-lover understands the Mascagni type of workby this term.

A few were given under Karl Eckert between 1854 and 1857, but a regular season of 8 concerts did not occur until 1860. Orch. soon recognized as one of world's greatest, a reputation it has maintained. Among prin.conds. after Nicolai were Desso (1860--75), Richter (1875--98), Mahler (1898--1901), Hellmesberger (1901--3), Weingartner (1907--27), Furtwängler (1927--8), Krauss (1929--33), Furtwängler and Walter (1933--8), Furtwängler (1938--54), Karajan (1956), Abbado (from 1971). Orch. is self-governing and plays for Vienna State Opera. Many other cond.s., notably Karl Böhm, have been assoc. with it and have made recordings with it. Richard Strauss wrote to the orchestra in 1942: 'Only he who has conducted the Vienna Philharmonic players knows what they are! But that will remain our very own secret!'

Vienna State Opera (Ger. Wiener Staatsoper). Prin. Austrian opera house and co., one of leading opera organizations of world. Orig. Vienna Court Opera (Wiener Hofoper). The first opera was perf. in Vienna in 1633 (Bartolaia's Il Sidonio). Opera then became est. as regular court entertainment and special th. built. Theater bei der Hofburg was opened 1748. Gluck was court Kapellmeister 1754--70, 10 of his operas being written for Vienna. Towards end of 18th cent., Burgtheater lost ground to Theater am Kärntnerthor (built 1708), where Salieri became cond. Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail (1782), Le Nozze di Figaro (1786), and Così fan tutte (1790) all had f.ps. at Burgtheater, while Don Giovanni had its first Vienna perf. there (with additions) in 1788. In 1842 Donizetti was both court composer and cond. Court opera's first permanent cond. was Karl Eckert (1854--60) who introduced Wagner's operas to the city. New theatre, Die Oper am Ring, opened 1869. Richter became cond. in 1875 and shared directorship with Jahn from 1880 to 1896, the co. in this period having singers of the quality of Materna, Reichmann, Winkelmann and van Dyck. In 1897 Mahler became dir. and initiated the most glorious decade in the history of the th., with a great singing--acting co. incl. Gutheil-Schoder, Mildenburg, Selma Kurz, Schmedes, Mayr, and Slezak, and Roller as designer. Mahler was succeeded by Weingartner 1907--11 and Hans Gregor 1911--18. In 1918 Court Opera became State Opera, with Schalk and R. Strauss as joint dirs. 1919--24, Schalk continuing alone until 1929. The singers now included Lotte Lehmann, Elisabeth Schumann, Jerger, Piccaver, and Jeritza, who were joined in the 1930s by Tauber, Kern, Ursuleac, Kiepura, Schorr, Olszewska, Dermota, etc. Krauss was cond. 1929--34, Weingartner 1934--6, Walter 1936--8. After an interregnum, Karl Böhm became dir. in 1943 until the th. was bombed in March 1945. For 10 years, with Böhm, Josef Krips, and Krauss as cond. the State Opera played in the Theater an der Wien and the Volksoper, and visited London in 1948. Böhm again became dir. 1955 and the rebuilt th. (capacity 2,200) opened in 1955 with Fidelio. Böhm resigned 1956, being succeeded by Karajan 1956--64. The post-war vocal galaxy incl. Gueden, Schwarzkopf, Reining, Seefried, Welitsch, Hotter, Patzak, Schöffler, and Weber. In the 1970s Bernstein, Böhm, Karajan, and Mehta cond. famous perfs. In 1982 Lorin Maazel, an American, was appointed dir., with a contract until 1986, but he left in 1984 after a controversial period of musical politics which his predecessors Mahler and Strauss would have recognized as characteristically Viennese. It may be fairly said that the history of the Vienna Opera is one of spectacular triumphs, petty politics, a fairly conservative policy towards new mus., and glorious singing.

Vienna Symphony Orchestra (Ger. Wiener Symphoniker). Orch. founded in 1900 as Wiener Konzertverein Orchester. In 1921 it merged with Verein Wiener Tonkünstler (formed 1907 under Oskar Nedbal) and became Wiener Sinfonie-Orchester. It assumed present name in 1933, with over 120 players. Administered by Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, Wiener Konzerthausgesellschaft, Bregenz Fest., and Austrian Radio. First cond. was Ferdinand Löwe, 1900--24. In 1934 became Vienna's main broadcasting orch. and in 1938 was taken over by city as its municipal orch. Has had series of famous guest cond. and has made many recordings.

Vie parisienne, La (Parisian Life). Opéra-bouffe in 4 acts by Offenbach to lib. by Meilhac and Halévy. Prod. Paris 1866; NY 1869. See Gaîté parisienne.

Vier ernste Gesänge (Four Serious Songs). Song-cycle for low v. and pf., Op. 121, by Brahms, comp. 1896 to biblical texts. 1. Denn es geht dem Menschen; 2. Ich wandte mich und sahe an alle; 3. O Tod, O Tod, wie bitter bist du; 4. Wenn ich mit Engelszungen redete. Inspired by his emotion over Clara Schumann's final illness. Orch. version by Malcolm Sargent.

Vier letzte Lieder (Four Last Songs). Songs for high v. and orch. by R. Strauss, his last works, comp. 1948. 5th song left unfinished. In order of comp.: 1. Im Abendrot (In the Sunset) (Eichendorff), 2. Frühling (Spring), 3. Beim schlafengehen (Falling asleep), 4. September. (Poems of 2, 3, and 4 by Hesse). Title of cycle given by publisher after Strauss's death. Strauss favoured order 3, 4, 2, 1. F.p. London 1950, Flagstad and Philharmonia Orch., cond. Furtwängler.

Vierne, Louis (Victor Jules) (b Poitiers, 1870; d Paris, 1937). Fr. organist and composer, born blind. Studied Paris Cons. with Franck and Widor. Organist, Nôtre Dame de Paris 1900--37. Prof. of org., Schola Cantorum, Paris, from 1912. Toured Europe and USA as org. recitalist. Wrote 6 org. syms. and shorter pieces for org., also mass, str. qt., vc. sonata, and an orch. sym. Vierundsechzigstel(note) (Ger.). 64th note (the hemidemisemiquaver).

Vieuxtemps, Henri (Joseph Fran;alcois) (b Verviers, 1820; d Mustapha-lez-Alger, Algeria, 1881). Belg. violinist and composer. Played conc. with orch. at age of 6. Became pupil of de Bériot in Paris from 1828. Toured Ger. 1833 and studied counterpoint with Sechter in Vienna. Revived interest (1834) in Beethoven's vn. conc. Studied comp. with Reicha in Paris, 1835. Visited Russia 1838, USA 1844. Courtviolinist and prof. of vn., St Petersburg 1846--52. Prof. of vn., Brussels Cons. 1871--3. Regarded as one of greatest violinists of his day. Wrote 7 vn. concs., vn. sonata, 3 str. qts., many vn. pieces, and cadenzas for Beethoven conc. Had 2 brothers, one a pianist, the other---Jules Joseph Ernest Vieuxtemps (b Brussels, 1832; d Belfast, 1896)---a cellist who played in CG orch. and became prin. vc., Hallé Orch.

Vignoles, Roger (Hutton) (b Cheltenham, 1945). Eng. pianist. Studied Cambridge Univ. 1962--6. Début London 1967. Répétiteur CG 1969--71. Accompanist to Rita Streich, Gwyneth Jones, John Shirley-Quirk, etc.

Vihuela. Sp. Renaissance instr. of guitar type. Word was used generically for all str. instrs., so further identification was necessary, e.g. vihuela de arco, bowed vihuela, vihuela de penole, plectrum-plucked vihuela, vihuela de mano, finger-plucked vihuela. Main period of popularity 1530--80. Luis de Milán's book on the vihuela de mano (1536) is a teaching manual containing first solo songs printed in Sp. Larger than guitar, usually with 6 courses, and up to 10 frets. Superseded by guitar c.1700. Mus. notated in tablature.

Village Romeo and Juliet, A (Romeo und Julia auf dem Dorfe). Opera in 6 tableaux by Delius to Ger. lib. by composer based on short story Romeo und Julia auf dem Dorfe from coll. of Novellen entitled Die Leute von Seldwyla (1856) by Gottfried Keller (1819--90). Comp. 1900--1. Prod. Berlin 1907, cond. Cassirer, London CG 1910, cond. Beecham. The intermezzo between scenes 5 and 6 was rewritten and extended in 1906 to cover the scene-change and became known in the concert-hall as the 'Walk to the Paradise Garden'. Suite for orch. arr. Fenby (1948).

Villa-Lobos, Heitor (b Rio de Janeiro, 1887; d Rio de Janeiro, 1959). Brazilian composer. First mus. lessons from father, who taught him vc. Had harmony lessons 1907, otherwise self-taught, earning living by playing in cafés etc. Played vc. in Rio opera and sym. orchs., absorbing influences from Russ. nationalists, Stravinsky, and Strauss, under whose baton he played in 1920. Befriended by Milhaud when latter was Claudel's secretary at Fr. embassy, and by Arthur Rubinstein, 1921, who played his pf. mus. Spent 1923--4 in Europe and 1927--30 in Paris where he was influenced by Satie and Milhaud and by fashionable neoclassicism. Result was series of works called Bachianas Brasileiras in which Baroque forms were re-created with Brazilian 'local colour'. Returning to Brazil 1930, held series of official teaching posts. Founded Conservatório Nacional de Canto Orfeônico 1942 and Brazilian Acad. of Mus., 1945. Visited USA 1944 as cond. of own mus. Extremely prolific composer, with expected sharp variations in quality. Though his mus. suggests the folk idiom, he rarely, if ever, quoted a folk-song, relying instead on colour and rhythm to give Brazilian flavour. Melodist and romantic, he used the popular chôro form as a basis for series of works for various combinations of instr. and vv. with specific nationalist intent. Prin. works incl.:

operas: Izath (1912--14); Yerma (1955--6). CHÔROS: No. 1, guitar (1920), 2, fl., cl. (1924), 3, 7 winds, male ch. (1925), 4, 2 hn., tb. (1926), 5, pf. (1926), 6, orch. (1926), 7, 5 winds, vn., vc. (1924), 8, 2 pf., orch. (1925), 9, orch. (1929), 10, orch., ch. (1925), 11, pf., orch. (1928), 12, orch. (1929), 13, 2 orchs., band (1929), 14, orch., band, ch. (1928).

piano: Suite Infantil Nos. 1 and 2 (1912, 1913); A Prole do Bebê Nos. 1 and 2 (The Baby's Family) (1918, 1921); Rudepoema (1921--6, also for pf. and orch.); Saudades das Selvas Brasileiras (1927).

chamber music: 17 str. qts. (1915--57); 3 pf. trios (1911--18); 4 vn. sonatas (1912--23); Berceuse (1915); Nonet (1923); Sextetto místico (1945).

guitar: 12 Études (1928); 15 Preludes (1940).

Villancico (from Sp. villano, rustic). (1) 16th-cent. choral comp., like cantata, generally on subject of Christmas, for soloists, ch., and str. and/or org. (2) Madrigalian setting for 3 to 5 vv. of Sp. verse-form called villancico.

Villanella (It.; Fr. villanelle). Street song popular in 16th cent., also atype of part-song less complicated than madrigal. The first song in Berlioz's cycle Les Nuits d'été is entitled Villanelle.

Villi, Le (The Wilis). Opera in 1 act by Puccini to lib. by Fontana based on folk-legend. Comp. 1883. Prod. Milan 1884. Rev. version in 2 acts prod. Turin 1884, Manchester (in Eng.) 1897, NY Met. 1908. Villotta (It.). Plebeian 16th-cent. song, later known as villanella. Vinay, Ramón (b Chillán, Chile, 1912). Chilean ten. Studied Mexico. Opera début (as bar.) Mexico City 1931 as Alfonso in La Favorite. Tenor début 1943 as Don José in Carmen. NY City Opera 1945--6, 1948; NY Met. 1946--61; CG 1950, 1953--60; Bayreuth 1952--7. Superb Otello (Verdi), coached in role by Toscanini with whom he made famous recording. Resumed bar. roles 1962, singing Telramund, Iago, Falstaff, and Scarpia. Remarkable actor. Sang last act of Otello, Santiago 1969. Producer until 1972.

Vincent, John (b Birmingham, Alabama, 1902; d Santa Monica, Calif., 1977). Amer. composer and teacher. Studied New England Cons. with Chadwick, under Piston at Harvard 1933--5, then for 2 years with N. Boulanger in Paris. Head of mus. dept. W. Kentucky State Univ. 1937--45 and succeeded Schoenberg as prof. of comp. U.C.L.A. 1946--69. Employed 'paratonality' in his mus., i.e. diatonic element predominating in polytonal or atonal passages. Wrote comic opera Primeval Void (1969--71), prod. Vienna 1973, Sym. in D (1954), Nude Descending the Staircase, xylophone and str. (1972), Stabat Mater, sop. and male vv. (1969), Mary at Calvary, sop., ch., and org. (1976), 2 str. qts. (1936, 1967), and songs.

Vincent, Robert (William) (b Medan, Sumatra, 1941). Eng. organist and harpsichordist. Studied Oxford Univ. and GSM. Prof. of org., GSM from 1967. Organist and choirmaster St Martin-in-the-Fields 1967--77, Manchester Cath. 1977--80.

Vinci, Leonardo (b Strongoli, c. 1690; d Naples, 1730). It. composer. Studied in Naples. Choirmaster. Monk from 1728. Between 1719 and 1730 wrote 35 operas, incl. Ifigenia in Tauride (Venice 1725), some in Neapolitan dialect.

Viñatnes, Ricardo (b Lérida, 1875; d Barcelona, 1943). Sp. pianist. Studied in Barcelona and later in Paris with de Bériot and Godard. Champion of contemporary composers, being among first pianists to play works of Debussy, Ravel, and others. Introduced much Russ. pf. music to France (incl. Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition and Balakirev's Islamey) and was dedicatee of Falla's Nights in the Gardens of Spain, Ravel's Oiseaux tristes, and Debussy's Poissons d'Or. In 1936 gave f.p.s. of works by Messiaen.

Viol. Type of bowed str. instr., made in various sizes. Developed in Renaissance period, then superseded by vn. family, now revived for perf. of early mus. Origins obscure, but probably developed from efforts to apply bow to plucked instr. during 2nd half of 15th cent. in Spain. Term 'viol' was used generically, like yihuela in Sp. Consort of viols mentioned in Eng. records of King's Musick for 1540. Shape of viol varied much during first century of existence. Documentation of 1556 says that Fr. viols had 5 str. tuned in 4ths, whereas It. viols had 6. All viols were played held downwards, larger sizes between the legs, smaller resting on knees. Eng. composers from Byrd to Purcell wrote superb series of works for viols, a consort (or chest) normally comprising 2 trebles, 2 tenors, and 2 basses. Viol had flat back, frets, and C-shaped sound-holes. Bow held in underhand grip with fingers controlling tension of horse-hair. Prin. types of viol. are: Division viol: smaller version of bass viol suitable for agile playing of divisions (variations); Lyra-viol: instr. specially built for virtuoso viol players who practised double- and triple-stopping, pizzicato, etc.; mus. written in tablature. Tobias Hume's First Part of Ayres, 1605, is lyra-viol mus. See also baryton, viola d'amore, viola da braccio, viola da gamba.

Viola (Fr. alto or taille; Ger. Bratsche). (1) Bowed 4-str. instr., sometimes known as alto or tenor because of its lower pitch compared with vn., to which it is closely related. Tuned to c, g, d', a'. Va. section standard in all orchs.; one va. is standard component of str. qt. Also used as solo instr., several concs. and conc.-type works having been written for it. Viola pomposa was rare 18th-cent. type with a higher 5th str. See also Tertis, Lionel. (2) Org. stop of 8' length and pitch. (3) Generic It. term for str. instrs. in Renaissance and baroque periods, incl. viole da gamba (leg viols), i.e. members of the viol family; and viole da braccio (arm viols), the forerunners of the vn. family.

Viola Alta (It.; Ger. Altgeige). High viola, i.e. large va. with 5 str. introduced by H. Ritter in 1876 and used by Wagner at Bayreuth. Cumbersome to play.

Viola Bastarda. Continental equivalent of Eng. division viol.

Viola da Braccio (It.). Arm-viol. First known use of term in 1543 as generic description of str. instr. played on the arm (e.g. rebec, Renaissance fiddle, and lira da braccio) but later meaning members of violin family.

Viola da Gamba (It.). Leg-viol. (1) Strictly, every viol was a viola da gamba because of the way it was held for perf., but term applies mainly to bass viol because it was held between the knees like the modern vc. (2) Org. stop. See Gamba. Viola d'Amore (It.). Love-viol. Bowed str. instr. of the viol family but without frets and played under the chin. Larger than modern viola, with 7 bowed gut str. and 7 sympathetic str. (which give the instr. its name) which vibrate to the sound of the stopped strs. Particularly beautiful sound. Used by Baroque composers, and in 19th cent. by Meyerbeer and Berlioz. Specially required by Janáček in his operas Ká;akta Kabanová and Večer Makropoulos and his 2nd str. qt. Viola Pomposa. Instr. of vn. family with 5 str. used in Baroque works for high vc. passages. Larger than va.

Viole (Fr.). (1) Viol. (2) Viola.

Violin (Fr. Violon; It. Violino; Ger. Geige or Violine). Bowed 4-str. instr., prin. and treble member of its family (va., vc., and db. being the others). Tuned g d' a' e"; compass of over 3;FD octaves. Standard feature of every orch., where vns. are divided into '1sts' and '2nds', corresponding to higher- and lower-pitched parts. Str. qt. has 2 vn. (1st and 2nd). Emerged independently of the viol, to which it is not related. A 3-str. vn. is represented in paintings at Ferrara 1508--9. At sometime in It. before 1550 the 4-str. instr. was invented and was regarded as the instr. for dancing whereas the viol was the courtly instr. Earliest printed vn. mus. is 2 dances incl. in the Balet comique de la royne of 1581. Undoubtedly the vn. was perfected by one man, Andrea Amati of Cremona, from whom the king of Fr. ordered 38 str. instrs. in 1560. For account of later development of instr., see Stradivari. Vn. is made from wood, with 2 f-shaped sound holes. Str., made of gut or metal, are stretched along upper surface (belly). Sound from the str. when touched by bow is transmitted by upright bridge which supports the str. and which they cross at fractionally less than a right angle. Str. are held in place by tailpiece, cross bridge, and continue over ebony fingerboard attached to upper surface of neck. At extreme end they cross nut, or saddle, and enter a pegbox where they are attached to, and tuned by, 4 pegs. Among the most expressive of instr., the vn. has inspired a treasury of great mus. and great performers. The violino piccolo (It., little violin) was a small, higher-pitched instr. used in Baroque period in such works as Bach's Brandenburg Conc. No. 1. The vn. bow used to be convex, but since late 18th cent. has been concave, with increased tension.

Violinbogen (Ger.). Vn. bow. Violino. (1) (It.). Violin. (2) Org. stop of 4'(sometimes 8') length and pitch.

Violins of Saint-Jacques, The. Opera in 3 acts by Williamson to lib. by William Chappell after novel by Patrick Leigh Fermor. Prod. London (SW) 1966.

Violin-Steg (Ger.). Vn. bridge.

Violoncello (It., usually abbreviated to 'cello'; Ger. Violoncell; Fr. violoncelle). Bowed 4-str. instr., one of violin family, originating in early 16th cent. Played between performer's knees. Tuned to C G d a; compass of over 3 octaves. All sym. orchs. contain vc. section, and one vc. is part of every str. qt. Noble sound of instr. has been wellcatered for in concs., those by Dvořák and Elgar in particular exploiting its expressive capabilities to the full.

Violone. An imprecise term dating from 1520. In 16th and 17th cents. the double-bass viol was often called the violone, but some writers used the term to mean ordinary bass viol, and Corelli and Handel used it as synonym for vc. Also meant the db. Many violones had 6 str., were fretted and tuned like viol. Probably used for bass part of consort mus.

Viotti, Giovanni Battista (b Fontanetto, Piedmont, 1755; d London, 1824). It. composer and violinist. Son of blacksmith who played hn. and taught him mus. Studied Turin and with Pugnani, touring Ger. and Russia with him, 1780. Played in Concert Spirituel, Paris, 1782, becoming accompanist to Marie Antoinette. Visited London 1792, making début in Feb. 1793 at Salomon concert and playing in Haydn's benefit concerts 1794 and 1795, and at It. opera at King's Th., 1795--8. Returned to London 1801, becoming wine merchant. Active in formation of Phil. Soc. 1813. Dir., It. Opera in Paris 1819--22. Died impoverished after commercial misfortunes. Reckoned as greatest classical player of his day and founder of modern sch. of classical playing. Wrote 29 vn. concs., of which No. 22 in A minor is especially important, 21 str. qts., 21 str. trios, many vn. duets, 18 vn. sonatas with bass, pf. concs., fl. qts., and other pieces. Ger. priest, member of court mus. staff at Heidelberg from 1495. Author of oldest-known book on mus. instrs., Musica getutscht und ausgezogen (Basle

Virelai (chanson balladée). Medieval Fr. song, probably of Sp. origin, consisting of refrain alternating with (usually) 3 stanzas. Est. as common Fr. poetic and mus. form by Machaut; continued in use throughout 15th cent. (by Dufay, Ockeghem, and Busnois). The word derives from old Fr. virer, to turn or twist, thus suggesting a dance origin.

Virginal(s). This word (not of Eng. origin) was used in Eng. as generic term for all types of plucked kbd. instr., but also had specific meaning. First mentioned c.1460, name being used in Fr. and Ger. Typical virginals of oblong shape with one set of strns., parallel to kbd. (Differed from hpd. in shape of soundbox, placing of strns.—at right angles on hpd.—and existence of 2 bridges.) Kbd. on Flemish virginals was set to right or left, in others it was centrally placed. Double virginals had 2 kbds. Much fine mus. written for virginals by Byrd, Bull, Morley, Farnaby, etc. See Fitzwilliam Virginal Book. Origin of name obscure, but probably comes from instrument's association with female performers or possibly from its tone (like a young girl's voice). Virtuoso (It.). (1) As noun: a performer of exceptional skill with particular reference to technical ability. (2) As adjective: a performance of exceptional technical accomplishment. There is sometimes an implication that a virtuoso performance excludes emotional and expressive artistry, or subdues it to technical display, but a true virtuoso is both technician and artist.

Visconti (di Modrone), (Count) [fy65,3]Luchino (b Milan, 1906; d Rome, 1976). It. producer, designer, and writer. Came of family with long assoc. with Scala, Milan. Began career as stage and film dir. and went into opera because of admiration for Maria Callas, for whom he prod. La Vestale in 1954. Later he staged, for Callas, La Sonnambula, La Traviata, Anna Bolena, and Iphigénie en Tauride, all at La Scala. His first opera prod. outside It. was the memorable Don Carlos at CG, 1958, where he later prod. Il Trovatore, La Traviata, and Der Rosenkavalier. His last opera prod. was Manon Lescaut at Spoleto, 1972. Among his protégés were the designers Sanjust and Zeffirelli. Wrote lib. for Mannino's opera Il Diavolo in giardino (Palermo 1963) and scenario of Henze's ballet Maratona (1956). Directed film of Thomas Mann's Death in Venice (1971) in which he made use of Mahler's mus. His productions were notable for their authentic period style, attention to detail and characterization, and visual taste.

Vishnevskaya, Galina (b Leningrad, 1926). Russ. sop. Studied with V. Garina 1942--52. Sang at Leningrad Operetta Th. from 1944, then opera début, Leningrad, 1950 in Strelnikov's Kholopka. Joined Bolshoy Opera 1952. NY Met. 1961 (début as Aida), CG 1962 (Aida). Fine dramatic singer. Wife of Rostropovich, whom she married 1955 and with whom she left USSR. Sop. part of Britten's War Requiem, 1962, written for her, but she did not sing at f.p. in Coventry. Gave f.p. of Britten's The Poet's Echo, Moscow 1965. Shostakovich dedicated his 7 Romances, Op. 127, to her (f.p. Moscow 1967) and she sang soprano part in f.p. of his 14th Sym., Leningrad 1969. Sang title-role in first recording of orig. version of Shostakovich's The Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District.

Vivace, vivacemente (It.). Vivacious, from vivacità, vivacezza, vivacity. Fast and lively. Vivacissimo, very fast. Composers (e.g. Schubert) often use vivace as an indication of mood rather than tempo. In 18th cent. it often meant something between allegro and largo.

Vivaldi, Antonio (b Venice, 1678; d Vienna, 1741). It. composer and violinist. Son of violinist in orch. of St Mark's, Venice, under Legrenzi. Taught by father. Entered church, becoming priest 1703, though after 2 years never said Mass because of congenital chest complaint. Taught vn. at orphanage (Ospedale della Pietà) from 1703 and gave recitals. Pubd. trio sonatas, Op. 1, 1705 and vn. sonatas, Op. 2, 1709. First opera, Ottone in villa, prod. Vicenza 1713; first Venetian opera, Orlando finto pazzo, 1714. Was also operatic impresario in Venice and cond. and played vn. in opera perfs. Spent 3 years in service of Landgrave of Hesse-Darmstadt in Mantua, probably 1719--1721. Between 1722 and 1725, wrote operas for Mantua, Vicenza, Milan, and Rome. His famous Op. 8, incl. Le quattro stagioni (The Four Seasons), was pubd. 1725. By this time, Vivaldi was known and admired throughout Europe. In 1734 first collaborated with librettist Goldoni (1709--93). In 1737 prod. of a new Vivaldi opera at Ferrara was forbidden by papal authorities on ground that Vivaldi was a priest who did not say Mass and had a relationship with a woman singer. In 1738, visited Amsterdam, where his mus. had been pubd. since 1711, for royal th. centenary celebrations---his reputation stood higher in Fr., Holland, and Eng. in his lifetime than it did in Venice. Despite intermittent disputes over the years, Vivaldi was still maestro at the Pietà and was still writing cantatas for perf. there in 1740. In 1741 he decided to leave Venice for Vienna, presumably in search of some court appointment, but died there, being buried in a pauper's grave. Among contemporaries who appreciated Vivaldi was J. S. Bach, who transcr. 10 Vivaldi concs. as hpd. or org. concs. Like Bach himself, Vivaldi's mus. fell out of favour for many years, but the 20th cent., in particular since the revival of interest in authentic methods of performing baroque mus., has seen it re-est. Once regarded merely as the composer of works for str., his genius as an opera composer is now recognized (he said he wrote 94, but fewer than 50 are extant) as well as the Venetian splendour of his church mus. No composer did more to establish the vc. as a solo instr., and he displayed a keen interest in the use of unusual instr.: it is the infinite variety and invention of his work that has made it so beloved 300 years after his birth. There have been several catalogues of his work, the most recent (Leipzig 1974) by Peter Ryom (works are numbered with the prefix RV = Ryom-Verzeichnis). Prin. works:

operas: Bajazet(Tamerlano) (1735); Catone in Utica (1737); Dorilla in Tempe (1726); Ercole sul Termodonte (1723); Farnace (1727); La fida ninfa (1732); Il Giustino (1724); Griselda (1735); L'incoronazione di Dario (1716); L'Olimpiade (1734); Orlando finto pazzo (1714); Orlando furioso (1727); Ottone in villa (1713); Rosilena ed Oronta (1728); Rosmira (1738); Il Teuzzzone (1719); Tito Manlio (1719); La verità in cimento (1720).

published works in his lifetime: Op. 1, 12 Sonatas for 2 vn. and basso continuo (1705); Op. 2, 12 Sonatas for vn. and basso continuo (1709); Op. 3, L'estro armonico (Harmonic inspiration), 12 concs. for various combinations (4 vn., 4 vn. and vc., etc.) (1711); Op. 4, La stravaganza (The extraordinary), 12 vn. concs. (1716--21); Op. 8, Il cimento dell' armonia e dell' inventione (The Contest between Harmony and Invention), 12 vn. concs., the first 4, in E, G minor, F, and F minor being known as The Four Seasons (Le quattro stagioni) (1725); Op. 9, La cetra (The lyre), 11 vn. concs. and 1 for 2 vn. (1727); Op. 10, 6 fl. concs. (c.1728); Op. 11, 5 vn. concs., 1 ob. conc. (1729); Op. 12, 5 vn. concs. and 1 without solo (1729); Op. 13, Il pastor fido (The Faithful Shepherd), 6 sonatas for musette, viella, recorder, ob. or vn., and basso continuo (1737, doubtful authenticity). The rest of Vivaldi's instr. output is so vast that it can only be summarized: [it0p4]10sonatas for vc. and basso continuo; 28 sonatas for vn. and basso continuo; 4 sonatas for fl. and basso continuo; sonatas for 2 vn. and basso continuo; concs. for various instr. (fl., ob., recorders, vns., bn., etc.) and basso continuo; over 60 concs., sinfonias, and sonatas for str. and basso continuo; 170 concs. and sinfonias for vn., orch., and basso continuo; 7 concs. for viola d'amore; 28 vc. concs.; mandolin conc.; 9 fl. concs.; 2 recorder concs.; 14 ob. concs.; over 40 bn. concs.; many concs. for 2 vn., 2 vc., 2 mandolins, 2 ob., 2 hn., 2 tpt., etc.

sacred music: Mass; Kyrie for double ch.; 3 Glorias; 2 Dixit Dominus; 3 Laudate pueri; 2 Magnificat; 3 Salve Regina; Stabat Mater; Juditha triumphans (oratorio, Venice 1716); also many secular cantatas, etc.

Wagenseil, Johann Christoph (b Nuremberg, 1633; d Altdorf, 1708). Ger. writer and librarian. In 1697 pubd. his Nuremberg Chronicles, containing treatise on the Meistersinger from which Wagner drew much of the background (and several of the characters) for his opera Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg.

Wagner, Cosima (née Liszt) (b Bellaggio, Lake Como, 1837; d Bayreuth, 1930). Of Franco-Hungarian birth, being daughter of Liszt and Countess Marie d'Agoult. Educated in Fr. Went to Ger. and in 1857 married Hans von Bülow, pianist and cond., by whom she had 2 children. First met Richard Wagner in Paris 1853; declared love for each other in Berlin 1863. Went to Munich 1864 to be near Wagner. Daughter, Isolde, born to them 1865. Lived with Wagner at Tribschen, Lucerne, from 1868. Another daughter, Eva, born 1867. Divorced from von Bülow 1869. Son, Siegfried, born to her and Wagner 1869. Married Wagner 1870. Moved with him to Bayreuth 1872 and was active in preparations for 1876 festival. After Wagner's death in 1883, became mus. dir. of Bayreuth Fest., handing over to her son Siegfried in 1908. Became blind 1920. Her Diaries, covering years 1869--83, are invaluable source of information on Wagner's life and thought.

Wagner, Johanna (b Seelze, nr. Hanover, 1826; d Würzburg, 1894). Ger. sop. Illegitimate child of army officer and singer, adopted by R. Wagner's brother. Engaged at Dresden, where Wagner was cond., 1843. Created role of Elisabeth in Tannhäuser 1845. Studied with Viardot in Paris 1846--8. Sang in Berlin 1850--62, then lost v. but became actress. London début 1856. Resumed singing in 1870s. Sang alto part in Beethoven's 9th Sym. at Bayreuth stone-laying ceremony 1872. Created First Norn in Götterdämmerung, 1876. Taught in Munich 1882--4.

Wagner, Peter Josef (b Kürenz, Trèves, 1865; d Fribourg, 1931). Ger. musicologist. Studied at Trèves and in Berlin with Spitta. On staff Fribourg Univ. from 1893, prof. of mus. history 1902, and rector 1920--1. Specialist in plainsong, Palestrina, madrigals, etc.

Wagner, (Wilhelm) Richard (b Leipzig, 1813; d Venice, 1883). Ger. composer, cond., poet, and author. One of the handful of composers who changed the course of mus. Went to sch. in Dresden and attended Thomasschule, Leipzig, 1830--1. Deeply interested in literature as youth. Mus. inclination intensified by hearing Schröder-Devrient in Bellini. Wrote sym. 1832 and later that year made first attempt at opera, Die Hochzeit, which he destroyed. Choral cond. at Würzburg 1833 and in 1834 completed opera Die Feen. Became cond. of orch. at th. in Lauchstädt and later in 1834 mus. dir. of th. at Magdeburg. His 2nd opera Das Liebesverbot, based on Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, prod. there 1836. Married actress Minna Planer. Ass. cond. at Riga 1837--9. Went to Paris 1839. Wrote Rienzi 1838--40 and Der fliegende Holländer 1841. Lived in poverty in Paris, doing mus. hack-work and writing articles. In 1842 returned to Dresden, where Rienzi was prod. with great success. Der fliegende Holländer equal success in 1843, leading to Wagner's appointment as court opera cond. Cond. legendary perfs. of Beethoven's 9th Sym. and works by Mozart, Weber, and Gluck. Tannhäuser prod. at Dresden 1845. Began project for series of operas based on Nibelungen sagas, completing lib. of Siegfrieds Tod, 1848. Sided with revolutionaries in 1849 uprising in Dresden. Fled to Liszt at Weimar after police issued warrant for his arrest, eventually settling in Zürich where he wrote series of essays, incl. the important Oper und Drama in which he expounded his theory of music drama, the unification of mus. and drama superseding all other considerations (such as singers' special requirements in the way of display arias). Also continued to write text of his Nibelung operas and comp. mus. of Das Rheingold and Die Walküre. In permanent financial straits, was helped by Julie Ritter and by Ger. merchant Otto Wesendonck, with whose wife Mathilde Wesendonck he had affair. Under the influence of this emotional experience he wrote lib. and mus. of Tristan und Isolde (1857--9), interrupting Siegfried after completing Act 2. In 1855 visited London as cond. of Phil. Soc. concerts. Wife Minna left him (not for first time) in 1858 because of Wesendonck affair but rejoined him in 1859. Cond. in Paris 1860 and rev. Tannhäuser for perf. at Opéra in 1861; but tried to withdraw it after riots instigated by Jockey Club. Allowed to re-enter Ger., except Saxony. Heard Lohengrin (comp. 1846--8) in Vienna and hoped for prod. there of Tristan, but it was abandoned after 77 rehearsals as 'unperformable'. Amnesty granted from Saxony 1862. At work on Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg from 1862. Fled Vienna 1864 because of pressing debts, but while in Stuttgart was 'rescued' by young King Ludwig of Bavaria, a passionate admirer of Wagner's mus., who became his patron and invited him to Munich, where Tristan was prod. 1865, cond. by Hans von Bülow, with whose wife Cosima, Wagner had been in love since 1863. Work resumed on Nibelung operas under stimulus of Ludwig's enthusiasm. Opposition to Wagner in Munich political circles led to his departure from Munich and his settling at the villa of Tribsch, Lucerne, where Cosima, having borne him 2 daughters, joined him in 1868. Minna having died in 1866 and Cosima's marriage being annulled in 1869 (the year in which she gave birth to Wagner's son Siegfried), Wagner and Cosima were married in 1870. Das Rheingold and Die Walküre prod. in Munich 1869 and 1870, Die Meistersingerin 1868. In 1871 persuaded Bayreuth municipal authority to grant land for erection of th. specially designed for staging of Der Ring des Nibelungen; foundation-stone laid 1872. Toured Ger. to seek artists and raise funds for first Bayreuth Fest. Settled into new home, Wahnfried, at Bayreuth 1874, where he completed Götterdämmerung, 4th opera in Ring project begun in 1848. Bayreuth th. opened August 1876 and Ring perf. complete under Hans Richter, supervised in every detail by Wagner. In 1877 cond. series of concerts at Royal Albert Hall, London, to raise funds to cover Bayreuth deficit, and then began work on Parsifal, which he had first contemplated in 1857 (completed 1882, perf. in July at Bayreuth). From 1878, suffered series of heartattacks, fatal one occurring in Venice on 13 Feb. 1883. Buried at Wahnfried. Wagner's mus., richly expressive, intensely illustrative, and on the grandest scale, dominated the 19th cent. and split the mus. world into opposing factions. His influence, good and bad, on countless other composers is still a prime factor a century after his death. He wrote the texts of all his operas, reading copiously in the sources of the legends he selected as subjects and writing a prose sketch, then the poem (lib.) before he comp. any of the mus., though it is clear that certain ideas came to him ready-clothed in mus. He was inspired by the Ger. Romantic spirit of Weber's operas, and to some extent by the grandiose operatic aims of Meyerbeer, whom he despised. In Liszt he found a fellow-spirit from whom he learned much, as he did from Berlioz. But he surpassed them all in the single-mindedness with which he pursued his dream of an art form in which mus. and drama should be one and indivisible, his Zukunfts-musik (mus. of the future). With the chromaticism of Tristan he took tonality to its limits and beyond, and opened the way for the Schoenbergian revolution. Philosophical and psychological undertones contribute immensely to the spell of the Tristan mus. Wagner brought to a fine art the use of Leitmotiv to depict not only characters but their emotions, and wove them into an orch. texture of such richness that the orch. assumed an extra dimension in operatic terms. His operas also required a new technique of singing and a new breed of singers with the intelligence to convey the subtleties of his art. The idea that 'bawling' was all that Wagner needed has long been disproved by generations of singers by whom his music has been shown to be as singable as bel canto. In a sense Wagner was a dead-end, since he was a unique genius. The sheer mastery of The Ring, the sustaining of such an imposing achievement at a white-heat of inspiration for something like 15 hours of mus., is among the most amazing artistic achievements of the human spirit. But opera could never be the same after him: he made it the vehicle for the expression of the most complex emotional and psychological issues, but, being first and foremost a musician, these are still secondary to the hypnotic power of the mus., at least for those (and they number millions) who fall under its sway. Prin. works:

operas and music dramas: [fy75,1] Die Feeen (The Fairies) (1833--4); Das Liebesverbot (Forbidden Love) (1835--6); Rienzi (1838--40); Der fliegende Holländer (The Flying Dutchman) (1841); Tannhäuser (1843--5, rev. 1861); Lohengrin (1846--8); Der Ring des Nibelungen (The Nibelung's Ring); Das Rheingold (The Rhine Gold) (1853--4), Die Walküre (The Valkyrie) (1854--6), Siegfried (1856--7 and 1864--71), Götterdämmerung (Twilight of the Gods) (1869--74, some ideas composed as Siegfrieds Tod many years earlier); Tristan und Isolde (1857--9); Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (The Mastersingers of Nuremberg) (1862--7); Parsifal (1878--82).

Organist and choirmaster, Church of St Ambrose, Los Angeles, at 12. Studied in Paris with M. Dupré. Mus. dir., St Joseph's Church, Los Angeles, 1937. Founded Roger Wagner Chorale 1947, which toured widely and won high reputation as one of the finest Amer. choirs. Dir., choral mus., U.C.L.A. from 1959. Authority on Després.

Wagner, (Helferich) Siegfried (b Tribschen, Lucerne, 1869; d Bayreuth, 1930). Ger. composer and cond. Only son of Richard Wagner and Cosima Wagner (then von Bülow). Educated as architect, but turned to mus. Studied with Humperdinck. Ass. cond. Bayreuth 1894, cond. perfs. there 1896. Succeeded mother as art. dir., Bayreuth Fest. from 1908, producer from 1901. Married Englishwoman Winifred Williams (1894--1980) who dir. Bayreuth 1930--44. Wrote 13 operas, incl. Der Bärenhäuter (1899), Der Kobold (1904), and Der Schmied von Marienburg (1920), symphonic poems, vn. conc. (1915), and sym. (1925).

Wagner, Wieland (b Bayreuth, 1917; d Munich, 1966). Ger. opera producer and designer. Son of Siegfried Wagner. Studied in Bayreuth and Munich. Worked among stage staff at pre-1939 Bayreuth Fests. and designed scenery for Parsifal, 1939. With his brother Wolfgang Wagner became art. dir. of Bayreuth Fest. 1951 and revolutionized Wagnerprods., causing intense controversy. Scrapped representational productions, substituting settings with little scenery, emphasis on lighting, and all-purpose circular platform. Many of Wagner's stage directions were ignored. Also prod. operas by other composers at Hamburg, Stuttgart, etc.

Wagner, Wolfgang (b Bayreuth, 1919). Ger. opera impresario and producer. Son of Siegfried Wagner. With his brother Wieland Wagner was co-dir. of Bayreuth Fest. 1951--66, mainly concerned with administration. Succeeded brother as art. dir., 1966. Though less controversial a producer than Wieland, caused controversy by choice of other producers, e.g. Patrice Chéreau for centenary Ring, 1976.

Wagner-Régeny, Rudolf (b Szász-Régen, Romania, 1903; d E. Berlin, 1969). Ger. composer, cond., and pianist. Studied Leipzig Cons. 1919--20, Berlin Hochschule für Musik 1920--3. Influenced by Weill-Brecht works, later by 12-note procedures. Works incl. 9 operas (incl. Die Bürger von Calais 1936--8 and Das Bergwerk zu Falun 1958--60), 3 ballets (incl. Tristan, 1958), pf. conc., ch. works, etc.

Wagner Tuba. Brass instr. invented by Wagner as compromise between hn. and tb. to give special tone-colour in orchestration of Der Ring des Nibelungen (for Hunding in Die Walküre, for example). Look more like hns. than tubas. The 4 used in the Ring are 2 tenors in Bb, with 3 valves plus extra for correcting intonation of lowest octave and 2 basses in F. Played by 5th--8th hns. Wagner had the idea for the tubas after seeing some instruments in Sax's workshops in 1853 which may have been saxhorns. Possibly the tubas used at Bayreuth in 1876 were made in Berlin. They did not survive after 1939. In any case they were replaced in 1890 by a set made in Mainz. CG used brass band instruments until 1935 when Beecham obtained a set from Mainz. Wagner tubas were used also by Bruckner, R. Strauss, and Stravinsky in The Rite of Spring. Wahnfried. Name of villa at Bayreuth into which Wagner and his wife moved in April 1874 and where they are buried. Now a museum housing valuable archives. Name chosen by Wagner (orig. Wahnfriedheim) from Hesse town of Wahnfried because he liked its mysticism, the word meaning 'Peace from Wahn' (Wahn = madness, illusion, etc.). Above portal he engraved: Hier, wo mein Wählen Frieden fand -- Wahnfried Sei dieses Haus von mir benannt (Here where my illusion found peace, be this house named by me Peace from Illusion). Wait(s)[fy75,1] (Old Eng.). Watchman. (1) Musicians in medieval Eng. who acted as town watchmen, marking the hours of the night by sounding instr. By 16th cent. they formed town bands, each having its 'signature tune', thus London Waits, Chester Waits, etc. Some waits were renowned for singing, and this originated application of term to groups who sang hymns and carols in the streets at Christmas. (2) Old Eng. name for shawm, much used by waits. Other name for shawm was wayte-pipe.

Wakefield, (Augusta) Mary (b Sedgwick, nr. Kendal, 1853; d Grange-over-Sands, 1910). Eng. cont. Studied with Randegger and Henschel and later in Rome, where she also studied pf. with Sgambati. Walton, (Sir) William (Turner) (b Oldham, 1902; d Ischia, 1983). Eng. composer. Son of choirmaster and singing-teacher. Chorister at Christ Church Cath. Sch., Oxford, 1912--18, during which time wrote anthems and songs. Wrote Pf. Qt. 1918. 'Adopted' as a brother by Osbert, Sacheverell, and Edith Sitwell, 1919, living with them in London and Italy. Comp. first version of Fa; accade, instr. accs. to recited poems by Edith Sitwell, in 1921, f.p. London (privately) 1922. Str. qt. played at Salzburg 1923. Made jazz arrs. for Savoy Orpheans, 1923. Public perf. of Fa; accade 1923 caused furore. Comedy ov. Portsmouth Point perf. at Zürich 1926. Came into wider prominence in 1929 with va. conc., f.p. at Promenade concert with Hindemith as soloist. This was followed at 1931 Leeds Fest. by dramatic cantata Belshazzar's Feast. In 1934 First Sym. was perf. without finale, which was added 1935. Next large-scale work was vn. conc. commissioned by Heifetz, 1939. Wrote mus. for film of Shaw's Major Barbara, 1940, followed by several other wartime film scores, best-known being that for The First of the Few (1942), story of building of Spitfire fighter aircraft, and Olivier's Henry V (1944). Next major work was str. qt., 1947. From 1948 to 1954 was engaged on large-scale opera, Troilus and Cressida, prod. CG 1954. Followed by vc. conc. for Piatigorsky, 2nd Sym., Variations on a Theme of Hindemith, a 1-act 'extravaganza' The Bear, based on Chekhov, and shorter works. From 1948 lived in Ischia. Knighted 1951. O.M. 1968. Walton's mus., although it was at first regarded in Eng. as that of an enfant terrible because of Fa; accade and the 'jazz-age' influence on his early works, remained remarkably consistent. It is fundamentally lyrical and romantic, with two basic ingredients: a pungent, spiky rhythmic impetus, with wide intervals and tangy harmonies, and a brooding melancholy. It is as if two influences were perpetually at war in his nature: the 20th-cent. Stravinsky-Prokofiev strain and the 19th-cent. Elgar. His true qualities can be discerned in Fa; accade, a masterpiece which never 'dates', because it is musically so good and true. Almost alone among later Eng. composers, he successfully wore the Elgarian pomp-and-circumstance mantle, as in his 2 Coronation Marches, much of the film mus., and parts of Belshazzar's Feast, but the finest of his works---the 3 concs., the 1st Sym., the Hindemith Variations, Belshazzar, The Bear, and parts of Troilus and Cressida---have a powerful individuality in which the opposing strains are successfully reconciled. All his

mus. is fastidiously fashioned and it has a Mediterranean luxuriousness which is reconciled to the robust qualities of a composer whose place in the history of 20th-cent. Eng. mus. is high and important. Prin. works:

theatre incid. music: The Son of Heaven (L. Strachey) (1925), The Boy David (Barrie) (1936), Macbeth (1941).

Waltz (Ger. Walzer; Fr. Valse). Dance in  $\frac{3}{4}$  time probably deriving from Ger. Ländler which came into prominence in last quarter of 18th cent. both among composers and in the ballroom. Where the latter was concerned, the waltzes of the Viennese composers Johann Strauss I and Lanner were popular throughout Europe. Beethoven, Schubert, and Hummel wrote waltzes. Weber's Invitation to the Dance is in waltz rhythm and is the first 'sophisticated' treatment of the waltz. Chopin's waltzes are fine examples. In symphonic mus. the 2nd movement of Berlioz's Symphonie fantastique and 3rd movement of Tchaikovsky's 5th sym. are outstanding. Tchaikovsky also wrote great waltzes in his operas and ballets; and those by Johann Strauss II, Richard Strauss (Der Rosenkavalier), Ravel, and others are deservedly cherished.

Waltz, Gustavus (fl. 1732--59). Eng. bass of Ger. birth. Sang in Arne's Eng. opera season at Little Haymarket Th., 1732. Sang small part in f.p. of Handel's Deborah, 1733. Went with Handel to Oxford in July 1733, singing in 4 of his oratorios and in anthems. Member of Handel's opera co. 1733--6. Rejoined Handel for oratorio season 1738--9, singing title-role in f.p. of Saul, and in f.p. of Israel in Egypt. In later part of career sang mainly in lighter works by Lampe and Arne. Sang in chorus at Foundling Hospital perfs. of Messiah 1759. Story that he was once Handel's cook is unverified, as is Handel's alleged remark in 1745 that 'Gluck knew no more of counterpoint than my cook Waltz'.

Wälzel, Camillo (pseudonym F. Zell) (b Magdeburg, 1829; d Vienna, 1895). Ger. librettist. Trans. Fr. comedies. Wrote texts, often collab. Richard Genée, for operettas by Suppé, Johann Strauss II, Millöcker, and others.

Warlock, Peter (really Heseltine, Philip) (b London, 1894; d London, 1930). Eng. composer, critic, and author. Pubd. his mus. under pseudonym Peter Warlock. Studied mus. at Eton, then helped by van Dieren and Delius. Founded and co-ed. periodical The Sackbut 1920 and wrote book on Delius 1923. Friend of Cecil Gray, E. J. Moeran, and Constant Lambert. Edited much 16th and 17th cent. music in collab. with Mangeot. His songs alternate between lyricism of Delius and roistering spirit reminiscent of first Elizabethan age. His personality veered between extrovert, heavy-drinking joviality and neurotic introspection. Eventually (it may be presumed, despite the open verdict at the inquest) took his own life. Sensitive critic and writer. His mus., especially his songs and part-songs, is of high merit. Prin. works:

orch: An Old Song (1917); Serenade for Delius on his 60th birthday, str. (1921--2); Capriol, suite for str. (1926; for full orch. 1928).

Water Music. Instr. suite by Handel, the origin of which is unknown. The legend that Handel wrote it for a royal water party in 1715 to restore himself to favour with King George I is attractive but unsubstantiated. (The King had been Elector of Hanover when Handel had effectively deserted his post as Kapellmeister at Hanover in order to visit Eng., where he settled.) However, it is documented that Handel provided mus. for a royal journey up the Thames on 17 July 1717. No complete autograph score of the mus. exists and contemporary edns. differ in several respects. Some of the movements in autograph exist in earlier versions, so dating the mus. is impossible. About 20 numbers were written, scored for tpts., hns., obs., bns., fls., recorders, and str. Best-known of modern orchestrations is that by Harty.

Water Music. Work by Cage (1952) in which pianist has to make the visual element a major feature of the perf., being provided with radio, whistles, water containers, a pack of cards, and a score mounted like a poster.

Weber, Carl Maria (Friedrich Ernst) von (b Eutin in Oldenburg, 1786; d London, 1826). Ger. composer, cond., and pianist. Son of town musician and theatrical impresario and his 2nd wife, a singer and actress. Taught as boy by Michael Haydn in Salzburg, then by court organist, Kalcher, in Munich. By 1800 had already composed opera, mass, and pf. works. Went to Vienna in 1803 as pupil of Vogler, through whose influence became Kapellmeister at Breslau municipal th. 1804--6. Worked in Karlsruhe 1806--7, where he wrote 2 syms. Courtsecretarial post Stuttgart 1807--10, where he was encouraged by Kapellmeister, Danzi. While there wrote incidental mus. to Turandot, opera Silvana, and other works. Banished from Stuttgart because of suspected embezzlement, went to Mannheim, where he was befriended by Gottfried Weber (no relation), then to Darmstadt, where he met Vogler again and took lessons from him in company with Meyerbeer. At this time wrote comic opera Abu Hassan, pf. conc., and vn. sonatas. Travelled to Munich 1811, where he wrote bn. conc. for court wind-player, and to Prague, where his pf. improvisations were acclaimed. Appointed dir., Prague Opera, 1813--16. Court Kapellmeister, Dresden, 1817, with commission to est. Ger. opera alongsideIt. variety. Wrote Mass in Eb 1818 and worked on opera Der Freischütz. Work continually frustrated by opposition from It. opera dir., Morlacchi. Weber rehearsed operas exhaustively, making himself responsible for every aspect of prods., and, in his operatic theories, anticipating those of his disciple Wagner. Freischütz was prod. in Berlin, to tumultuous acclaim, in 1821 and was taken up throughout Ger., making Weber the most popular composer of the day. At the same time, he was at work on a comic opera Die drei Pintos, which he never finished and which was subsequently prepared for perf. by Mahler. He interrupted work on it tocompose an opera commissioned by the Vienna Kärntnerthor Th. for 1822--3 season. This was Euryanthe, prod. Vienna, Oct. 1823. While in Vienna, Weber met Beethoven, with whom he had been in correspondence. By now, Weber's health was seriously undermined by tuberculosis. In 1824, the manager of CG, Kemble, commissioned an opera from Weber, who agreedto set Planché's Eng. lib. Oberon. Went to London 1826, staying with Sir George Smart in Great Portland St., supervisingrehearsals at CG and conducting several concerts. After Oberon première, became increasingly ill and died 7 weeks later in Smart's house. Body taken to Moorfields Chapel. In 1844, on instigation of the Dresden Kapellmeister Richard Wagner, coffin was shipped back to Ger. and buried in Dresden Catholic cemetery on 15 Dec. after funeral oration by Wagner and the perf. of Wagner's Hebt an den Sang (An Webers Grabe) for unacc. male ch. Weber's place in history of Ger. mus. is that of a liberator, setting it free from It. influences and showing how the shape of folk tunes could be adapted for operatic and other purposes. Marschner and Lortzing were his immediate successors, Wagner his culmination. In his instr. and vocal works, his virtuosity, startling effects achieved without use of unusual instrs., and formal and technical innovations stimulated Chopin, Liszt, Berlioz, and in due course Mahler. According to Debussy, the sound of the Weber orch. was achieved by 'scrutiny of the soul of each instrument'. Though handicapped by the weakest of libs. (by the eccentric poetess Helmina von Chézy), Euryanthe contains mus. of outstanding subtlety and strength; while the powerful atmospheric spell of the 'nature' mus. in Freischütz is created by the poetic establishment of a mood. For some time Weber was regarded as more important as an influence on others than for his own achievement. Today his rightful place as a master is acknowledged. Prin. works:

operas: Peter Schmoll und seine Nachbarn (1801--2); Silvana (1808--10); Abu Hassan (1810--11); Der Freischütz (1817--21); Euryanthe (1822--3); Die drei Pintos (begun 1820); Oberon (1825--6).

and chamber works. Wrote several textbooks, incl. a study of the authenticity of Mozart's Requiem (1826). His most important theoretical work was the Versuch einer geordneten Theorie der Tonsetzkunst (Mainz, 1817--21, 1832, Eng. trans. 1851) in which he proposed a new and easier system of terminology and figuration. In 1832 he became general state prosecutor in Darmstadt.

Weber, Ludwig (b Vienna, 1899; d Vienna, 1974). Austrian bass. Studied Vienna. Opera début Vienna Volksoper 1920. Sang in opera at Elberfeld 1925--7, Düsseldorf 1927--30, Cologne 1930--3, Munich 1933--45, Vienna from 1945. CG début 1936, appearing there to 1939, then 1947, 1950--1. Bayreuth Fest. 1951--60. One of greatest 20th-cent. basses in Wagner and Strauss roles. Created role of Holsteiner in Strauss's Friedenstag, 1938.

Webern, Anton (Friedrich Wilhelm von) (b Vienna, 1883; d Mittersill, 1945). Austrian composer and cond. Early tuition from his mother, a pianist. (Most of his works were written in her memory.) Studied at Klagenfurt with Edwin Komauer, composing first works in 1899. Entered Vienna Univ. 1902, studying musicology with Guido Adler. Studied comp. with Pfitzner but became pupil of Schoenberg 1904--08. Ed. works of 15th-cent. Dutch composer Heinrich Isaak. Became close friend of Berg. Was operetta cond. at Bad Ischl (1908), Teplitz (1910), Danzig (1910--11), Stettin (1911--12), and Prague 1917. In Vienna 1918--22 was active in Schoenberg's Soc. for Private Perfs., and cond. Vienna workers' sym. concerts 1922--34. Cond. and mus. adviser, Austrian Radio 1927--38. Visited London 5 times to conduct for BBC (1929, 1932, 1933, 1935, 1936). Music proscribed by Nazis as 'cultural Bolshevism' although Webern was sympathetic to their cause (as is reflected in texts of his cantatas). Worked as publisher's proof-reader during war. Accidentally shot by Amer. sentry, 1945. (See The Death of Anton Webern: a drama in documents by Hans Moldenhauer, NY 1961.) Largely ignored except by the BBC in his life-time, Webern's mus. became a rallying-point for the post-1945 generation of European composers, such as Stockhausen, Boulez, and Maderna (and for some of the older generation, e.g. Stravinsky and Eimert). They were attracted by the way in which his mus., through its sheer concentration, opened up a new and more complete serialism based on the est. of the relationship between a particular note and a particular quality of sound. Even in the earliest works to which he gave an opus no. there is preoccupation with the inter-relationship of symmetrical structures. From 1908 until the late 1920s Webern wrote in a free atonal style. A characteristic of many of the works of this period is their epigrammatic brevity. The 4th of his 6 Pieces for orch. has only 6 bars. Timbre plays an important role, also str. effects such as col legno and sul ponticello. In his vocal mus., the extremes of range are contrasted, with fragmented instr. accs. In this period he wrote his last atonal work, the 5 Canons, Op. 16, and adopted 12-note technique from his Op. 18, 3 Songs. His last group of works, 1928--45, is marked on the one hand by a simplification of the contrapuntal texture and on the other by an increasingly complex use of the note-row. The row is often broken down to 3 or 6 notes, and the resulting structures are related by imitation, inversion, retrograde-inversion, palindromic devices, etc. The Sym. of 1928 has a theme and variations as its 2nd of 2 movements, the theme and each variation being symmetrical. He comp. an important set of Pf. Variations, and 3 cantatas in which the beauty of the vocal writing is a reminder of how much Webern derived from the medieval masters whose work he had studied. Although the post-war avant-garde admired his mus. for its technical innovations, such as serialization of durations and dynamic levels, it should not be forgotten that Webern's place is in the romantic tradition, as his choice of texts implies, and that his homage to classical forms, such as the passacaglia and the canon, is an unwavering feature of his work. He remained, too, a lifelong admirer of Wagner's operas and he was apparently a superb cond. of Schubert, Mahler, and Brahms. Prin. works:

orch: Im Sommerwind, idyll (1904); 3 Studies on a Ground (1908; f.p. 1978); Passacaglia, Op. 1 (1908); 5 Movements, Op. 5 (orig. for str. qt., arr. for str. 1929); 6 Stücke (6 Pieces), Op. 6 (1909--10, rev. for smaller orch. 1928); 5 Stücke, Op. 10 (1911--13); 5 Stücke (1911--

Wedding March. Many court composers have written marches for the weddings of royal and aristocratic brides, but Brit. brides have for long favoured entry into the church to the strains of the bridal ch. from Wagner's Lohengrin and exit to the wedding march which is the 6th no. of Mendelssohn's incidental mus. to Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream. The vogue for the Mendelssohn began in 1847 and received a boost in 1858 when Queen Victoria's daughter, the Princess Royal, used it at Windsor. Its supremacy was dented in 1960 by the Duchess of Kent, who left York Minster to the Toccata from Widor's 5th Sym. for org., her example being widely followed. Various more bizarre mus. selections are occasionally reported.

Weill, Kurt (b Dessau, 1900; d NY, 1950). Ger.-born composer (Amer. citizen from 1943). Studied Berlin Hochschule für Musik 1918--19 (comp. with Humperdinck) and privately 1921--4 with Busoni. Opera coach at Dessau 1918--21 and th. cond. at Lüdenscheid. Founded new sch. of popular opera which attracted wide attention in Ger. and also attracted implacable hostility of Nazi régime when it achieved power. First opera Der Protagonist, Dresden 1926. In 1927 collab. with Bertolt Brecht in radio cantata about Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic and in 'Songspiel' Mahagonny which in 1929 they re-worked into 3-act opera Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny, a satire on Amer. life. His outstanding success came in Berlin in 1928 with updated version of The Beggar's Opera called Die Dreigroschenoper (The Threepenny Opera) containing satirical topical references to Ger. life at the time and evoking by its jazzy and harsh but brilliant scoring the atmosphere of that particular period even for those who did not experience it. Brecht's lyrics and the singing of Lotte Lenya, who became Weill's wife, were significant factors in its success. Driven from Ger. in 1933, Weill went to Paris, then to London, and finally to NY in 1935. In America he wrote several successful Broadway musicals, lacking the pungency of his Ger. operas but of high merit nonetheless. The evocative melody 'September Song' was written for Knickerbocker Holiday. After his death, The Threepenny Opera was given an Eng. lib. by Marc Blitzstein and ran successfully in NY. Weill's music, like Coward's on another level, captures the flavour of America and also successfully fuses jazz with classical elements. Prin. works:

operas, musicals, etc. (librettist in parentheses): Der Protagonist (Kaiser) (1925); Die Dreigroschenoper (Hauptmann, Brecht) (1928); Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny (Aufsteig und Fall der Stadt Mahagonny) (Brecht) (1927--9); Der Zar lässt sich photographiern (The Tsar has his photograph taken) (Kaiser) (1927); Happy End (Hauptmann, Brecht) (1929); Der Jasager (Brecht) (1930); Die Bürgschaft (Neher) (1930--1); Der Silbersee (Kaiser) (1932--3); Marie galante (Deval) Paris (1933); A Kingdom for a Cow, London (1935); Johnny Johnson (Green) NY (1936); Knickerbocker Holiday (Maxwell Anderson) NY (1938); Lady in the Dark (M. Whole Consort. See Consort.

Whole-Note. The semibreve ;Yf.

Whole-Tone. Interval of 2 semitones, e.g. from C up to adjacent D. Whole-tone scale progresses entirely in whole-tones instead of partly in whole-tones and partly in semitones as in major and minor scales and modes. The scale is obtained by taking every other note of the 12-semitone chromatic (or equal-tempered) scale, thus only 2 whole-tonescales are possible, one beginning on C, the other on C# (but since there is no keynote each scale can begin on any note). Used by Debussy, Vaughan Williams, Glinka, and others for chords and short passages.

Wind-Band. In medieval times, bands of roving pipers who later received official recognition as 'town pipers', providing mus. for civic occasions. In modern usage, the term denotes a band of mixed wind instr., often with perc., and is more often called a 'military band' to distinguish it from the 'brass band' in which no woodwind is used. In USA 'wind band' denotes a military band. Haydn's Wind-band Mass (Harmoniemesse), 1802, is named because the wind instr. are prominent in the scoring, not because they are the only instr. used.

Wind Chest. Box-like construction which receives the wind from an org.'s bellows and supplies it to the pipes when the pallets are opened. See Organ.

Outstanding singer of Parsifal, Tristan, Siegfried, and other Wagner roles, though not a Heldentenor of traditional kind. Art. dir. Stuttgart Opera 1972--4. Wind Instruments. Those mus. instrs. in which sound is produced by vibrations of a column of air set in motion by the perf.'s blowing. Two main categories are woodwind (not all made of wood) and brass (not all made of brass), e.g. fl., picc., ob., cl., bn., among former; hn., tpt., tb., tuba, among latter. An org. is not a wind instr. in the sense defined here, since the air is mechanically impelled.

Wind Machine. Device to simulate sound of wind, a barrel-shaped framework being covered with silk or other fabric and rotated by a handle. Friction with wood or cardboard produces sound which can be varied in pitch by pace at which handle is turned. Used by several composers, e.g. by Strauss in Don Quixote and Eine Alpensinfonie and by Vaughan Williams in Sinfonia Antarctica.

Wind Quintet. Composition for five wind instr., or the performers who play it. Usual combination is fl., ob., cl., bn., and hn., but there are several exceptions (Elgar's were written for 2 fl. and no hn.). Among composers of wind quintets are Reicha, Danzi, Schmitt, Francaix, Carter, Milhaud, Nielsen, Fricker, Henze, Gerhard, Stockhausen, and Schoenberg.

Wohltemperierte Klavier, Das (The Well-tempered Klavier). Title given by Bach to his 24 Preludes and Fugues for kbd., Cöthen 1722, in all the major and minor keys, and also applied to 2nd set of 24 composed in Leipzig, 1744, the 2 sets often being known simply as 'the 48'. Bach's object was to demonstrate the advantages of the then new equal temperament. Pubd. 1800--1.

Wolf. (1) Jarring sound which sometimes occurs from bowed str. instrs. when body of instr. resonates to a particular note. (2) Out-of-tune effect on old orgs. (before equal temperament) when playing in certain extreme keys.

Wolf, Hugo (b Windischgraz, 1860; d Vienna, 1903). Austrian composer. Taught rudiments of mus. by his father, a leather-dealer. Entered Vienna Cons. 1875 (fellow-pupil of Mahler). Expelled 1877 (unjustly) and made bare living by teaching pf. 2nd cond. at Salzburg 1881, but gave up after 3 months. Mus. critic. in Vienna 1884--7, making enemies by his fanatical praise of Wagner and dislike of Brahms. From 1888, when he discovered the poetry of Mörike, poured out dozens of songs, incl. the Spanish Songbook, in which the art of the Lied reached one of its most sophisticated and intricately-wrought stages, with the pf. part no longer simple acc. but an integral part of the song. The concentrated characterization of each song is unequalled in Lieder, demanding the utmost artistry from the performers, psychological as well as vocal and instr. For 3 years from 1892 to 1894, Wolf wrote nothing except the orch. arr. of the Italian Serenade, but his fame gradually spread and in Berlin a 'Hugo Wolf Society' was founded. Even Vienna began to capitulate late in 1894. In 1895 he wrote an opera based on The Three-Cornered Hat which he called Der Corregidor. In the spring of 1896, he wrote the 24 songs of the Italian Songbook (Vol. II). In 1897 he began his Michelangelo settings and a 2nd opera, Manuel Venegas. But in the autumn his mind gave way, the outcome of venereal disease, and he was taken to an asylum. Though he seemed to be 'cured' in 1898 he tried to drown himself in Oct. of that year and spent his last years insane in a mental hospital. Prin. works:

songs (mostly with pf. acc., but some with orch.): 12 Lieder aus der Jugendzeit (1877--8); 6 Songs for Woman's Voice; 6 Poems of Scheffel, Mörike, Goethe, and Kerner; 4 Poems of Heine, Shakespeare, and Byron; 6 Poems by Gottfried Keller; 3 Ibsen Songs; 3 Poems by Reinick (1877--87); 53 Mörike-Lieder (1888); 20 Eichendorff-Lieder (1880--88); 51 Goethe-Lieder (1888--99); Spanisches Liederbuch (44 songs) (1889--90); Italienisches Liederbuch, Vol. I (22 songs) (1890--1); Italienisches Liederbuch, Vol. II (24 songs) (1896); 3 Poems by Michelangelo (1897). Among the best-loved Wolf songs (selectively chosen) are: An die Geliebte; Abschied; Anakreons Grab; Begegnung; Denk es, O Seele; Einsame; Elfenlied; Der Feuerreiter; Gebet; Gesang Weylas; Heimweh; Im Frühling; In dem Schatten meiner Locken; Jägerlied; Kennst du das Land?; Lebewohl; Schlafendes Jesuskind; Der Tambour; Verborgenheit; Das verlassene Mägdelein.

Xenakis, Iannis (b Braila, Romania, 1922). Romanian-born Gr. composer (Fr. nat. since 1965). Parents moved back to Gr. in 1932. Began mus. study 1934 with Kundurov. Graduated from Athens Polytechnic 1947 with engineering degree. Went to Paris 1947, studying with Honegger and Milhaud, later with Messiaen 1950--1. Also studied in Switz. with Scherchen. Worked as architect with Le Corbusier 1948--59; designed Philips pavilion for 1958 Brussels Exhibition. Est. School of Mathematical and Automated Music, Paris 1966 and at Indiana Univ. where he also taught after 1967. Although he has used elecs., most of Xenakis's works employ traditional human forces, but embody his concept of stochastic music. This mathematical term, as applied to mus., is a theory of probability: that the results of chance will reach a determinate end. In contrast to the aleatory processes of Cage and others, Xenakis works to retain the composer's domination of his material, and calculates the events in his mus. himself or by means of a computer, e.g. speeds of glissandi, density of sonorities, etc. Xenakis converts the printout from the computer either into a score for conventional instr. or into an elec. comp. In 2 works, Duel and Stratégie, he used his 'theory of games' to introduce an aleatory element into perf., but the rules of the games are strictly pre-determined. Prin. works:

Xylophone (Gr.). Wood sound. (1) Perc. instr. consisting of graduated tuned wooden bars, arr. as on pf. kbd., and played by being struck with small hard or soft hammers held in the hands. Compass from middle C upwards for 4 octaves. Orig. found in Africa and in Javanese orch. in 14th cent. First mentioned in Europe in 1511 as 'wooden clatter', later being known as straw-fiddle (Strohfiedel) because the bars lay on straw. First used in orch. 1874, by Saint-Saëns in Danse macabre, its sound being particularly apt for representation of rattling skeletons. Since then regular feature of perc. section, most 20th-cent. composers making use of it, e.g. Mahler in 6th Sym., Puccini in Madama Butterfly, Strauss in Salome, Walton in Belshazzar's Feast, Stravinsky, Vaughan Williams, etc. (2) Perc. organ stop of 8' pitch, played electrically to duplicate sound of xylophone.

Zarzuela (Sp. from zarza, 'bramble bush'). Idiomatic Sp. form of opera in which mus. is intermingled with spoken dialogue. Name comes from entertainments perf. in 17th cent. at royal palace of La Zarzuela, near Madrid, for Philip IV and court. First known composer of zarzuelas was Juan Hidalgo, c.1644. In 18th cent., popularity of the form was challenged by tonadillas, which were racier and more satirical. Despite brief revival, the zarzuela languished until nat. movement of 19th cent. when desire to create a Sp. nat. opera led to comp. of numerous zarzuelas by such composers as Barbieri, Arieta, Bretón, and Vives. Some were in 3 acts, with serious subjects. In the 20th cent., Alonso and Tórroba have written large-scale zarzuelas, and the form, always flexible, has been expanded to embrace features from operetta and jazz.

Zemlinsky's mus. was greatly admired by Schoenberg and it had a high reputation generally in the early years of the cent. In later years it was almost forgotten, but since c. 1975 has enjoyed a gradual and accelerating climb back to favour. It has a flavour of Wagner--Strauss and remains determinedly tonal. Zemlinsky did not follow Schoenberg into atonality and his mus. offers much to those who enjoy Mahler. The Lyrische Symphonie is avowedly inspired by Das Lied von der Erde and is none the worse for it, while the 2nd str. qt. owes much to early Schoenberg and repays the debt with interest. His Maeterlinck settings are very attractive and the Wilde-based opera Der Zwerg is a masterpiece of concentrated lyric drama. Prin. works:

his first edition of the Oxford Dictionary of Music is an enlargement and revision of the third edition of the Concise Oxford Dictionary of Music which appeared in 1980. I have added 500 new entries, completely rewritten another hundred, and have made some kind of minor amendment or correction to the majority. Work-lists, which were a new feature of the 1980 edition of the Concise, have been brought up to date in nearly all instances, and several of these have been completely rewritten, e.g. those for Chopin, Finzi, and Liszt. A change of style is that asterisks (indicating a separate entry) now occur against compositions only in the work-list, not in the preliminary essay. Dates of works are those of composition wherever possible. Where these have not been discovered, the date given is that of first performance or publication, whichever is the earlier. _The American nomenclature of whole-note, quarter-note, eighth-note, measure, etc. has again been preferred to the English semibreve, crotchet, quaver, bar, etc. Place names generally are given their modern spelling, and I have differentiated between St Petersburg, Petrograd, and Leningrad, and between Christiania and Oslo, etc. Where titles of foreign works are concerned my general policy is to give the chief entry under the name by which the work is best known, with a leaning towards the original-language title. This still leaves a broad middle group of disputable decisions. I have kept to the English titles of Russian works such as Swan Lake, since there is no excuse for Le Lac des cygnes. But The Merry Widow is preferred to Die lustige Witwe. For some opera titles I have given no English-title cross-reference, for example Der Rosenkavalier, La Traviata, Così fan tutte, Il Trovatore, and Der Freischütz. I regard Le Nozze di Figaro as a border-line case and list it under its original title. In the matter of transliteration of Russian names, I have (rather reluctantly) conformed to the growing usage Rakhmaninov and Skryabin, but too many record-labels and books prefer Chaliapin to Shalyapin, Diaghilev to Dyaghilev, and Tchaikovsky to Chaykovsky for any change to be anything but unnecessarily confusing.

_I have followed Dr Percy Scholes's tradition by writing the whole dictionary myself in the hope this lends some continuity and consistency of style. But of course no one man is omniscient and I have been glad to avail myself of the chance to correct errors and omissions in the third edition of the Concise Oxford Dictionary of Music. The immense task of checking and revising has been lightened for me by the invaluable assistance of Joyce Bourne. Many kind people have sent me corrections and suggestions. I thank them all, but some must be mentioned individually. I say a special and wholehearted 'thank you' to Mr David Cummings of Wembley Park, who has also helped at the proof-stage, Professor D. K. McIntire of Indianapolis, and Mr Michael Keyton of Banff, Dallas. Their generous and unstinted help is deeply appreciated. To their names I add those of Mr Alfred H. Sommer of Wellesley, Maine; Mr George Thomas of Alphington, Victoria; Mr Alexander Brebane of Venice, Florida; Mr Paul E. Morrison of Rochester, Michigan; Mr Edward Veitch of the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton; Mr Fritz Spiegl of Liverpool; and Mr Rex Lister of Caterham. _I hope that readers of this new dictionary will continue to let me or the publishers know of defects which they notice. Some of the corrective letters I have received--particularly those from Mr John L. Disch of Seattle--have been so charming and witty that
